The Creation of the World

† tn: The translation assumes that the form translated “beginning” is in the absolute state rather than the construct (“in the beginning of,” or “when God created”). In other words, the clause in v. 1 is a main clause, v. 2 has three clauses that are descriptive and supply background information, and v. 3 begins the narrative sequence proper. The referent of the word “beginning” has to be defined from the context since there is no beginning or ending with God. sn: In the beginning. The verse refers to the beginning of the world as we know it; it affirms that it is entirely the product of the creation of God. But there are two ways that this verse can be interpreted: (1) It may be taken to refer to the original act of creation with the rest of the events on the days of creation completing it. This would mean that the disjunctive clauses of v. 2 break the sequence of the creative work of the first day. (2) It may be taken as a summary statement of what the chapter will record, that is, vv. 3-31 are about God’s creating the world as we know it. If the first view is adopted, then we have a reference here to original creation; if the second view is taken, then Genesis itself does not account for the original creation of matter. To follow this view does not deny that the Bible teaches that God created everything out of nothing (cf. John 1:3) – it simply says that Genesis is not making that affirmation. This second view presupposes the existence of pre-existent matter, when God said, “Let there be light.” The first view includes the description of the primordial state as part of the events of day one. The following narrative strongly favors the second view, for the “heavens/sky” did not exist prior to the second day of creation (see v. 8) and “earth/dry land” did not exist, at least as we know it, prior to the third day of creation (see v. 10). †† sn: God. This frequently used Hebrew name for God (אֱלֹהִים)

The English verb “create” captures well the meaning of the Hebrew term in this context. The verb אָרַץ

‡† tn: Or “the entire universe”; or “the sky and the dry land.” This phrase is often interpreted as a merism, referring to the entire ordered universe, including the heavens and the earth and everything in them. The “heavens and the earth” were completed in seven days (see Gen 2:1) and are characterized by fixed laws (see Jer 33:25). “Heavens” refers specifically to the sky, created on the second day (see v. 8), while “earth” refers specifically to the dry land, created on the third day (see v. 10). Both are distinct from the sea/seas (see v. 10 and Exod 20:11). ‡‡ tn: The disjunctive clause (conjunction + subject + verb) at the beginning of v. 2 gives background information for the following narrative, explaining the state of things when “God said...” (v. 3). Verse one is a title to the chapter, v. 2 provides information about the state of things when God spoke, and v. 3 begins the narrative per se with the typical narrative construction (vav [ו])

That is, what we now call “the earth.” The creation of the earth as we know it is described in vv. 9-10. Prior to this the substance which became the earth (= dry land) lay dormant under the water. ‡‡† tn: Traditional translations have followed a more literal rendering of “waste and void.” The words describe a condition that is without form and empty. What we now know as “the earth” was actually an unfilled mass covered by water and darkness. Later אֶרֶץ

§ sn: Darkness. The Hebrew word simply means “darkness,” but in the Bible it has come to symbolize what opposes God, such as judgment (Exod 10:21), death (Ps 88:13), oppression (Isa 9:1), the wicked (1 Sam 2:9) and in general, sin. In Isa 45:7 it parallels “evil.” It is a fitting cover for the primeval waste, but it prepares the reader for the fact that God is about to reveal himself through his works.

† tn: The Hebrew term רוח

†† tn: The traditional rendering "Spirit of God" is preserved here, as opposed to a translation like "wind from/breath of God" (cf. NRSV) or "mighty wind" (cf. NEB), taking the word "God" to represent the superlative. Elsewhere in the OT the phrase refers consistently to the divine spirit that empowers and energizes individuals (see Gen 41:38; Exod 31:3; 35:31; Num 24:2; 1 Sam 10:10; 11:6; 19:20, 23; Ezek 11:24; 2 Chr 15:1; 24:20). ‡ tn: The Hebrew verb has been translated "hovering" or "moving" (as a bird over her young, see Deut 32:11). The Syriac cognate term means "to brood over; to incubate." How much of that sense might be attached here is hard to say, but the verb does depict the presence of the Spirit of God moving about mysteriously over the waters, presumably preparing for the acts of creation to follow. If one reads "mighty wind" (cf. NEB) then the verse describes how the powerful wind begins to blow in preparation for the creative act described in vv. 9-10. (God also used a wind to drive back the flood waters in Noah's day. See Gen 8:1.) ‡† tn: Heb "face." ‡‡ sn: The water. The text deliberately changes now from the term for the watery deep to the general word for water. The arena is now the life-giving water and not the chaotic abyss-like deep. The change may be merely stylistic, but it may also carry some significance. The deep carries with it the sense of the abyss, chaos, darkness - in short, that which is not good for life. ‡†† tn: The prefixed verb form with the vav ( ו )

‡‡‡ tn: "Let there be" is the short jussive form of the verb "to be"; the following expression "and there was" is the short preterite form of the same verb. As such, יהי יהיה

§ sn: Light. The Hebrew word simply means "light," but it is used often in scripture to convey the ideas of salvation, joy, knowledge, righteousness, and life. In this context one cannot ignore those connotations, for it is the antithesis of the darkness. The first thing God does is correct the darkness; without the light there is only chaos. §† tn: Heb "And God saw the light, that it was good." The verb "saw" in this passage carries the meaning "reflected on," "surveyed," "concluded," "noted." It is a description of reflection of the mind - it is God's opinion. §†† tn: The Hebrew word טוב

§‡ tn: The verb "separate, divide" here explains how God used the light to dispel the darkness. It did not do away with the darkness completely, but made a separation. The light came alongside the darkness, but they are mutually exclusive - a theme that will be developed in the Gospel of John (cf. John 1:5). sn: The idea of separation is critical to this chapter. God separated light from darkness, upper water from lower wa-darkness. 5 God called§†† the light "day" and the darkness§† "night." There was evening, and there was morning, marking the first day. §‡

6 God said, "Let there be an expanse§§† in the midst of the waters and let it separate water§§† from water. 7 So God made the expanse and separated the water under the expanse from the water above it. §§§ It was so. 188 God called the expanse "sky." 19 There was evening, and there was morning, a second day.

9 God said, "Let the water under the sky be gathered to one place<sup>20</sup> and let dry ground appear." 21 It was so. 10 God called the dry ground "land" 22 and the gath-ter, day from night, etc. The verb is important to the Law in general. In Leviticus God separates between clean and unclean, holy and profane ( Lev 10:10, 11:47 and 20:24); in Exodus God separates the Holy Place from the Most Holy Place ( Exod 26:33). There is a preference for the light over the darkness, just as there will be a preference for the upper waters, the rain water which is conducive to life, over the sea water. §†† tn: Heb "he called to," meaning "he named." sn: God called. Seven times in this chapter naming or blessing follows some act of creation. There is clearly a point being made beyond the obvious idea of naming. In the Babylonian creation story Enuma Elish, naming is equal to creating. In the Bible the act of naming, like creating, can be an indication of sovereignty (see 2 Kgs 23:34). In this verse God is sovereign even over the darkness. §† tn: Heb "and the darkness he called night." The words "he called" have not been repeated in the translation for stylistic reasons. §‡ tn: Another option is to translate, "Evening came, and then morning came." This formula closes the six days of creation. It seems to follow the Jewish order of reckoning time: from evening to morning. Day one started with the dark, continued through the creation of light, and ended with nightfall. Another alternative would be to translate, "There was night and then there was day, one day." sn: The first day. The exegetical evidence suggests the word "day" in this chapter refers to a literal twenty-four hour day. It is true that the word can refer to a longer period of time (see Isa 61:2, or the idiom in 2:4, "in the day," that is, "when"). But this chapter uses "day," "night," "morning," "evening," "years," and "seasons." Consistency would require sorting out how all these terms could be used to express ages. Also, when the Hebrew word יום

§§† tn: The Hebrew word refers to an expanse of air pressure between the surface of the sea and the clouds, separating water below from water above. In v. 8 it is called "sky." sn: An expanse. In the poetic texts the writers envision, among other things, something rather strong and shiny, no doubt influencing the traditional translation "firmament" (cf. NRSV "dome"). Job 37:18 refers to the skies poured out like a molten mirror. Dan 12:3 and Ezek 1:22 portray it as shiny. The sky or atmosphere may have seemed like a glass dome. For a detailed study of the Hebrew conception of the heavens and sky, see L. I. J. Stadelmann, The Hebrew Conception of the World (AnBib), 37-60. §§‡ tn: Heb "the waters from the waters." §§§ tn: Heb "the expanse." 18 tn: This statement indicates that it happened the way God designed it, underscoring the connection between word and event. 19 tn: Though the Hebrew word can mean "heaven," it refers in this context to "the sky." 20 sn: Let the water...be gathered to one place. In the beginning the water covered the whole earth; now the water was to be restricted to an area to form the ocean. The picture is one of the dry land as an island with the sea surrounding it. Again the sovereignty of God is revealed. Whereas the pagans saw the sea as a force to be reckoned with, God controls the boundaries of the sea. And in the judgment at the flood he will blur the boundaries so that chaos returns. 21 tn: When the waters are collected to one place, dry land emerges above the surface of the receding water.

ered waters he called "seas." God saw that it was good.

‡ tn: The conjunction "and" is not in the Hebrew text, but has been supplied in the translation to clarify the relationship of the clauses. ‡† sn: Let there be lights. Light itself was created before the light-bearers. The order would not seem strange to the ancient Hebrew mind that did not automatically link daylight with the sun (note that dawn and dusk appear to have light without the sun). ‡‡ tn: The language describing the cosmos, which reflects a prescientific view of the world, must be interpreted as phenomenal, describing what appears to be the case. The sun and the moon are not in the sky (below the clouds), but from the viewpoint of a person standing on the earth, they appear that way. Even today we use similar phenomenological expressions, such as "the sun is rising" or "the stars in the sky." ‡‡† tn: The text has "for signs and for seasons and for days and years." It seems likely from the meanings of the words involved that "signs" is the main idea, followed by two categories, "seasons" and "days and years." This is the simplest explanation, and one that matches vv. 11-13. It could even be rendered "signs for the fixed seasons, that is [explicative vav ( ו )

The text goes to great length to discuss the creation of these lights, suggesting that the subject was very important to the ancients. Since these "lights" were considered deities in the ancient world, the section serves as a strong polemic (see G. Hasel, "The Polemical Nature of the Genesis Cosmology," EvQ 46 [1974]: 81-102). The Book of Genesis is affirming they are created entities, not deities. To underscore this the text does not even give them names. If used here, the usual names for the sun and moon [Shemesh and Yarih, respectively] might have carried pagan connotations, so they are simply described as greater and lesser lights. Moreover, they serve in the capacity that God gives them, which would not be the normal function the day and the lesser light to rule over the night. He made the stars also. <sup>§17</sup> God placed the lights§† in the expanse of the sky to shine on the earth, <sup>18</sup> to preside over the day and the night, and to separate the light from the darkness. §†† God saw that it was good. <sup>19</sup> There was evening, and there was morning, a fourth day.

the pagans ascribed to them. They merely divide, govern, and give light in God's creation. § tn: Heb "and the stars." Now the term "stars" is added as a third object of the verb "made." Perhaps the language is phenomenological, meaning that the stars appeared in the sky from this time forward. §† tn: Heb "them"; the referent (the lights mentioned in the preceding verses) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §†† sn: In days one to three there is a naming by God; in days five and six there is a blessing by God. But on day four there is neither. It could be a mere stylistic variation. But it could also be a deliberate design to avoid naming "sun" and "moon" or promoting them beyond what they are, things that God made to serve in his creation. §‡ tn: The Hebrew text again uses a cognate construction ("swarm with swarms") to emphasize the abundant fertility. The idea of the verb is one of swift movement back and forth, literally swarming. This verb is used in Exod 1:7 to describe the rapid growth of the Israelite population in bondage. §‡† tn: The Hebrew text uses the Polel form of the verb instead of the simple Qal; it stresses a swarming flight again to underscore the abundant fruitfulness. §† tn: For the first time in the narrative proper the verb "create" ( בָּרָא )

תְּנִינִים

§‡ tn: While the translation "blessed" has been retained here for the sake of simplicity, it would be most helpful to paraphrase it as "God endowed them with fruitfulness" or something similar, for here it refers to God's giving the animals the capacity to reproduce. The expression "blessed" needs clarification in its different contexts, for it is one of the unifying themes of the Book of Genesis. The divine blessing occurs after works of creation and is intended to continue that work – the word of blessing guarantees success. The word means "to enrich; to endow," and the most visible evidence of that enrichment is productivity or fruitfulness. See C. Westermann, Blessing in the Bible and the Life of the Church (OBT). §§† sn: The instruction God gives to creation is properly a fuller expression of the statement just made ("God blessed them"), that he enriched them with the ability to reproduce. It is not saying that these were rational creatures who heard and obeyed the word; rather, it stresses that fruitfulness in the animal world is a result of the divine decree and not of some pagan cultic ritual for fruitfulness. The repeated emphasis of "be fruitful – multiply – fill" adds to this abundance God has given to life. The meaning is underscored by the similar sounds:

בָּרָא                      בָּרָא                      בָּרָא                      בָּרָא

24 God said, "Let the land produce living creatures according to their kinds : cattle, creeping things, and wild animals, each according to its kind." † It was so. 25 God made the wild animals according to their kinds, the cattle according to their kinds, and all the creatures that creep along the ground according to their kinds. God saw that it was good.

26 Then God said, "Let us make†† humankind‡ in our image, after our likeness, ‡† so they may rule‡‡ over the fish of the sea and the birds of

† tn: There are three groups of land animals here: the cattle or livestock (mostly domesticated), things that creep or move close to the ground (such as reptiles or rodents), and the wild animals (all animals of the field). The three terms are general classifications without specific details. †† sn: The plural form of the verb has been the subject of much discussion through the years, and not surprisingly several suggestions have been put forward. Many Christian theologians interpret it as an early hint of plurality within the God-head, but this view imposes later trinitarian concepts on the ancient text. Some have suggested the plural verb indicates majesty, but the plural of majesty is not used with verbs. C. Westermann ( Genesis, 1:145) argues for a plural of "deliberation" here, but his proposed examples of this use ( 2 Sam 24:14; Isa 6:8) do not actually support his theory. In 2 Sam 24:14 David uses the plural as representative of all Israel, and in Isa 6:8 the LORD

§† tn: The third person suffix on the particle ׀ַךְ
 §†† sn: The distinction of "humankind" as "male" and "female" is another point of separation in God's creation. There is no possibility that the verse is teaching that humans were first androgynous (having both male and female physical characteristics) and afterward were separated. The mention of male and female prepares for the blessing to follow. §‡ tn: As in v. 22 the verb "bless" here means "to endow with the capacity to reproduce and be fruitful," as the following context indicates. As in v. 22, the statement directly precedes the command "be fruitful and multiply." The verb carries this same nuance in Gen 17:16 (where God's blessing of Sarai imparts to her the capacity to bear a child); Gen 48:16 (where God's blessing of Joseph's sons is closely associated with their having numerous descendants); and Deut 7:13 (where God's blessing is associated with fertility in general, including numerous descendants). See also Gen 49:25 (where Jacob uses the noun derivative in referring to "blessings of the breast and womb," an obvious reference to fertility) and Gen 27:27 (where the verb is used of a field to which God has given the capacity to produce vegetation). §‡† tn: Heb "and God said." For stylistic reasons "God" has not been repeated here in the translation. §† tn: Elsewhere the Hebrew verb translated "subdue" means "to enslave" ( 2 Chr 28:10; Neh 5:5; Jer 34:11, 16), "to conquer," ( Num 32:22, 29; Josh 18:1; 2 Sam 8:11; 1 Chr 22:18; Zech 9:13; and probably Mic 7:19), and "to assault sexually" ( Esth 7:8). None of these nuances adequately meets the demands of this context, for humankind is not viewed as having an adversarial relationship with the world. The general meaning of the verb appears to be "to bring under one's control for one's advantage." In Gen 1:28 one might paraphrase it as follows: "harness its potential and use its resources for your benefit." In an ancient Israelite context this would suggest cultivating its fields, mining its mineral riches, using its trees for construction, and domesticating its animals. §‡ sn: The several imperatives addressed to both males and females together (plural imperative forms) actually form two commands: reproduce and rule. God's word is not merely a form of blessing, but is now addressed to them personally; this is a distinct emphasis with the creation of human beings. But with the blessing comes the ability to be fruitful and to rule. In procreation they will share in the divine work of creating human life and passing on the divine image (see 5:1-3); in ruling they will serve as God's vice-regents on earth. They together, the human race collectively, have the responsibility of seeing to the welfare of that which is put under them and the privilege of using it for their benefit. §§† tn: The text uses הָבָה

The phrase describes the kinds of trees that are visually pleasing and yield fruit that is desirable to the appetite. §§† tn: The verse ends with a disjunctive clause providing a parenthetical bit of information about the existence of two special trees in the garden. §§§ tn: In light of Gen 3:22, the construction "tree of life" should be interpreted to mean a tree that produces life-giving fruit (objective genitive) rather than a living tree (attributive genitive). See E. O. James, The Tree of Life (SHR); and R. Marcus, "The Tree of Life in Proverbs," JBL 62 (1943): 117-20. 18 tn: The expression "tree of the knowledge of good and evil" must be interpreted to mean that the tree would produce fruit which, when eaten, gives special knowledge of "good and evil." Scholars debate what this phrase means here. For a survey of opinions, see G. J. Wenham, Genesis (WBC), 1:62-64. One view is that "good" refers to that which enhances, promotes, and produces life, while "evil" refers to anything that hinders, interrupts or destroys life. So eating from this tree would change human nature - people would be able to alter life for better (in their thinking) or for worse. See D. J. A. Clines, "The Tree of Knowledge and the Law of Yahweh," VT 24 (1974): 8-14; and I. Engnell, "Knowledge' and 'Life' in the Creation Story," Wisdom in Israel and in the Ancient Near East [VTSup], 103-19. Another view understands the "knowledge of good and evil" as the capacity to discern between moral good and evil. The following context suggests the tree's fruit gives one wisdom (see the phrase "capable of making one wise" in 3:6, as well as the note there on the word "wise"), which certainly includes the capacity to discern between good and evil. Such wisdom is characteristic of divine beings, as the serpent's promise implies ( 3:5) and as 3:22 makes clear. (Note, however, that this capacity does not include the ability to do what is right.) God prohibits man from eating of the tree. The prohibition becomes a test to see if man will be satisfied with his role and place, or if he will try to ascend to the divine level. There will be a time for man to possess moral discernment/wisdom, as God reveals and imparts it to him, but it is not something to be grasped at in an effort to become "a god." In fact, the command to be obedient was the first lesson in moral discernment/wisdom. God was essentially saying: "Here is lesson one - respect my authority and commands. Disobey me and you will die." When man disobeys, he decides he does not want to acquire moral wisdom God's way, but instead tries to rise immediately to the divine level. Once man has acquired such divine wisdom by eating the tree's fruit ( 3:22), he must be banned from the garden so that he will not be able to achieve his goal of being godlike and thus live forever, a divine characteristic ( 3:24). Ironically, man now has the capacity to discern good from evil ( 3:22), but he is morally corrupted and rebellious and will not consistently choose what is right. 19 tn: The disjunctive clause (note the construction conjunction + subject + predicate) introduces an entire paragraph about the richness of the region in the east. 20 tn: The Hebrew active participle may be translated here as indicating past durative action, "was flowing," or as a present durative, "flows." Since this river was the source of the rivers mentioned in vv. 11-14, which appear to describe a situation contemporary with the narrator, it is preferable to translate the participle in v. 10 with the present tense. This suggests that Eden and its orchard still existed in the narrator's time. According to ancient Jewish tradition, Enoch was taken to the Garden of Eden, where his presence insulated the garden from the destructive waters of Noah's flood. See Jub. 4:23-24. <sup>21</sup> sn: Eden is portrayed here as a source of life-giving rivers (that is, perennial streams). This is no surprise because its orchard is where the tree of life is located. Eden is a source of life, but tragically its orchard is no longer accessible to humankind. The river flowing out of Eden is a tantalizing reminder of this. God continues to provide life-giving water to sustain physical existence on the earth, but immortality has been lost. <sup>22</sup> tn: The imperfect verb form has the same nuance as the preceding participle. §§§ tn: Or "in the very day, as soon as." If one understands the expression to have this more precise meaning, then the following narrative presents a problem, for the man does not die physically as soon as he eats from the tree. In this case one may argue that spiritual death is in view. If physical death is in view here, there are two options to explain the following narrative: (1) The following phrase "You will surely die" concerns mortality which ultimately results in death (a natural paraphrase would be, "You will become mortal"), or (2) God mercifully gave man a reprieve, allowing him to live longer than he deserved. <sup>18</sup> tn: Heb "dying you will die." The imperfect verb form here has the nuance of the specific future because it is introduced with the temporal clause, "when you eat...you will die." That certainty is underscored with the infinitive absolute, "you will surely die." sn: The Hebrew text ("dying you will die") does not refer to two aspects of death ("dying spiritually, you will then die physically"). The construction simply emphasizes the certainty of death, however it is defined. Death is essentially separation. To die physically means separation from the land of the living, but not extinction. To die spiritually means to be separated from God. Both occur with sin, although the physical alienation is more gradual than instant, and the spiritual is immediate, although the effects of it continue the separation. <sup>19</sup> tn: Heb "The being of man by himself is not good." The meaning of "good" must be defined contextually. Within the context of creation, in which God instructs humankind to be fruitful and multiply, the man alone cannot comply. Being alone prevents the man from fulfilling the design of creation and therefore is not good. <sup>20</sup> tn: Traditionally "helper." In the sequence the verb may be subordinated to the following verb to indicate a temporal clause ("while..."). ‡‡ tn: Traditionally translated "rib," the Hebrew word actually means "side." The text is not necessarily saying that the man named his wife – that comes after the fall ( Gen 3:20). sn: Some argue that naming implies the man's authority or ownership over the woman here. Naming can indicate ownership or authority if one is calling someone or something by one's name and/or calling a name over someone or something (see 2 Sam 12:28; 2 Chr 7:14; Isa 4:1; Jer 7:14; 15:16), especially if one is conquering and renaming a site. In the Bible nakedness conveys different things. In this context it signifies either innocence or integrity, depending on how those terms are defined. There is no fear of exploitation, no sense of vulnerability. But after the entrance of sin into the race, nakedness takes on a negative sense. It is then usually connected with the sense of vulnerability, shame, exploitation, and exposure (such as the idea of "uncovering nakedness" either in sexual exploitation or in captivity in war).

† tn: The chapter begins with a disjunctive clause (conjunction + subject + predicate) that introduces a new character and a new scene in the story. †† sn: Many theologians identify or associate the serpent with Satan. In this view Satan comes in the disguise of a serpent or speaks through a serpent. This explains the serpent's capacity to speak. While later passages in the Bible may indicate there was a satanic presence behind the serpent (see, for example, Rev 12:9), the immediate context pictures the serpent as simply one of the animals of the field created by God (see vv. 1, 14). An ancient Jewish interpretation explains the reference to the serpent in a literal manner, attributing the capacity to speak to all the animals in the orchard. This text (Jub. 3:28) states, "On that day [the day the man and woman were expelled from the orchard] the mouth of all the beasts and cattle and birds and whatever walked or moved was stopped from speaking because all of them used to speak to one another with one speech and one language [presumed to be Hebrew, see 12:26]." Josephus, Ant. 1.1.4 (1.41) attributes the serpent's actions to jealousy. He writes that "the serpent, living in the company of Adam and his wife, grew jealous of the blessings which he supposed were destined for them if they obeyed God's behests, and, believing that disobedience would bring trouble on them, he maliciously persuaded the woman to taste of the tree of wisdom." ‡ tn: The Hebrew word עָרֹמִים

No one can become like God by disobeying God. It is that simple. The Book of Proverbs stresses that obtaining wisdom begins with the fear of God that is evidenced through obedience to his word. Here, in seeking wisdom, Eve disobeys God and ends up afraid of God. † tn: The pronoun “it” is not in the Hebrew text, but is supplied (here and also after “ate” at the end of this verse) for stylistic reasons. sn: She took...and ate it. ‡†† sn: The Hebrew word order (“Did you from the tree – which I commanded you not to eat from it – eat?”) is arranged to emphasize that the man’s and the woman’s eating of the fruit was an act of disobedience. The relative clause inserted immediately after the reference to the tree brings out this point very well. ‡† tn: The Hebrew construction in this sentence uses an independent nominative absolute (formerly known as a casus pendens). “The woman” is the independent nominative absolute; it is picked up by the formal subject, the pronoun “she” written with the verb (“she gave”). The point of the construction is to throw the emphasis on “the woman.” But what makes this so striking is that a relative clause has been inserted to explain what is meant by the reference to the woman: “whom you gave me.” Ultimately, the man is blaming God for giving him the woman who (from the man’s viewpoint) caused him to sin. ‡‡ tn: The words “some fruit” here and the pronoun “it” at the end of the sentence are not in the Hebrew text, but are supplied for stylistic reasons. ‡‡† tn: The use of the demonstrative pronoun is enclitic, serving as an undeclined particle for emphasis. The idea of being brought low, of “eating dust” as it were, is a symbol of humiliation.

†† sn: The Hebrew word translated "offspring" is a collective singular. The text anticipates the ongoing struggle between human beings (the woman's offspring) and deadly poisonous snakes (the serpent's offspring). An ancient Jewish interpretation of the passage states: "He made the serpent, cause of the deceit, press the earth with belly and flank, having bitterly driven him out. He aroused a dire enmity between them. The one guards his head to save it, the other his heel, for death is at hand in the proximity of men and malignant poisonous snakes." See Sib. Or. 1:59-64. For a similar interpretation see Josephus, Ant. 1.1.4 (1.50-51). ‡ tn: Heb "he will attack [or "bruise"] you [on] the head." The singular pronoun and verb agree grammatically with the collective singular noun "offspring." For other examples of singular verb and pronominal forms being used with the collective singular "offspring," see Gen 16:10; 22:17; 24:60. The word "head" is an adverbial accusative, locating the blow. A crushing blow to the head would be potentially fatal. ‡† tn: Or "but you will..."; or "as they attack your head, you will attack their heel." The disjunctive clause (conjunction + subject + verb) is understood as contrastive. Both clauses place the subject before the verb, a construction that is sometimes used to indicate synchronic action (see Judg 15:14). ‡†† sn: You will attack her offspring's heel. Though the conflict will actually involve the serpent's offspring (snakes) and the woman's offspring (human beings), v. 15b for rhetorical effect depicts the conflict as being between the serpent and the woman's offspring, as if the serpent will outlive the woman. The statement is personalized for the sake of the addressee (the serpent) and reflects the ancient Semitic concept of corporate solidarity, which emphasizes the close relationship between a progenitor and his offspring. Note Gen 28:14, where the LORD

Heb "you will attack him [on] the heel." The verb (translated "attack") is repeated here, a fact that is obscured by some translations (e.g., NIV "crush...strike"). The singular pronoun agrees grammatically with the collective singular noun "offspring." For other examples of singular verb and pronominal forms being used with the collective singular "offspring," see Gen 16:10; 22:17; 24:60. The word "heel" is an adverbial accusative, locating the blow. A bite on the heel from a poisonous serpent is potentially fatal. sn: The etiological nature of v. 15 is apparent, though its relevance for modern western man is perhaps lost because we rarely come face to face with poisonous snakes. Ancient Israelites, who often encountered snakes in their daily activities (see, for example, Eccl 10:8; Amos 5:19), would find the statement quite meaningful as an explanation for the hostility between snakes and humans. (In the broader ancient Near Eastern context, compare the Mesopotamian serpent omens. See H. W. F. Saggs, The Greatness That Was Babylon, 309.) This ongoing struggle, when interpreted in light of v. 15, is a tangible reminder of the conflict introduced into the world by the first humans' rebellion against God. Many Christian theologians (going back to Irenaeus) understand v. 15 as the so-called protevangelium, supposedly prophesying Christ's victory over Satan (see W. Witfall, "Genesis 3:15 – a Protevangelium?" CBQ 36 [1974]: 361-65; and R. A. Martin, "The Earliest Messianic Interpretation of Genesis 3:15," JBL 84 [1965]: 425-27). In this allegorical approach, the woman's offspring is initially Cain, then the whole human race, and ultimately Jesus Christ, the offspring (Heb "seed") of the woman (see Gal 4:4). The offspring of

"I will greatly increase‡†† your labor pains; § with pain you will give birth to children.
You will want to control your husband, §† but he will dominate§†† you."

the serpent includes the evil powers and demons of the spirit world, as well as those humans who are in the kingdom of darkness (see John 8:44). According to this view, the passage gives the first hint of the gospel. Satan delivers a crippling blow to the Seed of the woman (Jesus), who in turn delivers a fatal blow to the Serpent (first defeating him through the death and resurrection [1 Cor 15:55-57] and then destroying him in the judgment [Rev 12:7-9; 20:7-10]). However, the grammatical structure of Gen 3:15b does not suggest this view. The repetition of the verb "attack," as well as the word order, suggests mutual hostility is being depicted, not the defeat of the serpent. If the serpent's defeat were being portrayed, it is odd that the alleged description of his death comes first in the sentence. If he has already been crushed by the woman's "Seed," how can he bruise his heel? To sustain the allegorical view, v. 15b must be translated in one of the following ways: "he will crush your head, even though you attack his heel" (in which case the second clause is concessive) or "he will crush your head as you attack his heel" (the clauses, both of which place the subject before the verb, may indicate synchronic action). ‡†† tn: The imperfect verb form is emphasized and intensified by the infinitive absolute from the same verb. § tn: Heb "your pain and your conception," suggesting to some interpreters that having a lot of children was a result of the judgment (probably to make up for the loss through death). But the next clause shows that the pain is associated with conception and childbirth. The two words form a hendiadys (where two words are joined to express one idea, like "good and angry" in English), the second explaining the first. "Conception," if the correct meaning of the noun, must be figurative here since there is no pain in conception; it is a synecdoche, representing the entire process of childbirth and child rearing from the very start. † tn:
 Since there is no article on the word, the personal name is used, rather than the generic “the man” (cf. NRSV). †† tn: The idiom “listen to the voice of” often means “obey.” The man “obeyed” his wife and in the process disobeyed God. ‡ sn: For the ground to be cursed means that it will no longer yield its bounty as the blessing from God had promised. The whole creation, Paul writes in Rom 8:22, is still groaning under this curse, waiting for the day of redemption. ‡† tn: The Hebrew phrase בְּעִבּוּרָהּ

‡‡ sn: In painful toil you will eat. The theme of eating is prominent throughout Gen 3. The prohibition was against eating from the tree of knowledge. The sin was in eating. The interrogation concerned the eating from the tree of knowledge. The serpent is condemned to eat the dust of the ground. The curse focuses on eating in a “measure for measure” justice. Because the man and the woman sinned by eating the forbidden fruit, God will forbid the ground to cooperate, and so it will be through painful toil that they will eat. ‡†† tn: The Hebrew term עֲשָׂב

‡‡‡ tn: The expression “the sweat of your brow” is a metonymy, the sweat being the result of painful toil in the fields.
 § sn: Until you return to the ground. The theme of humankind’s mortality is critical here in view of the temptation to be like God.
 Man will labor painfully to provide food, obviously not enjoying the bounty that creation promised. In place of the abundance of the orchard’s fruit trees, thorns and thistles will grow. Man will have to work the soil so that it will produce the grain to make bread. This will continue until he returns to the soil from which he was taken (recalling the creation in 2:7 with the wordplay on Adam and ground). In spite of the dreams of immortality and divinity, man is but dust ( 2:7), and will return to dust. So much for his pride. §† sn: In general, the themes of the curse oracles are important in the NT teaching that Jesus became the cursed one hanging on the tree.
 In his suffering and death, all the motifs are drawn together: the tree, the sweat, the thorns, and the dust of death (see Ps 22:15). Jesus experienced it all, to have victory over it through the resurrection. §†† tn: Or “Adam”; however, the Hebrew term has the defi-hand and take also from the tree of life and eat, and live forever.” 23 So the LORD God expelled him<sup>19</sup> from the orchard in Eden to cultivate the ground from which he had been taken. 24 When he drove<sup>20</sup> the man

 The cherubim in the Bible seem to be a class of angels that are com-they guard the way to the tree of life. The curtain in the tabernacle was to be embroidered with cherubim as well, symbolically guarding the way to God. (See in addition A. S. Kapelrud, “The Gates of Hell and the Guardian Angels of Paradise,” JAOS 70 [1950]: 151-56;

 Heb “the flame of the sword that turns round and round.” The noun “flame” is qualified by the genitive of specification, “the sword,” which in turn is modified by the attributive participle “whirling.” The Hitpael of the verb “turn” has an iterative function here, indicating repeated action. The form is used in Job 37:12 of swirling clouds and in Judg 7:13 of a tumbling roll of bread. Verse 24 depicts the sword as moving from side to side to prevent anyone from passing or as whirling around, ready to cut to shreds anyone who tries to pass.

The disjunctive clause (conjunction + subject + verb) stresses the contrast between Cain's offering and Abel's. §‡† tn: Two prepositional phrases are used to qualify the kind of sacrifice that Abel brought: "from the firstborn" and "from the fattest of them." These also could be interpreted as a hendiadys: "from the fattest of the firstborn of the flock." Another option is to understand the second prepositional phrase as referring to the fat portions of the sacrificial sheep. In this case one may translate, "some of the firstborn of his flock, even some of their fat portions" (cf. NEB, NIV, NRSV). sn: Here are two types of worshipers – one (Cain) merely discharges a duty at the proper time, while the other (Abel) goes out of his way to please God with the first and the best. §† tn: The Hebrew verb הִפְעִיף

§‡ sn: The Letter to the Hebrews explains the difference between the brothers as one of faith – Abel by faith offered a better sacrifice. Here the desire is that which sin has for Cain, a desire to control for the sake of evil, but Cain must have mastery over it. The imperfect is understood as having an obligatory sense. Another option is to understand it as expressing potential (“you can have [or “are capable of having”] mastery over it.”). It will be a struggle, but sin can be defeated by righteousness. In addition to this connection to Gen 3, other linguistic and thematic links between chaps. 3 and 4 are discussed by A. J. Hauser, “Linguistic and Thematic Links Between Genesis 4:1-6 and Genesis 2-3,” JETS 23 (1980): 297-306. ‡† tc: The MT has simply “and Cain said to Abel his brother,” omitting Cain’s words to Abel. It is possible that the elliptical text is original. Perhaps the author uses the technique of aposiopesis, “a sudden silence” to create tension. In the midst of the story the narrator suddenly rushes ahead to what happened in the field. It is more likely that the ancient versions (Samaritan Penta-teuch, LXX, Vulgate, and Syriac), which include Cain’s words, “Let’s go out to the field,” preserve the original reading here. “Noah was a godly man, blameless in his generations.” The singular “generation” can refer to one’s contemporaries, i.e., those living at a particular point in time. The plural “generations” can refer to successive generations in the past or the future. Here, where it is qualified by “his” (i.e., Noah’s), it refers to Noah’s contemporaries, comprised of the preceding generation (his father’s generation), those of Noah’s generation, and the next generation (those the same age as his children). In other words, “his generations” means the generations contemporary with him. See BDB 190 s.v. דור †† tn: Heb “Noah.” The proper name has been replaced with the pronoun in the translation for stylistic reasons. ‡ tn: The construction translated “walked with” is used in Gen 5:22, 24 (see the note on this phrase in 5:22) and in 1 Sam 25:15, where it refers to David’s and Nabal’s men “rubbing shoulders” in the fields. Based on the use in 1 Sam 25:15, the expression seems to mean “live in close proximity to,” which may, by metonymy, mean “maintain cordial relations with.” ‡† tn: Heb “fathered.” ‡†† tn: Apart from Gen 6:11-12, the Niphal form of this verb occurs in Exod 8:20 HT ( 8:24 ET), where it describes the effect of the swarms of flies on the land of Egypt; Jer 13:7 and 18:4, where it is used of a “ruined” belt and “marred” clay pot, respectively; and Ezek 20:44, where it describes Judah’s morally “corrupt” actions. The sense “morally corrupt” fits well in Gen 6:11 because of the parallelism (note “the earth was filled with violence”). In this case “earth” would stand by metonymy for its sinful inhabitants. However, the translation “ruined” works just as well, if not better. In this case humankind’s sin is viewed as having an adverse effect upon the earth. Note that vv. 12b-13 make a distinction between the earth and the living creatures who live on it. ‡††† tn: Heb “before.” ‡†††† tn: The Hebrew word translated “violence” refers elsewhere to a broad range of crimes, including unjust treatment ( Gen 16:5; Amos 3:10), injurious legal testimony ( Deut 19:16), deadly assault ( Gen 49:5), murder ( Judg 9:24), and rape ( Jer 13:22). § tn: Or “God saw how corrupt the earth was.” §† tn: The repetition in the text (see v. 11) emphasizes the point. §†† tn: Heb “flesh.” Since moral corruption is in view here, most modern western interpreters understand the referent to be humankind. However, the phrase “all flesh” is used consistently of humankind and the animals in Gen 6-9 ( 6:17, 19; 7:15-16, 21; 8:17; 9:11, 15-17), suggesting that the author intends to picture all living creatures, humankind and animals, as guilty of moral failure. This would explain why the animals, not just humankind, are victims of the ensuing divine judgment. The OT sometimes views animals as morally culpable ( Gen 9:5; Exod 21:28-29; Jonah 3:7-8). The OT also teaches that a person’s sin can contaminate others (people and animals) in the sinful person’s sphere (see the story of Achan, especially Josh 7:10). So the animals could be viewed here as morally contaminated because of their association with sinful humankind. §‡ tn: Heb “had corrupted its way.” The third masculine singular pronominal suffix on “way” refers to the collective “all flesh.” The construction “corrupt one’s way” occurs only here (though Ezek 16:47 uses the Hiphil in an intransitive sense with the preposition בַּ

Make rooms in the ark, and cover<sup>‡†††</sup> it with pitch inside and out. <sup>15</sup> This is how you should make it: The ark is to be 450 feet long, 75 feet wide, and 45 feet high. <sup>1816</sup> Make a roof for the ark and finish it, leaving 18 inches<sup>19</sup> from the top. <sup>20</sup> Put a door in the side of the ark, and make lower, middle, and upper decks. <sup>17</sup> I am about to bring<sup>21</sup> floodwaters<sup>22</sup> on the earth to destroy<sup>23</sup> from under the sky all the living creatures that have the breath of life in them.<sup>24</sup> Everything that is on the earth will die, <sup>18</sup>

Heb “the end of all flesh is coming [or “has come”] before me.” (The verb form is either a perfect or a participle.) The phrase “end of all flesh” occurs only here. The term “end” refers here to the end of “life,” as v. 3 and the following context (which describes how God destroys all flesh) make clear. The statement “the end has come” occurs in Ezek 7:2, 6, where it is used of divine judgment. The phrase “come before” occurs in Exod 28:30, 35; 34:34; Lev 15:14; Num 27:17; 1 Sam 18:13, 16; 2 Sam 19:8; 20:8; 1 Kgs 1:23, 28, 32; Ezek 46:9; Pss 79:11 (groans come before God); 88:3 (a prayer comes before God); 100:2; 119:170 (prayer comes before God); Lam 1:22 (evil doing comes before God); Esth 1:19; 8:1; 9:25; 1 Chr 16:29. The expression often means “have an audience with” or “appear before.” But when used metaphorically, it can mean “get the attention of” or “prompt a response.” This is probably the sense in Gen 6:13. The necessity of ending the life of all flesh on earth is an issue that has gotten the attention of God. The term “end” may even be a metonymy for that which has prompted it – violence (see the following clause). §‡ tn: The participle, especially after הִנֵּה enteenth day of the seventh month, the ark came to rest on one of the mountains of Ararat. <sup>205</sup> The waters kept on receding<sup>21</sup> until the tenth month. On the first day of the tenth month, the tops of the mountains became visible. <sup>22</sup>

<sup>18</sup> The sons of Noah who came out of the ark were Shem, Ham, and Japheth. (Now Ham was the father of Canaan.) <sup>2619</sup> These were the sons of Noah, and from them the whole earth was populated. <sup>27</sup>

<sup>31</sup> sn: For the second time (see v. 18) the text informs the reader of the relationship between Ham and Canaan. Genesis 10 will explain that Canaan was the ancestor of the Canaanite tribes living in the promised land. <sup>32</sup> tn: Some would translate “had sexual relations with,” arguing that Ham committed a homosexual act with his drunken father for which he was cursed. However, the expression “see nakedness” usually refers to observation of another’s nakedness, not a sexual act (see Gen 42:9, 12 where “nakedness” is used metaphorically to convey the idea of “weakness” or “vulnerability”; Deut 23:14 where “nakedness” refers to excrement; Isa 47:3; Ezek 16:37; Lam 1:8). The following verse (v. 23) clearly indicates that visual observation, not a homosexual act, is in view here. In Lev 20:17 the expression “see nakedness” does appear to be a euphemism for sexual intercourse, but the context there, unlike that of Gen 9:22, clearly indicates that in that passage sexual contact is in view. The expression “see nakedness” does not in itself suggest a sexual connotation. Some relate Gen 9:22 to Lev 18:6-11, 15-19, where the expression “uncover [another’s] nakedness” (the Piel form of <sup>אני</sup>

Then they walked in backwards and covered up their father's nakedness. Their faces were turned†† the other way so they did not see their father's nakedness.

The lowest of slaves§
he will be to his brothers."

<sup>26</sup> He also said,
" Worthy of praise is§† the LORD , the God of Shem !

10 This is the account§† of Noah's sons Shem, Ham, and Japheth. Sons§‡ were born§§† to them after the flood.

But the table may suggest migration rather than lineage, and the Philistines, like the Israelites, came through the Nile Delta region of Egypt. For further discussion of the origin and migration of the Philistines, see D. M. The Record of Terah

Terah became the father of Abram, Nahor, and Haran. And Haran became the father of Lot. <sup>28</sup> Haran died in the land of his birth, in Ur of the Chaldeans, †† while his father Terah was still alive. †††<sup>29</sup> And Abram and Nahor took wives for themselves. The name of Abram's wife was Sarai, ††† and the name of Nahor's wife was Milcah; § she was the daughter of Haran, the father of both Milcah and Iscah. <sup>30</sup> But Sarai was barren; she had no children.

12 Now the LORD said§† to Abram, §††
 "Go out§† from your country, your relatives, and your father's household to the land that I will show you. §†

†† sn: The phrase of the Chaldeans is a later editorial clarification for the readers, designating the location of Ur. From all evidence there would have been no Chaldeans in existence at this early date; they are known in the time of the neo-Babylonian empire in the first millennium B.C. ††† tn: Heb "upon the face of Terah his father." †††† sn: The name Sarai (a variant spelling of "Sarah") means "princess" (or "lady"). Sharratu was the name of the wife of the moon god Sin. The original name may reflect the culture out of which the patriarch was called, for the family did worship other gods in Mesopotamia. § sn: The name Milcah means "Queen." But more to the point here is the fact that Malkatu was a title for Ishtar, the daughter of the moon god. If the women were named after such titles (and there is no evidence that this was the motivation for naming the girls "Princess" or "Queen"), that would not necessarily imply anything about the faith of the two women themselves. §† tn: Heb "And the days of Terah were." §†† tn: Heb "Terah"; the pronoun has been substituted for the proper name in the translation for stylistic reasons. §† sn: The LORD

The third verb form is clearly cohortative. †† sn: I will bless you. The blessing of creation is now carried forward to the patriarch. In the garden God blessed Adam and Eve; in that blessing he gave them (1) a fruitful place, (2) endowed them with fertility to multiply, and (3) made them rulers over creation. The Hitpael of "bless" is used with a reflexive/reciprocal sense in Deut 29:18; Ps 72:17; Isa 65:16; Jer 4:2. Gen 12:2 predicts that Abram will be held up as a paradigm of divine blessing and that people will use his name in their blessing formulae. ### The Promised Blessing Jeopardized

† sn: Abram went down to Egypt. The Abrahamic narrative foreshadows some of the events in the life of the nation of Israel. This sojourn in Egypt is typological of Israel’s bondage there. In both stories there is a famine that forces the family to Egypt, death is a danger to the males while the females are preserved alive, great plagues bring about their departure, there is a summons to stand before Pharaoh, and there is a return to the land of Canaan with great wealth. †† tn: The Hebrew verb גור

§ tn: Heb “say.” §† sn: Tell them you are my sister. Abram’s motives may not be as selfish as they appear. He is aware of the danger to the family. His method of dealing with it is deception with a half truth, for Sarai really was his sister – but the Egyptians would not know that. Abram presumably thought that there would be negotiations for a marriage by anyone interested (as Laban does later for his sister Rebekah), giving him time to react. But the plan backfires because Pharaoh does not take the time to negotiate. There is a good deal of literature on the wife-sister issue. See (among others) E. A. Speiser, “The Wife-Sister Motif in the Patriarchal Narratives,” Oriental and Biblical Studies, 62-81; C. J. Mullo-Weir, “The Alleged Hurrian Wife-Sister Motif in Genesis,” GOT 22 (1967-1970): 14-25. §†† tn: The Hebrew verb translated “go well” can encompass a whole range of favorable treatment, but the following clause indicates it means here that Abram’s life will be spared. §‡ tn: Heb “and my life will live.” §‡† tn: Heb “and the woman.” The word also means “wife”; the Hebrew article can express the possessive pronoun (R. J. Williams, Hebrew Syntax, 19, §86). Here the proper name (Abram) has been used in the translation instead of a possessive pronoun (“his”) for clarity. §† tn: The Hebrew term הַ

§‡ tn: The Hebrew text simply has “house of Pharaoh.” The word “house” refers to the household in general, more specifically to the royal harem. §§† sn: He did treat Abram well. The construction of the parenthetical disjunctive clause, beginning with the conjunction on the prepositional phrase, draws attention to the irony of the story. Abram wanted Sarai to lie “so that it would go well” with him. Though he lost

Heb "the rest." §§§ sn: The reference to the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah must mean the kings along with their armies. Most of them were defeated in the valley, but some of them escaped to the hills. 18 tn: Heb "they"; the referent (the four victorious kings, see v. 9) has been supplied in the translation for clarity. 19 tn: Heb "Lot the son of his brother." 20 tn: Heb "and." 21 tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Lot) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 22 tn: This disjunctive clause is circumstantial/causal, explaining that Lot was captured because he was living in Sodom at the time. 23 tn: Heb "the fugitive." The article carries a generic force or indicates that this fugitive is definite in the mind of the speaker. 24 sn: E. A. Speiser ( Genesis [AB], 103) suggests that part of this chapter came from an outside source since it refers to Abram the Hebrew. That is not impossible, given that the narrator likely utilized traditions and genealogies that had been collected and transmitted over the years. The meaning of the word "Hebrew" has proved elusive. It may be related to the verb "to cross over," perhaps meaning "immigrant." Or it might be derived from the name of Abram's ancestor Eber (see Gen 11:14-16). 25 tn: Or "terebinth." 26 tn: Or "a brother"; or "a relative"; or perhaps "an ally." 27 tn: Heb "possessors of a treaty with." Since it is likely that the qualifying statement refers to all three (Mamre, Eshcol, and Aner) the words "all these" have been supplied in the translation to make this clear. 28 tn: This parenthetical disjunctive clause explains how Abram came to be living in their territory, but it also explains why they must go to war with Abram. 29 tn: Heb "his brother," by extension, "relative." Here and in v. 16 the more specific term "nephew" has been used in the translation for clarity. Lot was the son of Haran, Abram's brother ( Gen 11:27). 30 tn: The verb נָחַם

 31 tn: The words "the invaders" have been supplied in the translation for clarification. 32 sn: The use of the name Dan reflects a later perspective. The Danites did not migrate to this northern territory until centuries later (see Judg 18:29). Furthermore Dan was not even born until much later. By inserting this name a scribe has clarified the location of the region. 33 tn: The Hebrew text simply has "night" as an adverbial accusative. 34 tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Abram) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 35 tn: Heb "he divided himself...he and his servants." 36 tn: Heb "left." <sup>17</sup> After Abram†† returned from defeating Kedor-laomer and the kings who were with him, the king of Sodom went out to meet Abram‡ in the Valley of Shaveh (known as the King's Valley). <sup>††18</sup> Melchizedek king of Salem‡‡ brought out bread and wine. (Now he was the priest of the Most High God.) <sup>††19</sup> He blessed Abram, saying,

<sup>21</sup> Then the king of Sodom said to Abram, "Give me the people and take the possessions for yourself." <sup>22</sup> But Abram replied to the king of Sodom, "I raise my hand‡† to the LORD, the Most High God, Creator of heaven and earth, and vow <sup>‡†23</sup> that I will take nothing‡†† belonging to you, not even a thread or the strap

Accordingly, there has been much speculation about its king. Though some have identified him with the preincarnate Christ or with Noah's son Shem, it is far more likely that Melchizedek was a Canaanite royal priest whom God used to renew the promise of the blessing to Abram, perhaps because Abram considered Melchizedek his spiritual superior. But Melchizedek remains an enigma. In a book filled with genealogical records he appears on the scene without a genealogy and then disappears from the narrative. In Psalm 110 the LORD

‡†† tn: The parenthetical disjunctive clause significantly identifies Melchizedek as a priest as well as a king. sn: It is his royal priestly status that makes Melchizedek a type of Christ: He was identified with Jerusalem, superior to the ancestor of Israel, and both a king and a priest. Unlike the normal Canaanites, this man served "God Most High" (אל עליון)

On third feminine singular pronouns referring back to verbal ideas see GKC 440-41 §135. p. Some propose taking the suffix as proleptic, anticipating the following feminine noun ("righteousness"). In this case one might translate: "and he reckoned it to him – [namely] righteousness." See O. P. I can have a family by her.”<sup>20</sup> Abram did what<sup>21</sup> Sarai told him.

For further discussion see C. F. Fensham, “The Son of a Handmaid in Northwest Semitic,” VT 19 (1969): 312-21. <sup>20</sup> tn: Heb “perhaps I will be built from her.” Sarai hopes to have a family established through this surrogate mother. <sup>21</sup> tn: Heb “listened to the voice of,” which is an idiom meaning “obeyed.” sn: Abram did what Sarai told him. This expression was first used in Gen 3:17 of Adam’s obeying his wife. In both cases the text highlights weak faith and how it jeopardized the plan of God. <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb “at the end of ten years, to live, Abram.” The prepositional phrase introduces the temporal clause, the infinitive construct serves as the verb, and the name “Abram” is the subject. <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb “the Egyptian, her female servant.” <sup>24</sup> sn: To be his wife. Hagar became a slave wife, not on equal standing with Sarai. However, if Hagar produced the heir, she would be the primary wife in the eyes of society. An entire tractate in the Mishnah is devoted to this subject (tractate Keritot). Being ostracized from the community is involved at the least, but it is not certain whether this refers to the death penalty. †† tn: Heb “he has broken my covenant.” The noun בְּרִית

The name change seems to be a dialectical variation, both spellings meaning “princess” or “queen.” Like the name Abram, the name Sarai symbolized the past. The new name Sarah, like the name Abraham, would be a reminder of what God intended to do for Sarah in the future. †† tn: Heb “she will become nations.” ††† tn: Heb “peoples.” ††† sn: Laughed. The Hebrew verb used here provides the basis for the naming of Isaac: “And he laughed” is וַיִּצְחָק

20 tn: Heb “And when he finished speaking with him, God went up from Abraham.” The sequence of pronouns and proper names has been modified in the translation for stylistic reasons. sn: God went up from him. The text draws attention to God’s dramatic exit and in so doing brings full closure to the scene. 21 Heb “Ishmael his son and all born in his house and all bought with money, every male among the men of the house of Abraham.” 22 tn: Heb “circumcised the flesh of their foreskin.” The Hebrew expression is somewhat pleonastic and has been simplified in the translation. 23 tn: Heb “the son of ninety-nine years.” 24 tn: Heb “circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin” (also in v. 25). 25 tn: Heb “the son of thirteen years.” 26 tn: Heb “him”; the referent (Abraham) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 27 tn: Or “terebinth.” 28 tn: The disjunctive clause here is circumstantial to the main clause. 29 tn: The Hebrew noun translated “entrance” is an adverbial accusative of place. 30 tn: Heb “he”; the referent (Abraham) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 31 tn: Heb “lifted up his eyes.” 32 tn: Heb “and saw, and look.” The particle הִנֵּה

The imperative after the cohortative indicates purpose here. ‡†† tn: Heb "so that you may refresh yourselves, after [which] you may be on your way - for therefore you passed by near your servant." ‡‡‡ tn: The word "take" is supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. In the Hebrew text the sentence lacks a verb other than the imperative "hurry." The elliptical structure of the language reflects Abraham's haste to get things ready quickly. § sn: Three measures (Heb "three seahs") was equivalent to about twenty quarts (twenty-two liters) of flour, which would make a lot of bread. The animal prepared for the meal was far more than the three visitors needed. This was a banquet for royalty. Either it had been a lonely time for Abraham and the presence of visitors made him very happy, or he sensed this was a momentous visit. §† sn: The bread was the simple, round bread made by bedouins that is normally prepared quickly for visitors. §†† tn: Heb "the young man." §† tn: The construction uses the Piel preterite, "he hurried," followed by the infinitive construct; the two probably form a verbal hendiadys: "he quickly prepared." §†† tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Abraham) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §† tn: The words "the food" are supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. <sup>13</sup> The LORD said to Abraham, "Why<sup>26</sup> did Sarah laugh and say, 'Will I really<sup>27</sup> have a child when I am old?' <sup>14</sup> Is anything impossible<sup>28</sup> for the LORD? ### Abraham Pleads for Sodom

<sup>16</sup> When the men got up to leave, <sup>31</sup> they looked out over<sup>32</sup> Sodom. Theoretically the Niphal can be translated either as passive or reflexive/reciprocal. (The Niphal of "bless" is only used in formulations of the Abrahamic covenant. See Gen 12:2; 18:18; 28:14.) Traditionally the verb is taken as passive here, as if Abram were going to be a channel or source of blessing. But in later formulations of the Abrahamic covenant (see Gen 22:18; 26:4) the Hitpael replaces this Niphal form, suggesting a translation "will bless [i.e., "pronounce blessings upon"] themselves [or "one another"]." The Hitpael of "bless" is used with a reflexive/reciprocal sense in Deut 29:18; Ps 72:17; Isa 65:16; Jer 4:2. Gen 18:18 (like 12:2) predicts that Abraham will be held up as a paradigm of divine blessing and that people will use his name in their blessing formulae. For examples of blessing formulae utilizing an individual as an example of blessing see Gen 48:20 and Ruth 4:11. † tn: Heb "For I have known him." The verb וָיָדַע

His opposition to the crowds leads to his rejection as a foreigner by those with whom he had chosen to live.

† tn: Heb "who are found." The wording might imply he had other daughters living in the city, but the text does not explicitly state this. †† tn: Or "with the iniquity [i.e., punishment] of the city" (cf. The third masculine singular suffixes refer specifically to Lot, though his wife and daughters accompanied him (see v. 17). For stylistic reasons these have been translated as plural pronouns ("them"). ‡‡† tn: Or "one of them"; Heb "he." Several ancient versions (LXX, Vulgate, Syriac) read the plural "they." See also the note on "your" in v. 19. ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "escape." § tn: The Hebrew verb translated "look" signifies an intense gaze, not a passing glance. This same verb is used later in v. 26 to describe Lot's wife's self-destructive look back at the city. §† tn: Or "in the plain"; Heb "in the circle," referring to the "circle" or oval area of the Jordan Valley. §†† tn: Or "my lords." See the following note on the problem of identifying the addressee here. The Hebrew term is אֲדֹנָי §‡ tn: The second person pronominal suffixes are singular in this verse (note "your eyes," "you have made great," and "you have acted"). Verse 18a seems to indicate that Lot is addressing the angels, but the use of the singular and the appearance of the divine title "Lord" ( אֲדֹנָי ) §†† tn: Heb "in your eyes." §† tn: Heb "you made great your kindness." §‡ sn: The Hebrew word דָּן

The cohortative here expresses Lot's request. <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb "Is it not little?" <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb "my soul will live." After the cohortative the jussive with vav conjunctive here indicates purpose/result. <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "And he said, 'Look, I will grant.'" The order of the clauses has been rearranged for stylistic reasons. The referent of the speaker ("he") is somewhat ambiguous: It could be taken as the angel to whom Lot has been speaking (so NLT; note the singular references in vv. 18-19), or it could be that Lot is speaking directly to the LORD

<sup>25</sup> tn: Heb "I have lifted up your face [i.e., shown you favor] also concerning this matter." <sup>26</sup> tn: The negated infinitive construct indicates either the consequence of God's granting the request ("I have granted this request, so that I will not") or the manner in which he will grant it ("I have granted your request by not destroying"). <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb "Be quick! The first action (the sun's rising) occurred as the second (Lot's entering Zoar) took place. The disjunctive clauses also signal closure for the preceding scene. <sup>31</sup> tn: The disjunctive clause signals the beginning of the next scene and highlights God's action. <sup>32</sup> tn: Or "burning sulfur" (the traditional "fire and brimstone"). <sup>33</sup> tn: Heb "from the LORD

Lot's wife apparently identified with the doomed city and thereby showed lack of respect for God's provision of salvation. She, like her daughters later, had allowed her thinking to be influenced by the culture of Sodom. <sup>38</sup> tn: The words "and went" are supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. <sup>39</sup> tn: Heb "upon the face of." <sup>40</sup> tn: Or "all the land of the plain"; Heb "and all the face of the land of the circle," referring to the "circle" or oval area of the Jordan Valley. <sup>41</sup> tn: Heb "And he saw, and look, the smoke of the land went up like the smoke of a furnace." sn: It is hard to imagine what was going on in Abraham's mind, but this brief section in the narrative enables the reader to think about the human response to the judgment. Abraham had family in that area. He had rescued those people from the invasion. That was why he interceded. Yet he surely knew how wicked they were. That was why he got the number down to ten when he negotiated with God to save the city. But now he must have wondered, "What was the point?" <sup>42</sup> tn: The construction is a temporal clause comprised of the temporal indica-from the midst of the destruction when he destroyed† the cities Lot had lived in.

30 Lot went up from Zoar with his two daughters and settled in the mountains because he was afraid to live in Zoar. So he lived in a cave with his two daughters. 31 Later the older daughter said†† to the younger, “Our father is old, and there is no man anywhere nearby‡ to have sexual relations with us,†† according to the way of all the world. 32 Come, let’s make our father drunk with wine‡‡ so we can have sexual relations‡‡‡ with him and preserve‡‡‡ our family line through our father.” §

33 So that night they made their father drunk with wine, §† and the older daughter§†† came and had sexual relations with her father. §† But he was not aware that she had sexual relations with him and then got up.

§††34 So in the morning the older daughter§†† said to the younger, “Since I had sexual relations with my father last night, let’s make him drunk again tonight. §† Then you go and have sexual relations with him so we can preserve our family line through our father.” §††35 So they made their father drunk§†† that night as well, and the younger one came and had sexual relations with him. §§§ But he was not aware that she had sexual relations with him and then got up. 18

36 In this way both of Lot’s daughters became pregnant by their father. 37 The older daughter<sup>19</sup> gave birth to a son and named him Moab. 20 He is the ancestor of the Moabites of today. 38 The younger daughter also gave birth to a son and named him Ben-Ammi. 21 He is the ancestor of the Ammonites of today.

20 Abraham journeyed from there to the Negev<sup>22</sup> region and settled between Kadesh and Shur. While he lived as a temporary resident<sup>23</sup> in Gerar, 2 Abimelech said about his wife Sarah, “She is my sister.” So Abimelech, king of Gerar, sent for Sarah and took her.

3 But God appeared<sup>24</sup> to Abimelech in a dream at night and said to him, “You are as good as dead<sup>25</sup> because of the woman you have taken, for she is someone else’s wife.” 26

4 Now Abimelech had not gone near her. He said, “Lord, 27 would you really slaughter an innocent nation? 28 Did Abraham<sup>29</sup> not say to me, ‘She is my sister’? And she herself said, 30 ‘ He is my brother.’ I have done this with a clear conscience<sup>31</sup> and with innocent hands!”

6 Then in the dream God replied to him, “Yes, I know that you have done this with a clear conscience. 32 That is why I have kept you<sup>33</sup> from sinning against me and why<sup>34</sup> I did not allow you to touch her. 7 But now give back the man’s wife. Indeed<sup>35</sup> he is a prophet<sup>36</sup> and he will pray for you; thus you will live. 37 But if you don’t

Some, finding the reference to a nation problematic, prefer to emend the text and read, “Would you really kill someone who is innocent?” See E. A. Speiser, Genesis (AB), 149. 29 tn: Heb “he”; the referent has been specified in the translation for clarity. 30 tn: Heb “and she, even she.” 31 tn: Heb “with the integrity of my heart.” 32 tn: Heb “with the integrity of your heart.” 33 tn: Heb “and I, even I, kept you.” 34 tn: Heb “therefore.” 35 tn: Or “for,” if the particle is understood as causal (as many English translations do) rather than asseverative. 36 sn: For a discussion of the term prophet see N. Walker, “What is a Nabhi?” ZAW 73 (1961): 99-100. 37 tn: After the preceding jussive (or imperfect), the imperative with vav conjunctive here indicates result. sn: He will pray for you that you may live. <sup>8</sup> Early in the morning‡ Abimelech summoned‡† all his servants. tion for you so that you will stand vindicated before all who are with you.” <sup>20</sup>

Apparently it means that the gift of money somehow exonerates her in other people’s eyes. They will not look on her as compromised (see G. J. Wenham, Genesis [WBC], 2:74). <sup>21</sup> tn: In the Hebrew text the clause begins with “because.” <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb had completely closed up every womb.” In the Hebrew text infinitive absolute precedes the finite verb for emphasis. sn: The LORD

<sup>26</sup> tn: Heb “spoken.” <sup>27</sup> tn: Or “she conceived.” <sup>28</sup> tn: Heb “the one born to him, whom Sarah bore to him, Isaac.” The two modifying clauses, the first introduced with an article and the second with the relative pronoun, are placed in the middle of the sentence, before the name Isaac is stated. They are meant to underscore that this was indeed an actual birth to Abraham and Sarah in fulfillment of the promise. <sup>29</sup> tn: Heb “Isaac his son, the son of eight days.” The name “Isaac” is repeated in the translation for clarity. <sup>30</sup> sn: Just as God had commanded him to do. With the birth of the promised child, Abraham obeyed the LORD that Sarah would nurse children? Yet I have given birth to a son for him in his old age!"

<sup>8</sup> The child grew and was weaned. Abraham prepared a great feast on the day that Isaac was weaned. <sup>††9</sup> But Sarah noticed the son of Hagar the Egyptian – the son whom Hagar had borne to Abraham – mocking. <sup>††10</sup> So she said to Abraham, "Banish that slave woman and her son, for the son of that slave woman will not be an heir along with my son Isaac!"

<sup>11</sup> Sarah's demand displeased Abraham greatly because Ishmael was his son. <sup>††12</sup> But God said to Abraham, "Do not be upset about the boy or your slave wife. Do all that Sarah is telling you because through Isaac your descendants will be counted. <sup>††13</sup> But I will also make the son of the slave wife into a great nation, for he is your descendant too."

35 tn: Heb "said." 36 tn: The perfect form of the verb is used here to describe a hypothetical situation. † tn: Heb "made." †† sn: Children were weaned closer to the age of two or three in the ancient world, because infant mortality was high. If an infant grew to this stage, it was fairly certain he or she would live. Such an event called for a celebration, especially for parents who had waited so long for a child. ‡ tn: Heb "saw." †† tn: The Piel participle used here is from the same root as the name "Isaac." In the Piel stem the verb means "to jest; to make sport of; to play with," not simply "to laugh," which is the meaning of the verb in the Qal stem. What exactly Ishmael was doing is not clear. Interpreters have generally concluded that the boy was either (1) mocking Isaac (cf. NASB, NIV, NLT) or (2) merely playing with Isaac as if on equal footing (cf. NAB, NRSV). In either case Sarah saw it as a threat. The same participial form was used in Gen 19:14 to describe how some in Lot's family viewed his attempt to warn them of impending doom. It also appears later in Gen 39:14, 17, where Potiphar accuses Joseph of mocking them. sn: Mocking. Here Sarah interprets Ishmael's actions as being sinister. Ishmael probably did not take the younger child seriously and Sarah saw this as a threat to Isaac. Paul in Gal 4:29 says that Ishmael persecuted Isaac. He uses a Greek word that can mean "to put to flight; to chase away; to pursue" and may be drawing on a rabbinic interpretation of the passage. In Paul's analogical application of the passage, he points out that once the promised child Isaac (symbolizing Christ as the fulfillment of God's promise) has come, there is no room left for the slave woman and her son (who symbolize the Mosaic law). †† tn: Heb "drive out." The language may seem severe, but Sarah's maternal instincts sensed a real danger in that Ishmael was not treating Isaac with the proper respect. ††† tn: Heb "and the word was very wrong in the eyes of Abraham on account of his son." The verb  $\text{ׁוּרַד}$

††† tn: Heb "Let it not be evil in your eyes." ‡ tn: Heb "listen to her voice." The idiomatic expression means "obey; comply." Here her advice, though harsh, is necessary and conforms to the will of God. Later (see Gen 25), when Abraham has other sons, he sends them all away as well. ‡† tn: The imperfect verbal form here draws attention to an action that is underway. ‡†† tn: Or perhaps "will be named"; Heb "for in Isaac offspring will be called to you." The exact meaning of the statement is not clear, but it does indicate that God's covenantal promises to Abraham will be realized through Isaac, not Ishmael. ‡† tn: Heb "and Abraham rose up early in the morning and he took." ‡†† tn: Heb "bread," although the term can be used for food in general. ‡† tn: Heb "He put upon her shoulder, and the boy [or perhaps, "and with the boy"], and her away. So she went wandering aimlessly through the wilderness of Beer Sheba. <sup>15</sup> When the water in the skin was gone, she shoved the child under one of the shrubs. <sup>16</sup> Then she went and sat down by herself across from him at quite a distance, about a bowshot away, for she thought, <sup>18</sup> "I refuse to watch the child die." <sup>19</sup> So she sat across from him and wept uncontrollably. <sup>20</sup>

<sup>22</sup> At that time Abimelech and Phicol, the commander of his army, said to Abraham, "God is with you. <sup>27</sup> In all that you do. <sup>23</sup> Now swear to me right here in God's name that you will not deceive me, my children, or my descendants. <sup>29</sup> Show me, and the land where he sent her away." It is unclear how "and the boy" relates syntactically to what precedes. Perhaps the words should be rearranged and the text read, "and he put [them] on her shoulder and he gave to Hagar the boy." ‡† tn: Heb "she went and wandered." ‡†† tn: Or "desert," although for English readers this usually connotes a sandy desert like the Sahara rather than the arid wasteland of this region with its sparse vegetation. ‡†† tn: Heb "threw," but the child, who was now thirteen years old, would not have been carried, let alone thrown under a bush. The exaggerated language suggests Ishmael is limp from dehydration and is being abandoned to die. See G. J. Wenham, Genesis (WBC), 2:85. ‡†† sn: A bowshot would be a distance of about a hundred yards (ninety meters). <sup>18</sup> tn: Heb "said." <sup>19</sup> tn: Heb "I will not look on the death of the child." The cohortative verbal form (note the negative particle  $\text{לֹא}$ )

<sup>24</sup> Abraham said, “I swear to do this.” †<sup>25</sup> But Abraham lodged a complaint†† against Abimelech concerning a well††† that Abimelech’s servants had seized. †††<sup>26</sup> “I do not know who has done this thing,” Abimelech replied. “Moreover, § you did not tell me. I did not hear about it until today.”

<sup>27</sup> Abraham took some sheep and cattle and gave them to Abimelech. The two of them made a treaty. §†<sup>28</sup> Then Abraham set seven ewe lambs apart from the flock by themselves. <sup>29</sup> Abimelech asked Abraham, “What is the meaning of these§†† seven ewe lambs that you have set apart?” <sup>30</sup> He replied, “You must take these seven ewe lambs from my hand as legal proof§† that I dug this well.” §††<sup>31</sup> That is why he named that place§† Beer Sheba, §† because the two of them swore§†† an oath there.

<sup>32</sup> So they made a treaty§§† at Beer Sheba. How he reconciled those facts is not clear in the text. Heb 11:17-19 suggests that Abraham believed God could restore Isaac to him through resurrection. <sup>38</sup> sn: He took the fire and the knife in his hand. These details anticipate the sacrifice that lies ahead. <sup>39</sup> tn: The Hebrew text adds “and said.” This is redundant and has not been translated for stylistic reasons. <sup>40</sup> tn: Heb “Here I am” (cf. lamb for the burnt offering?" 8 " God will provide† for himself the lamb for the burnt offering, my son," Abraham replied. The two of them continued on together.

9 When they came to the place God had told him about, Abraham built the altar there†† and arranged the wood on it. Next he tied up‡ his son Isaac and placed him on the altar on top of the wood. 10 Then Abraham reached out his hand, took the knife, and prepared to slaughter‡† his son. 11 But the LORD's angel‡‡ called to him from heaven, "Abraham ! Abraham's obedience brought God's ratification of the earlier conditional promise (see Gen 12:2). 25 tn: Traditionally the verb is taken as passive ("will be blessed") here, as if Abraham's descendants were going to be a channel or source of blessing to the nations. But the Hitpael is better understood here as reflexive/reciprocal, "will bless [i.e., pronounce blessings on] themselves/one another" (see also Gen 26:4). Elsewhere the Hitpael of the verb "to bless" is used with a reflexive/reciprocal sense in Deut 29:18; Ps 72:17; Isa 65:16; Jer 4:2. Gen 12:2 predicts that Abram will be held up as a paradigm of divine blessing and that people will use his name in their blessing formulae. For examples of blessing formulae utilizing an individual as an example of blessing see Gen 48:20 and Ruth 4:11. Earlier formulations of this promise (see Gen 12:2; 18:18) use the Niphal stem. ## The Sons of Ishmael

Jacob and Esau

granted to Isaac. But fertility was not one of them, at least not for twenty years, because Rebekah was barren as well (see v. 21). <sup>20</sup> sn: Beer Lahai Roi. See the note on this place name in Gen 24:62. <sup>21</sup> sn: This is the account of Ishmael. The Book of Genesis tends to tidy up the family records at every turning point. Here, before proceeding with the story of Isaac's family, the narrative traces Ishmael's family line. Later, before discussing Jacob's family, the narrative traces Esau's family line (see Gen 36). <sup>22</sup> tn: The meaning of this line is not easily understood. The sons of Ishmael are listed here "by their names" and "according to their descendants." <sup>23</sup> tn: Or "tribal chieftains." <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "And these are the days of the years of Ishmael." <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb "And he was gathered to his people." In the ancient Israelite view he joined his deceased ancestors in Sheol, the land of the dead. <sup>26</sup> tn: Heb "they"; the referent (Ishmael's descendants) has been specified in the translation for clarity. <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb "which is by the face of," or near the border. The territory ran along the border of Egypt. <sup>28</sup> tn: Heb "as you go." <sup>29</sup> sn: The name Asshur refers here to a tribal area in the Sinai. <sup>30</sup> tn: Heb "he fell." <sup>31</sup> tn: Heb "upon the face of all his brothers." This last expression, obviously alluding to the earlier oracle about Ishmael ( Gen 16:12), could mean that the descendants of Ishmael lived in hostility to others or that they lived in a territory that was opposite the lands of their relatives. While there is some ambiguity about the meaning, the line probably does give a hint of the Ishmaelite-Israelite conflicts to come. <sup>32</sup> sn: This is the account of Isaac. What follows for several chapters is not the account of Isaac, except briefly, but the account of Jacob and Esau. The next chapters tell what became of Isaac and his family. <sup>33</sup> tn: Heb "And Isaac was the son of forty years when he took Rebekah." <sup>34</sup> sn: Some valuable information is provided here. We learn here that Isaac married thirty-five years before Abraham died, that Rebekah was barren for twenty years, and that Abraham would have lived to see Jacob and Esau begin to grow up. The death of Abraham was recorded in the first part of the chapter as a "tidying up" of one generation before beginning the account of the next. <sup>35</sup> tn: The Hebrew verb <sup>עָתַר</sup>

"Two nations‡† are in your womb, and two peoples will be separated from within you. One people will be stronger than the other, and the older will serve the younger."

Edom was the place where they lived, so-named probably because of the reddish nature of the hills. The writer can use the word "red" to describe the stew that Esau gasped for to convey the nature of Esau and his descendants. They were a lusty, passionate, and profane people who lived for the moment. There is evidence from Hurrian culture that rights of inheritance were occasionally sold or transferred. Here Esau is portrayed as a profane person who would at the moment rather have a meal than the right to inherit. He will soon forget this trade and seek his father's blessing in spite of it. <sup>27</sup> sn: The style here is typical of Hebrew narrative; after the tension is resolved with the dialogue, the working out of it is recorded in a rapid sequence of verbs ("gave"; "ate"; "drank"; "got up"; "went out"). See also Gen 3:1-7 for another example. <sup>28</sup> sn: So Esau despised his birthright. This clause, which concludes the episode, is a summary statement which reveals the underlying significance of Esau's actions. "To despise" means to treat something as worthless or with contempt. Esau's willingness to sell his birthright was evidence that he considered it to be unimportant. <sup>29</sup> tn: Heb "in addition to the first famine which was."

Abraham. † Isaac went to Abimelech king of the Philistines at Gerar. 2 The LORD appeared to Isaac and said, "Do not go down to Egypt; †† settle down in the land that I will point out to you. †3 Stay†† in this land. Then I will be with you and will bless you, †† for I will give all these lands to you and to your descendants, ††† and I will fulfill††† the solemn promise I made§ to your father Abraham. 4 I will multiply your descendants so they will be as numerous as the stars in the sky, and I will give them§† all these lands. All the nations of the earth will pronounce blessings on one another using the name of your descendants. §††5 All this will come to pass§† because Abraham obeyed me§†† and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws." §†6 So Isaac settled in Gerar.

† sn: This account is parallel to two similar stories about Abraham (see Gen 12:10-20; 20:1-18). Many scholars do not believe there were three similar incidents, only one that got borrowed and duplicated. Many regard the account about Isaac as the original, which then was attached to the more important person, Abraham, with supernatural elements being added. For a critique of such an approach, see R. Alter, The Art of Biblical Narrative, 47-62. It is more likely that the story illustrates the proverb "like father, like son" (see T. W. Mann, The Book of the Torah, 53). In typical human fashion the son follows his father's example of lying to avoid problems. The appearance of similar events reported in a similar way underscores the fact that the blessing has now passed to Isaac, even if he fails as his father did. †† sn: Do not go down to Egypt. The words echo Gen 12:10, which reports that "Abram went down to Egypt," but state the opposite. † tn: Heb "say to you." †† tn: The Hebrew verb גור

But the Hitpaal is better understood here as reflexive/reciprocal, "will bless [i.e., pronounce blessings on] themselves/one another" (see also Gen 22:18). Elsewhere the Hitpaal of the verb "to bless" is used with a reflexive/reciprocal sense in Deut 29:18; Ps 72:17; Isa 65:16; Jer 4:2. Gen 12:2 predicts that Abram will be held up as a paradigm of divine blessing and that people will use his name in their blessing formulae. For examples of blessing formulae utilizing an individual as an example of blessing see Gen 48:20 and Ruth 4:11. Earlier formulations of this promise (see Gen 12:2; 18:18) use the Niphal stem. (See also Gen 28:14.) §† tn: The words "All this will come to pass" are not in the Hebrew text, but are supplied for stylistic reasons. §†† tn: Heb "listened to my voice." §† sn: My charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws. 8 After Isaac§§§ had been there a long time, 18 Abimelech king of the Philistines happened to look out a window and observed19 Isaac caressing20 his wife Rebekah. 9 So Abimelech summoned Isaac and said, "She is really21 your wife! Why did you say, 'She is my sister'?" Isaac replied, "Because I thought someone might kill me to get her." 22

10 Then Abimelech exclaimed, "What in the world have you done to us?23 One of the men24 might easily have had sexual relations with25 your wife, and you would have brought guilt on us!" 11 So Abimelech commanded all the people, "Whoever touches26 this man or his wife will surely be put to death." 27

pretive, for Abraham did not have all these laws. The terms are legal designations for sections of the Mosaic law and presuppose the existence of the law. Some Rabbinic views actually conclude that Abraham had fulfilled the whole law before it was given (see m. Qiddushin 4:14). Some scholars argue that this story could only have been written after the law was given (C. Westermann, Genesis, 2:424-25). But the simplest explanation is that the narrator (traditionally taken to be Moses the Lawgiver) elaborated on the simple report of Abraham's obedience by using terms with which the Israelites were familiar. In this way he depicts Abraham as the model of obedience to God's commands, whose example Israel should follow. §† sn: Rebekah, unlike Sarah, was not actually her husband's sister. §§† tn: Heb "lest." Since the verb "said" probably means "said to myself" (i.e., "thought") here, the direct discourse in the Hebrew statement has been converted to indirect discourse in the translation. In addition the simple prepositional phrase "on account of her" has been clarified in the translation as "to get her" (cf. v. 7). 23 tn: Heb "What is this you have done to us?" The Hebrew demonstrative pronoun "this" adds emphasis: "What in the world have you done to us?" (R. J. <sup>16</sup> Then Abimelech said to Isaac, "Leave us and go elsewhere,††† for you have become much more powerful††† than we are." <sup>17</sup> So Isaac left there and settled in the Gerar Valley. <sup>18</sup> Isaac reopened‡† the wells that had been dug‡†† back in the days of his father Abraham, for the Philistines had stopped them up‡† after Abraham died. Isaac‡†† gave these wells‡† the same names his father had given them. ‡

This explanation for the expulsion of Isaac from Philistine territory foreshadows the words used later by the Egyptians to justify their oppression of Israel (see Exod 1:9). ‡ tn: Heb "and he camped in the valley of Gerar and he lived there." sn: This valley was actually a wadi (a dry river bed where the water would flow in the rainy season, but this would have been rare in the Negev). The water table under it would have been higher than in the desert because of water soaking in during the torrents, making it easier to find water when digging wells. However, this does not minimize the blessing of the LORD

Prior to this we are told that Isaac settled in Beer Sheba; presumably this treaty would have allowed him to do that. Furthermore, the blessing enables the recipient to accomplish this. <sup>25</sup> tn: The Hebrew word is <sup>גָּבַר</sup>

came in here deceitfully and took away† your blessing.”<sup>36</sup> Esau exclaimed, “‘Jacob’ is the right name for him!†† He has tripped me up‡ two times ! He took away my birthright, and now, look, he has taken away my blessing !” Then he asked, “Have you not kept back a blessing for me?”

<sup>37</sup> Isaac replied to Esau, “Look ! I have made him lord over you. I have made all his relatives his servants and provided him with grain and new wine. What is left that I can do for you, my son?”<sup>38</sup> Esau said to his father, “Do you have only that one blessing, my father ? Bless me too !”†† Then Esau wept loudly. ‡‡

<sup>40</sup> You will live by your sword but you will serve your brother. When you grow restless, you will tear off his yoke from your neck.”§

When originally given, the name Jacob was a play on the word “heel” (see Gen 25:26). The name (since it is a verb) probably means something like “may he protect,” that is, as a rearguard, dogging the heels. This name was probably chosen because of the immediate association with the incident of grabbing the heel. Esau gives the name “Jacob” a negative connotation here, the meaning “to trip up; to supplant.” †† tn: Heb “Bless me, me also, my father.” The words “my father” have not been repeated in the translation for stylistic reasons. ‡‡ tn: Heb “and Esau lifted his voice and wept.” ‡‡† tn: Heb “look.” ‡‡‡ tn: Heb “from the fatness.” § sn: You will tear off his yoke from your neck. It may be that this prophetic blessing found its fulfillment when Jerusalem fell and Edom got its revenge. The oracle makes Edom subservient to Israel and suggests the Edomites would live away from the best land and be forced to sustain themselves by violent measures. §† tn: Or “bore a grudge against” (cf. NAB, NASB, NIV). The Hebrew verb §†† tn: Heb “because of the blessing which his father blessed him.” §† tn: Heb “said in his heart.” The expression may mean “said to himself.” Even if this is the case, v. 42 makes it clear that he must have shared his intentions with someone, because the news reached Rebekah. §†† tn: Heb “days.” §† tn: The cohortative here expresses Esau’s determined resolve to kill Jacob. §† tn: Heb “and the words of Esau her older son were told to Rebekah.” §§† tn: Heb “she sent and called for.” §§† tn: Heb “is consoling himself with respect to you to kill you.” The only way Esau had of dealing with his anger at the moment was to plan to kill his brother after the death of Isaac.

Then I’ll send someone to bring you back from there. <sup>21</sup> Why should I lose both of you in one day?”<sup>22</sup>

<sup>46</sup> Then Rebekah said to Isaac, “I am deeply depressed<sup>23</sup> because of these daughters of Heth. <sup>24</sup> If Jacob were to marry one of these daughters of Heth who live in this land, I would want to die!”<sup>25</sup>

28 So Isaac called for Jacob and blessed him. Then he commanded him, “You must not marry a Canaanite woman!<sup>26</sup> Leave immediately<sup>27</sup> for Paddan Aram ! Go to the house of Bethuel, your mother’s father, and find yourself a wife there, among the daughters of Laban, your mother’s brother. <sup>3</sup> May the sovereign God<sup>28</sup> bless you! May he make you fruitful and give you a multitude of descendants!<sup>29</sup> Then you will become <sup>30</sup> a large nation. <sup>314</sup> May he give you and your descendants the blessing he gave to Abraham<sup>32</sup> so that you may possess the land<sup>33</sup> God gave to Abraham, the land where you have been living as a temporary resident.”<sup>345</sup> So Isaac sent Jacob on his way, and he went to Paddan Aram, to Laban son of Bethuel the <sup>19</sup> tn: Heb “a few days.” Rebekah probably downplays the length of time Jacob will be gone, perhaps to encourage him and assure him that things will settle down soon. She probably expects Esau’s anger to die down quickly. However, Jacob ends up being gone twenty years and he never sees Rebekah again. <sup>20</sup> tn: The words “stay there” are supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons.

<sup>21</sup> tn: Heb “and I will send and I will take you from there.” The verb “send” has no object in the Hebrew text; one must be supplied in the translation. Either “someone” or “a message” could be supplied, but since in those times a message would require a messenger, “someone” has been used. <sup>22</sup> tn: If Jacob stayed, he would be killed and Esau would be forced to run away. <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb “loathe my life.” The Hebrew verb translated “loathe” refers to strong disgust (see Lev 20:23). <sup>24</sup> tn: Some translate the Hebrew term “Heth” as “Hittites” here (see also Gen 23:3), but this gives the impression that these people were the classical Hittites of Anatolia. However, there is no known connection between these sons of Heth, apparently a Canaanite group (see Gen 10:15), and the Hittites of Asia Minor. See H. A. Hoffner, Jr., “Hittites,” Peoples of the Old Testament World, 152-53. <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb “If Jacob takes a wife from the daughters of Heth, like these, from the daughters of the land, why to me life?” <sup>26</sup> tn: Heb “you must not take a wife from the daughters of Canaan.” <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb “Arise! ### Jacob's Dream at Bethel ground§§§ you are lying on. <sup>14</sup> Your descendants will be like the dust of the earth, <sup>18</sup> and you will spread out<sup>19</sup> to the west, east, north, and south. All the families of the earth will pronounce blessings on one another<sup>20</sup> using your name and that of your descendants. <sup>2115</sup> I am with you!<sup>22</sup> I will protect you wherever you go and will bring you back to this land. I will not leave you until I have done what I promised you!"

Isaac." The Hebrew word for "father" can typically be used in a broader sense than the English word, in this case referring to Abraham (who was Jacob's grandfather). For stylistic reasons and for clarity, the words "your father" are supplied with "Isaac" in the translation. §§§ tn: The Hebrew term אָרֶץ

The disjunctive clause structure (conjunction + noun/object) highlights this statement as well. ‡‡† tn: Heb "and Jacob lifted up his feet." This unusual expression suggests that Jacob had a new lease on life now that God had promised him the blessing he had so desperately tried to gain by his own efforts. The text portrays him as having a new step in his walk. ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "the land of the sons of the east." § tn: Heb "and he saw, and look." As in Gen 28:12-15, the narrator uses the particle הִנֵּה uncle Laban,<sup>21</sup> and the sheep of his uncle Laban, he<sup>22</sup> went over<sup>23</sup> and rolled the stone off the mouth of the well and watered the sheep of his uncle Laban. <sup>2411</sup> Then Jacob kissed Rachel and began to weep loudly. <sup>2512</sup> When Jacob explained<sup>26</sup> to Rachel that he was a relative of her father<sup>27</sup> and the son of Rebekah, she ran and told her father. <sup>13</sup> When Laban heard this news about Jacob, his sister's son, he rushed out to meet him. The proper name has been replaced by the pronoun ("he") in the translation for stylistic reasons. 23 tn: Heb "drew near, approached." 24 tn: Heb "Laban, the brother of his mother." The text says nothing initially about the beauty of Rachel. But the reader is struck by the repetition of "Laban the brother of his mother." G. J. Wenham is no doubt correct when he observes that Jacob's primary motive at this stage is to ingratiate himself with Laban ( Genesis [WBC], 2:231). 25 tn: Heb "and he lifted up his voice and wept." The idiom calls deliberate attention to the fact that Jacob wept out loud. 26 tn: Heb "declared." 27 tn: Heb "that he [was] the brother of her father." 28 tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Jacob) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 29 tn: Heb "and he told to Laban all these things." This might mean Jacob told Laban how he happened to be there, but Laban's response (see v. 14) suggests "all these things" refers to what Jacob had previously told Rachel (see v. 12). 30 tn: Heb "indeed, my bone and my flesh are you." The expression sounds warm enough, but the presence of "indeed" may suggest that Laban had to be convinced of Jacob's identity before permitting him to stay. To be one's "bone and flesh" is to be someone's blood relative. For example, the phrase describes the relationship between Abimelech and the Shechemites (Judg 9:2; his mother was a Shechemite); David and the Israelites (2 Sam 5:1); David and the elders of Judah (2 Sam 19:12); and David and his nephew Amasa (2 Sam 19:13, see 2 Sam 17:2; 1 Chr 2:16-17). 31 tn: Heb "and he"; the referent (Jacob) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 32 tn: Heb "a month of days." 33 tn: The verb is the perfect with the vav ( ו )

34 tn: Heb "my brother." The term "brother" is used in a loose sense; actually Jacob was Laban's nephew. 35 tn: Heb "and to Laban [there were] two daughters." The disjunctive clause (introduced here by a conjunction and a prepositional phrase) provides supplemental material that is important to the story. Since this material is parenthetical in nature, vv. 16-17 have been set in parentheses in the translation. 36 tn: Heb "and the eyes of Leah were tender." The disjunctive clause (introduced here by a conjunction and a noun) continues the parenthesis begun in v. 16. It is not clear what is meant by "tender" (or "delicate") eyes. The expression may mean she had appealing eyes (cf. NAB, NRSV, NLT), though some suggest that they were plain, not having the brightness normally expected. Either way, she did not measure up to her gorgeous sister. 37 tn: Heb "and Rachel was beautiful of form and beautiful of appearance." 38 tn: Heb "Jacob loved."

21 Finally Jacob said‡‡ to Laban, "Give me my wife, for my time of service is up. ††† I want to have marital relations with her." †††22 So Laban invited all the people§ of that place and prepared a feast. 23 In the evening he brought his daughter Leah§† to Jacob,§†† and Jacob§‡ had marital relations with her. †††24 (Laban gave his female servant Zilpah to his daughter Leah to be her servant.)§†

Laban's deception of Jacob by giving him the older daughter instead of the younger was God's way of disciplining the deceiver who tricked his older brother. D. Kidner says this account is "the very embodiment of anti-climax, and this moment a miniature of man's disillusion, experienced from Eden onwards" (Genesis [TOTC], 160). G. von Rad notes, "That Laban secretly gave the unloved Leah to the man in love was, to be sure, a monstrous blow, a masterpiece of shameless treachery...It was certainly a move by which he won for himself far and wide the coarsest laughter" (Genesis [OTL], 291). §†† tn: Heb "to him"; the referent (Jacob) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §‡ tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Jacob) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §††† tn: Heb "went in to her." The referent of "this one" has been specified in the translation as Leah to avoid confusion with Rachel, mentioned later in the verse. 26 tn: Heb "and he gave to him Rachel his daughter for him for a wife." The expression "went in to" in this context refers to sexual intercourse, i.e., the consummation of the marriage. 30 tn: Heb "him"; the referent (Laban) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 31 tn: Heb "and he loved also Rachel, more than Leah, and he served with him still seven other years." 32 tn: Heb "hated." The rhetorical device of overstatement is used (note v. 30, which says simply that Jacob loved Rachel more than he did Leah) to emphasize that Rachel, as Jacob's true love and the primary object of his affections, had an advantage over Leah. 33 tn: Heb "he opened up her womb." 34 tn: Or "Leah conceived" (also in vv. 33, 34, 35). 35 sn: The name Reuben (רְאוּבֵן)

The prefixed verbal form with the conjunction is subordinated to the preceding prefixed verbal form and gives the ultimate purpose for the proposed action. A "reproach" is a cutting taunt or painful ridicule, but here it probably refers by metonymy to Rachel's barren condition, which was considered shameful in this culture and was the reason why she was the object of taunting and ridicule. §† <sup>sn</sup>: The name Joseph ( יוֹסֵף )

ered stolen." †34 "Agreed!" said Laban, "It will be as you say." ††

35 So that day Laban‡ removed the male goats that were streaked or spotted, all the female goats that were speckled or spotted (all that had any white on them), and all the dark-colored lambs, and put them in the care‡† of his sons. 36 Then he separated them from Jacob by a three-day journey, ‡† while‡†† Jacob was taking care of the rest of Laban's flocks.

37 But Jacob took fresh-cut branches from poplar, almond, and plane trees. He made white streaks by peeling them, making the white inner wood in the branches visible. 38 Then he set up the peeled branches in all the watering troughs where the flocks came to drink. He set up the branches in front of the flocks when they were in heat and came to drink. ‡††39 When the sheep mated‡ in front of the branches, they‡† gave birth to young that were streaked or speckled or spotted. 40 Jacob removed these lambs, but he made the rest of the flock face‡†† the streaked and completely dark-colored animals in Laban's flock. So he made separate flocks for himself and did not mix them with Laban's flocks. 41 When the stronger females were in heat, ‡† Jacob would set up the branches in the troughs in front of the flock, so they would mate near the branches. 42 But if the animals were weaker, he did not set the branches there.‡†† So the weaker animals ended up belonging to Laban‡† and the stronger animals to Jacob. 43 In this way Jacob‡† became extremely

E. A. Speiser observes, "Laban is delighted with the terms, and promptly proceeds to violate the spirit of the bargain by removing to a safe distance all the grown animals that would be likely to produce the specified spots" (Genesis [AB], 238). Laban apparently thought that by separating out the spotted, striped, and dark colored animals he could minimize the production of spotted, striped, or dark offspring that would then belong to Jacob. ‡††† tn: The disjunctive clause (introduced by the vav with subject) is circumstantial/temporal; Laban removed the animals while Jacob was taking care of the rest. ‡†††† sn: He put the branches in front of the flocks...when they came to drink. It was generally believed that placing such "visual aids" before the animals as they were mating, it was possible to influence the appearance of their offspring. E. A. Speiser notes that "Jacob finds a way to outwit his father-in-law, through prenatal conditioning of the flock by visual aids - in conformance with universal folk beliefs" (Genesis [AB], 238). Nevertheless, in spite of Jacob's efforts at animal husbandry, he still attributes the resulting success to God (see 31:5). § tn: The Hebrew verb used here can mean "to be in heat" (see v. 38) or "to mate; to conceive; to become pregnant." The latter nuance makes better sense in this verse, for the next clause describes them giving birth. §† tn: Heb "the sheep." 3 The LORD said to Jacob, "Return to the land of your fathers<sup>20</sup> and to your relatives. I will be with you." 214 So Jacob sent a message for Rachel and Leah<sup>22</sup> to come to the field<sup>23</sup> where his flocks were. 245 There he said to them, "I can tell that your father's attitude toward me has changed, 25 but the God of my father has been with me. 6 You know that I've worked for your father as hard as I could, 267 but your father has humiliated<sup>27</sup> me and changed my wages ten times. But God has not permitted him to do me any harm. 8 If he said, 28 'The speckled animals<sup>29</sup> will be your wage,' then the entire flock gave birth to speckled offspring. But if he said, 'The streaked animals will be your wage,' then the entire flock gave birth to streaked offspring. 9 In this way God has snatched away your father's livestock and given them to me.

It involves deceiving someone so that their public reputation suffers (see Exod 8:25). 28 tn: In the protasis ("if" section) of this conditional clause, the imperfect verbal form has a customary nuance - whatever he would say worked to Jacob's benefit. 29 tn: Heb "speckled" (twice this verse). The word "animals" (after the first occurrence of "speckled") and "offspring" (after the second) have been supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. ‡†† tn: Heb "arise, leave!" The first imperative draws attention to the need for immediate action. sn: Leave this land immediately. The decision to leave was a wise one in view of the changed attitude in Laban and his sons. But more than that, it was the will of God. Jacob needed to respond to God's call - the circumstances simply made it easier. ‡‡‡ tn: The two nouns may form a hendiadys, meaning "a share in the inheritance" or "a portion to inherit." ‡ tn: Heb "and he devoured, even devouring." The infinitive absolute (following the finite verb here) is used for emphasis. sn: He sold us and...wasted our money. The precise nature of Rachel's and Leah's complaint is not entirely clear. Since Jacob had to work to pay for them, they probably mean that their father has cheated Jacob and therefore cheated them as well. See M. ‡†† tn: Heb "stole the heart of," an expression which apparently means "to deceive." The repetition of the verb "to steal" shows that Jacob and Rachel are kindred spirits. Any thought that Laban would have resigned himself to their departure was now out of the question. ‡†† tn: Heb "fleeing," which reflects Jacob's viewpoint. ‡†† tn: Heb "and he fled." <sup>18</sup> tn: Heb "he arose and crossed." The first verb emphasizes that he wasted no time in getting across. <sup>19</sup> tn: Heb "the river"; the referent (the Euphrates) has been specified in the translation for clarity. <sup>20</sup> tn: Heb "he set his face." <sup>21</sup> tn: Heb "and it was told to Laban on the third day that Jacob had fled." <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb "his brothers." <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb "him"; the referent (Jacob) has been specified in the translation for clarity. <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "and he pursued after him a journey of seven days." <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb "drew close to." <sup>26</sup> tn: Heb "said to him." <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb "watch yourself," which is a warning to be on guard against doing something that is inappropriate. <sup>28</sup> tn: Heb "lest you speak with Jacob from good to evil." The precise meaning of the expression, which occurs only here and in v. 29, is uncertain. Since Laban proceeded to speak to Jacob at length, it cannot mean to maintain silence. Nor does it seem to be a prohibition against criticism (see vv. 26-30). Most likely it refers to a formal pronouncement, whether it be a blessing or a curse. Laban was to avoid saying anything to Jacob that would be intended to enhance him or to harm him. <sup>29</sup> tn: Heb "and Jacob pitched his tent in the hill country, and Laban pitched with his brothers in the hill country of Gilead." The juxtaposition of disjunctive clauses (note the pattern conjunction + subject + verb in both clauses) indicates synchronism of action. <sup>30</sup> tn: Heb "and you have stolen my heart." This expression apparently means "to deceive" (see v. 20). <sup>31</sup> tn: Heb "and you have led away my daughters like captives of a sword." <sup>32</sup> tn: Heb "Why did you hide in order to flee?" The verb "hide" and the infinitive "to flee" form a hendiadys, the infinitive becoming the main verb and the other the adverb: "flee secretly." <sup>33</sup> tn: Heb "and steal me." <sup>34</sup> tn: Heb "And [why did] you not tell me so I could send you off with joy and with songs, with a tambourine and with a harp?" <sup>35</sup> tn: Heb "my sons and my daughters." Here "sons" refers to "grandsons," and has been translated "grandchildren" since at least one granddaughter, Dinah, was involved. The order has been reversed in the translation for stylistic reasons. <sup>36</sup> tn: Heb "there is to my hand." <sup>37</sup> tn: Heb "watch yourself," which is a warning to be on guard against doing something that is inappropriate. <sup>38</sup> tn: Heb "from speaking with Jacob from good to evil." The precise meaning of the expression, which occurs only here and in v. 24, is uncertain. See the note on the same phrase in v. 24. <sup>39</sup> tn: Heb "and now." The words "I understand that" have been supplied in the translation for clarity and for stylistic reasons. † tn: The infinitive absolute appears before the perfect verbal form to emphasize the certainty of the action. †† tn: The infinitive absolute appears before the perfect verbal form to emphasize the degree of emotion involved. ‡ sn: Yet why did you steal my gods? This last sentence is dropped into the speech rather suddenly. See C. Mabee, "Jacob and Laban: The Structure of Judicial Proceedings," VT 30 (1980): 192-207, and G. W. Coats, "Self-Abasement and Insult Formulas," JBL 91 (1972): 90-92. ‡† tn: Heb "and Jacob answered and said to Laban, 'Because I was afraid.'" This statement is a not a response to the question about Laban's household gods that immediately precedes, but to the earlier question about Jacob's motivation for leaving so quickly and secretly (see v. 27). For this reason the words "I left secretly" are supplied in the translation to indicate the connection to Laban's earlier question in v. 27. Additionally the order of the introductory clause and the direct discourse have been rearranged in the translation for stylistic reasons. ‡‡ tn: Heb "for I said." ‡‡† tn: Heb "lest you steal your daughters from with me." ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "With whomever you find your gods, he will not live." § tn: Heb "brothers." §† tn: Heb "recognize for yourself what is with me and take for yourself." §†† tn: The disjunctive clause (introduced here by a vav [ ו ]

§§† tn: The word "them" has been supplied in the translation for clarification. §§‡ tn: Heb "she"; the referent (Rachel) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §§§ tn: Heb "let it not be hot in the eyes of my lord." This idiom refers to anger, in this case as a result of Rachel's failure to stand in the presence of her father as a sign of respect. <sup>18</sup> tn: Heb "I am unable to rise." <sup>19</sup> tn: Heb "the way of women is to me." This idiom refers to a woman's menstrual period. <sup>20</sup> tn: The word "thoroughly" is not in the Hebrew text, but is implied.

<sup>38</sup> "I have been with you for the past twenty years. Your ewes and female goats have not miscarried, nor have I eaten rams from your flocks. <sup>39</sup> Animals torn by wild beasts I never brought to you; I always absorbed the loss myself.<sup>27</sup> You always made me pay for every missing animal,<sup>28</sup> whether it was taken by day or at night. <sup>40</sup> I was consumed by scorching heat<sup>29</sup> during the day and by piercing cold<sup>30</sup> at night, and I went without sleep. <sup>31</sup><sup>41</sup> This was my lot<sup>32</sup> for twenty years in your house: I worked like a slave <sup>33</sup> for you – fourteen years for your two daughters and six years for your flocks, but you changed my wages ten times! <sup>42</sup> If the God of my father – the God of Abraham, the one whom Isaac fears<sup>34</sup> – had not been with me, you would certainly have sent me away empty-handed! But God saw how I was oppressed and how hard I worked, <sup>35</sup> and he rebuked you last night."

<sup>21</sup> tn: Heb "it was hot to Jacob." This idiom refers to anger. <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb "and Jacob answered and said to Laban, 'What is my sin?'" The proper name "Jacob" has been replaced by the pronoun ("he") in the translation and the order of the introductory clause and direct discourse rearranged for stylistic reasons. <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb "What is my sin that you have hotly pursued after me." The Hebrew verb translated "pursue hotly" is used elsewhere of soldiers chasing defeated enemies ( 1 Sam 17:53). <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "what did you find from all the goods of your house?" <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb "your relatives." The word "relatives" has not been repeated in the translation here for stylistic reasons. <sup>26</sup> tn: Heb "that they may decide between us two." <sup>27</sup> tn: The imperfect verbal form indicates that this was a customary or typical action. <sup>28</sup> tn: Heb "from my hand you exacted it." The imperfect verbal form again indicates that this was a customary or typical action. The words "for every missing animal" are supplied in the translation for clarity; the following clause in Hebrew, "stolen by day or stolen by night," probably means "stolen by wild beasts" and refers to the same animals "torn by wild beasts" in the previous clause, although it may refer to animals stolen by people. The translation used here, "missing," is ambiguous enough to cover either eventuality. <sup>29</sup> tn: Or "by drought." <sup>30</sup> tn: Heb "frost, ice," though when contrasted with the כֶּבֶד

<sup>51</sup> “ Here is this pile of stones and this pillar I have set up between me and you,” Laban said to Jacob. <sup>§§52</sup> “ This pile of stones and the pillar are reminders that I will not pass beyond this pile to come to harm you and that you will not pass beyond this pile and this pillar to come to harm me. <sup>§§153</sup> May the God of Abraham and the god of Nahor, §§† the gods of their father, judge between us.” Jacob took an oath by the God whom his father Isaac feared. <sup>§§§54</sup> Then Jacob offered a sacrifice<sup>18</sup>

Jegar Sahadutha. Laban the Aramean gave the place an Aramaic name which means “witness pile” or “the pile is a witness.” ‡†† sn: Galeed also means “witness pile” or “the pile is a witness,” but this name is Canaanite or Western Semitic and closer to later Hebrew. Jacob, though certainly capable of speaking Aramaic, here prefers to use the western dialect. ‡†† tn: Heb “a witness between me and you.” § tn: Heb “and Mizpah.” §† sn: The name Mizpah ( מִצְפָּה

§‡ tn: Heb “and Laban said to Jacob, ‘Behold this heap and behold the pillar which I have set between men and you.’” The order of the introductory clause and the direct discourse has been rearranged in the translation for stylistic reasons. §§† tn: Heb “This pile is a witness and the pillar is a witness, if I go past this pile to you and if you go past this pile and this pillar to me for harm.”

§§‡ tn: The God of Abraham and the god of Nahor. The Hebrew verb translated “judge” is plural, suggesting that Laban has more than one “god” in mind. The Samaritan Pentateuch and the LXX, apparently in an effort to make the statement monotheistic, have a singular verb. In this case one could translate, “May the God of Abraham and the God of Nahor, the God of their father, judge between us.” However, Laban had a polytheistic world view, as evidenced by his possession of household idols (cf. 31:19). The translation uses “God” when referring to Abraham’s God, for Genesis makes it clear that Abraham worshiped the one true God. It employs “god” when referring to Nahor’s god, for in the Hebrew text Laban refers to a different god here, probably one of the local

32 So Jacob went on his way and the angels of God<sup>24</sup> met him. <sup>2</sup> When Jacob saw them, he exclaimed,<sup>25</sup> “This is the camp of God !” So he named that place Mahanaim. <sup>26</sup>

<sup>6</sup> The messengers returned to Jacob and said, “We went to your brother Esau. He is coming to meet you and has four hundred men with him.” <sup>7</sup> Jacob was very afraid and upset. So he divided the people who were with him into two camps, as well as the flocks, herds, and camels. <sup>8</sup> “ If Esau attacks one camp,” <sup>32</sup> he thought, <sup>33</sup> “ then the other camp will be able to escape.” <sup>34</sup>

“the surviving camp will be for escape.” The word “escape” is a feminine noun. The term most often refers to refugees from war. † tn: Heb “said.” †† tn: Heb “the one who said.” ‡ tn: Heb “I will cause good” or “I will treat well [or “favorably].” The idea includes more than prosperity, though that is its essential meaning. Here the form is subordinated to the preceding imperative and indicates purpose or result. Jacob is reminding God of his promise in the hope that God will honor his word. ‡† tn: Heb “the loving deeds and faithfulness” (see 24:27, 49). ‡‡ tn: Heb “you have done with.” ‡‡† tn: Heb “for with my staff.” The Hebrew word מַטְּלֵךְ

brother Esau meets you and asks, ‘To whom do you belong?’<sup>23</sup> Where are you going? Whose herds are you driving?’ <sup>2418</sup> then you must say, <sup>25</sup> ‘They belong<sup>26</sup> to your servant Jacob. <sup>27</sup> They have been sent as a gift to my lord Esau. <sup>28</sup> In fact Jacob himself is behind us.’” <sup>29</sup>

<sup>19</sup> He also gave these instructions to the second and third servants, as well as all those who were following the herds, saying, “You must say the same thing to Esau when you meet him. <sup>3020</sup> You must also say, ‘In fact your servant Jacob is behind us.’”<sup>31</sup> Jacob thought, <sup>32</sup> “I will first appease him<sup>33</sup> by sending a gift ahead of me.<sup>34</sup> After that I will meet him.<sup>35</sup> Perhaps he will accept me.” <sup>3621</sup> So the gifts were sent on ahead of him<sup>37</sup> while he spent that night in the camp. <sup>38</sup>

The Hebrew word מַטְּלֵךְ

<sup>33</sup> tn: Heb “I will appease his face.” The cohortative here expresses Jacob’s resolve. In the Book of Leviticus the Hebrew verb translated “appease” has the idea of removing anger due to sin or guilt, a nuance that fits this passage very well. Jacob wanted to buy Esau off with a gift of more than five hundred and fifty animals. <sup>34</sup> tn: Heb “with a gift going before me.” <sup>35</sup> tn: Heb “I will see his face.” <sup>36</sup> tn: Heb “Perhaps he will lift up my face.” In this context the idiom refers to acceptance. <sup>37</sup> tn: Heb “and the gift passed over upon his face.” <sup>38</sup> tn: The disjunctive clause is circumstantial/temporal. <sup>39</sup> tn: Heb “and he arose in that night and he took.” The first verb is adverbial, indicating that he carried out the crossing right away. <sup>40</sup> tn: The Hebrew term used here is מַטְּלֵךְ

The Hebrew verb translated "struck" has the primary meanings "to touch; to reach; to strike." It can, however, carry the connotation "to harm; to molest; to injure." But when it had gone on long enough, the night visitor touched Jacob and crippled him. Jacob's request for a blessing can only mean that he now knew that his opponent was supernatural. Contrary to many allegorical interpretations of the passage that make fighting equivalent to prayer, this passage shows that Jacob stopped fighting, and then asked for a blessing. ‡‡ tn: Heb "and he said to him." §†† sn: Tell me your name. In primitive thought to know the name of a deity or supernatural being would enable one to use it for magical manipulation or power (A. S. See the note on the name "Peniel" earlier in the verse. <sup>19</sup> tn: Heb "and my soul [= life] has been preserved." sn: I have survived. It was commonly understood that no one could see God and live ( Gen 48:16; Exod 19:21, 24:10; and Judg 6:11, 22). On the surface Jacob seems to be saying that he saw God and survived. But the statement may have a double meaning, in light of his prayer for deliverance in v. 11. Jacob recognizes that he has survived his encounter with God and that his safety has now been guaranteed. <sup>20</sup> tn: Heb "shone."<sup>21</sup> sn: The name is spelled Penuel here, apparently a variant spelling of Peniel (see v. 30). <sup>22</sup> tn: The disjunctive clause draws attention to an important fact: He may have crossed the stream, but he was limping. <sup>23</sup> sn: On the use of the expression to this day, see B. S. Childs, "A Study of the Formula 'Until This Day,'" JBL 82 (1963): 279-92. <sup>24</sup> tn: Or "because the socket of Jacob's hip was struck." <sup>18</sup> After he left Paddan Aram, Jacob came safely to the city of Shechem in the land of Canaan, and he camped near<sup>27</sup> the city. <sup>19</sup> Then he purchased the portion of the field where he had pitched his tent; he bought it<sup>28</sup> from the sons of Hamor, Shechem's father, for a hundred pieces of money. <sup>29</sup><sup>20</sup> There he set up an altar and called it "The God of Israel is God." <sup>30</sup>

But Jacob traveled to Succoth. There are several reasons why Jacob chose not to go to Mt. Seir after Esau. First, as he said, his herds and children probably could not keep up with the warriors. Second, he probably did not fully trust his brother. The current friendliness could change, and he could lose everything. And third, God did tell him to return to his land, not Seir. But Jacob is still not able to deal truthfully, probably because of fear of Esau. <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb "why he called." One could understand "Jacob" as the subject of the verb, but it is more likely that the subject is indefinite, in which case the verb is better translated as passive. <sup>26</sup> sn: The name Succoth means "shelters," an appropriate name in light of the shelters Jacob built there for his livestock. <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb "in front of." <sup>28</sup> tn: The words "he bought it" are supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. In the Hebrew text v. 19 is one long sentence. <sup>29</sup> tn: The Hebrew word קִיּוּטָה

<sup>30</sup> tn: Heb "God, the God of Israel." Rather than translating the name, a number of modern translations merely transliterate it from the Hebrew as "El Elohe Israel" (cf. NIV, NRSV, REB). It is not entirely clear how the name should be interpreted grammatically. One option is to supply an equative verb, as in the translation: "The God of Israel [is] God." Another interpretive option is "the God of Israel [is] strong [or "mighty"]." Buying the land and settling down for a while was a momentous step for the patriarch, so the commemorative naming of the altar is significant. <sup>31</sup> tn: Heb "went out to see." The verb "to see," followed by the preposition אַ

<sup>35</sup> tn: Heb "his soul stuck to [or "joined with"]," meaning Shechem became very attached to Dinah emotionally. <sup>36</sup> tn: Heb "and he spoke to the heart of the young woman," which apparently refers in this context to tender, romantic speech ( Hos 2:14). Another option is to translate the expression "he reassured the young woman" (see Judg 19:3, 2 Sam 19:7; cf. NEB "comforted her"). <sup>37</sup> tn: Heb "Take for me this young woman for a wife." <sup>38</sup> tn: The two disjunctive clauses in this verse ("Now Jacob heard...and his sons were") are juxtaposed to indicate synchronic action. <sup>39</sup> tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Shechem) has been specified in the translation for clarity.

nah, his sons were with the livestock in the field. So Jacob remained silent† until they came in.

† sn: The expected response would be anger or rage; but Jacob remained silent. He appears too indifferent or confused to act decisively. When the leader does not act decisively, the younger zealots will, and often with disastrous results. †† tn: Heb "went out to Jacob to speak with him." The words "about Dinah" are not in the Hebrew text, but are supplied in the translation for clarity. ‡ tn: Heb "when they heard." The words "the news" are supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. ‡† tn: Heb "the men." This sounds as if a new group has been introduced into the narrative, so it has been translated as "they" to indicate that it refers to Jacob's sons, mentioned in the first part of the verse. ‡‡ tn: The Hebrew verb יצב

‡‡† tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Shechem) has been specified in the translation for clarity. ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "a disgraceful thing he did against Israel." § tn: Heb "by lying with the daughter of Jacob." The infinitive here explains the preceding verb, indicating exactly how he had disgraced Jacob. The expression "to lie with" is a euphemism for sexual relations, or in this case, sexual assault. §† tn: Heb "and so it should not be done." The negated imperfect has an obligatory nuance here, but there is also a generalizing tone. The narrator emphasizes that this particular type of crime (sexual assault) is especially reprehensible. §†† tn: Heb "Shechem my son, his soul is attached to your daughter." The verb means "to love" in the sense of being emotionally attached to or drawn to someone. This is a slightly different way of saying what was reported earlier (v. 3). However, there is no mention here of the offense. Even though Hamor is speaking to Dinah's brothers, he refers to her as their daughter (see v. 17). §† tn: Heb "form marriage alliances with us." sn: Intermarry with us. This includes the idea of becoming allied by marriage. The incident foreshadows the temptations Israel would eventually face when they entered the promised land (see Deut 7:3; Josh 23:12). §†† tn: Heb "Give your daughters to us, and take our daughters for yourselves." In the translation the words "let...marry" and "as wives" are supplied for clarity. §† tn: The imperfect verbal form has a permissive nuance here. §† tn: Heb "before you." §§† tn: The verb seems to carry the basic meaning "travel about freely," although the substantival participial form refers to a trader (see E. A. Speiser, "The Verb shEr in Genesis and Early Hebrew Movements," BASOR 164 [1961]: 23-28); cf. NIV, NRSV "trade in it."

The imperatives are used in a rhetorical manner. Shechem's point is that he will pay the price, no matter how expensive it might be. 20 tn: The cohortative expresses Shechem's resolve to have Dinah as his wife. 21 tn: Heb "say." 22 tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Shechem) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 23 tn: Heb "we are not able to do this thing, to give." The second infinitive is in apposition to the first, explaining what they are not able to do. 24 tn: The Hebrew word translated "disgrace" usually means "ridicule; taunt; reproach." It can also refer to the reason the condition of shame or disgrace causes ridicule or a reproach. 25 tn: Heb "if you are like us." 26 tn: The infinitive here explains how they would become like them. 27 tn: The perfect verbal form with the vav ( ו )

So let's consent to their demand, so they will live among us."

<sup>30</sup> Then Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, "You have brought ruin§† on me by making me a foul odor§† among the inhabitants of the land – among the Canaanites and the Perizzites. I§†† am few in number; they will join forces against me and attack me, and both I and my family will be destroyed!"<sup>31</sup> But Simeon and Levi replied, §§† "Should he treat our sister like a common prostitute?"

In this case "secure" means the city was caught unprepared and at peace, not expecting an attack. §† tn: Heb "came upon the slain." Because of this statement the preceding phrase "Jacob's sons" is frequently taken to mean the other sons of Jacob besides Simeon and Levi, but the text does not clearly affirm this. §†† tn: Heb "because they violated their sister." The plural verb is active in form, but with no expressed subject, it may be translated passive. §† tn: Heb "and what was in the city and what was in the field they took." §†† tn: Heb "they took captive and they plundered," that is, "they captured as plunder." §† tn: The traditional translation is "troubled me" (KJV, ASV), but the verb refers to personal or national disaster and suggests complete ruin (see Josh 7:25, Judg 11:35, Prov 11:17). The remainder of the verse describes the "trouble" Simeon and Levi had caused. §† tn: In the causative stem the Hebrew verb שָׁחַד

Then I will make<sup>23</sup> an altar there to God, who responded to me in my time of distress<sup>24</sup> and has been with me wherever I went."<sup>25</sup>

The expression "fear of God" apparently refers (1) to a fear of God (objective genitive; God is the object of their fear). (2) But it could mean "fear from God," that is, fear which God placed in them (cf. NRSV "a terror from God"). Another option (3) is that the divine name is used as a superlative here, referring to "tremendous fear" (cf. This passage stands parallel to Gen 28:18-19, where Jacob set up a sacred stone, poured oil on it, and called the place Bethel. Some commentators see these as two traditions referring to the same event, but it is more likely that Jacob reconsecrated the place in fulfillment of the vow he had made here earlier. In support of this is the fact that the present narrative alludes to and is built on the previous one. § tn: The verb יָרָא

§† sn: Called the name of the place. In view of the previous naming of Bethel in Gen 28:19, here Jacob was confirming or affirming the name through an official ritual marking the fulfillment of the vow. This place now did become Bethel, the house of God. §†† tn: The name Bethel means "house of God" in Hebrew. map: For location see . §† tn: Heb "and there was still a stretch of the land to go to Ephrath." §†† tn: Normally the verb would be translated "she gave birth," but because that obviously had not happened yet, it is better to translate the verb as ingressive, "began to give birth" (cf. NIV) or "went into labor."

Jacob had twelve sons:

These were the sons of Jacob who were born to him in Paddan Aram.

§† tn: The construction uses a Hiphil infinitive, which E. A. Speiser classifies as an elative Hiphil. The contrast is with the previous Piel: there "she had hard labor," and here, "her labor was at its hardest." Failure to see this, Speiser notes, has led to redundant translations and misunderstandings ( Genesis [AB], 273). §† sn: Another son. The episode recalls and fulfills the prayer of Rachel at the birth of Joseph ( Gen 30:24): "may he add" another son. §§† tn: Heb "in the going out of her life, for she was dying." Rachel named the child with her dying breath. §§† sn: The name Ben-Oni means "son of my suffering." It is ironic that Rachel's words to Jacob in Gen 30:1, "Give me children or I'll die," take a different turn here, for it was having the child that brought about her death. §§§ tn: The disjunctive clause is contrastive. sn: His father called him Benjamin. There was a preference for giving children good or positive names in the ancient world, and "son of my suffering" would not do (see the incident in 1 Chr 4:9-10), because it would be a reminder of the death of Rachel (in this connection, see also D. Daube, "The Night of Death," HTR 61 [1968]: 629-32). So Jacob named him Benjamin, which means "son of the [or "my"] right hand." The name Benjamin appears in the Mari texts. There have been attempts to connect this name to the resident tribe listed at Mari, "sons of the south" (since the term "right hand" can also mean "south" in Hebrew), but this assumes a different reading of the story. See J. Muilenburg, "The Birth of Benjamin," JBL 75 (1956): 194-201.

18 sn: This explanatory note links the earlier name Ephrath with the later name Bethlehem. map: For location see . 19 tn: Heb "standing stone." 20 tn: Or perhaps "it is known as" (cf. NEB).

21 sn: The location of Migdal Eder is not given. It appears to be somewhere between Bethlehem and Hebron. Various traditions have identified it as at the shepherds' fields near Bethlehem (the Hebrew name Migdal Eder means "tower of the flock"; see Mic 4:8) or located it near Solomon's pools. 22 tn: Heb "and Reuben went and lay with." The expression "lay with" is a euphemism for having sexual intercourse. sn: Reuben's act of having sexual relations with Bilhah probably had other purposes than merely satisfying his sexual desire. By having sex with Bilhah, Reuben (Leah's oldest son) would have prevented Bilhah from succeeding Rachel as the favorite wife, and by sleeping with his father's concubine he would also be attempting to take over leadership of the clan – something Absalom foolishly attempted later on in Israel's history ( 2 Sam 16:21-22).

23 tn: This is an adverbial accusative of location. 24 tn: The

In the format of the Book of Genesis, the line of Esau is "tidied up" before the account of Jacob is traced ( 37:2). As such the arrangement makes a strong contrast with Jacob. As F. Delitzsch says, "secular greatness in general grows up far more rapidly than spiritual greatness" ( New Commentary on Genesis, 2:238). <sup>2</sup> This is the account of Jacob.

§ tn: Heb "a son of seventeen years." The word "son" is in apposition to the name "Joseph." §† tn: Or "tending"; Heb "shepherd-ing" or "feeding." §†† tn: Or perhaps "a helper." The significance of this statement is unclear. It may mean "now the lad was with," or it may suggest Joseph was like a servant to them. §† tn: Heb "and he [was] a young man with the sons of Bilhah and with the sons of Zilpah, the wives of his father." §†† tn: Heb "their bad report." The pronoun is an objective genitive, specifying that the bad or damaging report was about the brothers. sn: Some interpreters portray Joseph as a tattletale for bringing back a bad report about them [i.e., his brothers], but the entire Joseph story has some of the characteristics of wisdom literature. Joseph is presented in a good light – not because he was perfect, but because the narrative is showing how wisdom rules. In light of that, this section portrays Joseph as faithful to his father in little things, even though unpopular – and so he will eventually be given authority over greater things. §† tn: The disjunctive clause provides supplemental information vital to the story. It explains in part the brothers' animosity toward Joseph. sn: The statement Israel loved Joseph more than all his sons brings forward a motif that played an important role in the family of Isaac – parental favoritism. Jacob surely knew what that had done to him and his brother Esau, and to his own family. But now he showers affection on Rachel's son Joseph. §† tn: Heb "a son of old age was he to him." This expression means "a son born to him when he [i.e., Jacob] was old." §§† tn: It is not clear what this tunic was like, because the meaning of the Hebrew word that describes it is uncertain. The idea that it was a coat of many colors comes from the Greek translation of the OT. An examination of cognate terms in Semitic suggests it was either a coat or tunic with long sleeves (cf. NEB, NRSV), or a tunic that was richly embroidered (cf. NIV). It set Joseph apart as the favored one. §§† tn: Heb "his"; the referent (Joseph) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §§§ tn: Heb "of his brothers." The text gives no warrant for interpreting his manner as arrogant or condescending. It seems normal that he would share a dream with the family. <sup>23</sup> tn: The construction uses a hendiadys, "they added to hate," meaning they hated him even more. <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "hear this dream which I dreamed." <sup>25</sup> tn: All three clauses in this dream report begin with הִנֵּה־

In contrast to all the settled and expanded population of Esau, Jacob was still moving about in the land without a permanent residence and without kings. Even if the Edomite king list was added later (as the reference to kings in Israel suggests), its placement here in contrast to Jacob and his descendants is important. Certainly the text deals with Esau before dealing with Jacob – that is the pattern. But the detail is so great in chap. 36 that the contrast cannot be missed.

<sup>9</sup> Then he had another dream, ‡† and told it to his brothers. "Look," ‡† he said. "I had another dream. bow down to the ground." It is used to describe worship and obedience to masters. † tn: Heb "Ruling, will you rule over us, or reigning, will you reign over us?" The statement has a poetic style, with the two questions being in synonymous parallelism. Both verbs in this statement are preceded by the infinitive absolute, which lends emphasis. It is as if Joseph's brothers said, "You don't really think you will rule over us, do you? You don't really think you will have dominion over us, do you?" †† tn: This construction is identical to the one in Gen 37:5. ‡ sn: The response of Joseph's brothers is understandable, given what has already been going on in the family. But here there is a hint of uneasiness – they hated him because of his dream and because of his words. The dream bothered them, as well as his telling them. And their words in the rhetorical question are ironic, for this is exactly what would happen. The dream was God's way of revealing it. ‡† tn: Heb "And he dreamed yet another dream." ‡†† tn: Heb "and he said, 'Look.'" The order of the introductory clause and the direct discourse have been rearranged in the translation for stylistic reasons. Both clauses of the dream report begin with הִנֵּה

‡†† sn: The question What is this dream that you had? expresses Jacob's dismay at what he perceives to be Joseph's audacity. <sup>‡†††</sup> tn: Heb "Coming, will we come, I and your mother and your brothers, to bow down to you to the ground?" The verb "come" is preceded by the infinitive absolute, which lends emphasis. It is as if Jacob said, "You don't really think we will come...to bow down...do you?" § sn: Joseph's brothers were already jealous of him, but this made it even worse. Such jealousy easily leads to action, as the next episode in the story shows. Yet dreams were considered a form of revelation, and their jealousy was not only of the favoritism of their father, but of the dreams. This is why Jacob kept the matter in mind. §† tn: Heb "kept the word." The referent of the Hebrew term "word" has been specified as "what Joseph said" in the translation for clarity, and the words "in mind" have been supplied for stylistic reasons. §†† tn: The text uses an interrogative clause: "Are not your brothers," which means "your brothers are." §† sn: With these words Joseph is depicted here as an obedient son who is ready to do what his father commands. §†† tn: Heb "and he said, 'Here I am.'" The referent of the pronoun "he" (Joseph) has been specified in the translation for clarity, and the order of the introductory clause and the direct discourse has been rearranged for stylistic reasons. §† tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Jacob) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §† tn: Heb "see." §§† tn: Heb "peace." <sup>§§††</sup> tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Jacob) has been specified in the translation for clarity.

brothers, "What profit is there if we kill our brother and cover up his blood? 27 Come, let's sell him to the Ishmaelites, but let's not lay a hand on him,† for after all, he is our brother, our own flesh." His brothers agreed.<sup>††28</sup> So when the Midianite‡ merchants passed by, Joseph's brothers pulled‡† him‡‡ out of the cistern and sold him to the Ishmaelites for twenty pieces of silver. The Ishmaelites‡‡† then took Joseph to Egypt.

29 Later Reuben returned to the cistern to find that Joseph was not in it!‡‡‡ He tore his clothes,<sup>30</sup> returned to his brothers, and said, "The boy isn't there! And I, where can I go?"<sup>31</sup> So they took Joseph's tunic, killed a young goat,§ and dipped the tunic in the blood.<sup>32</sup> Then they brought the special tunic to their father§† and said, "We found this. Determine now whether it is your son's tunic or not."

33 He recognized it and exclaimed, "It is my son's tunic! A wild animal has eaten him!§†† Joseph has surely been torn to pieces!"<sup>34</sup> Then Jacob tore his clothes, put on sackcloth,§§ and mourned for his son many days.<sup>35</sup> All his sons and daughters stood by§†† him to console him, but he refused to be consoled. "No," he said, "I will go to the grave mourning my son."§† So Joseph's§‡ father wept for him.

§† tn: Heb "and they sent the special tunic and they brought [it] to their father." The text as it stands is problematic. It sounds as if they sent the tunic on ahead and then came and brought it to their father. Some emend the second verb to a Qal form and read "and they came." In this case, they sent the tunic on ahead. §†† sn: A wild animal has eaten him. Jacob draws this conclusion on his own without his sons actually having to lie with their words (see v. 20). She gave birth to him in Kezib. 29

6 Judah acquired<sup>30</sup> a wife for Er his firstborn; her name was Tamar. 7 But Er, Judah's firstborn, was evil in the LORD's sight, so the LORD killed him.

8 Then Judah said to Onan, "Have sexual relations with<sup>31</sup> your brother's wife and fulfill the duty of a brother-in-law to her so that you may raise<sup>32</sup> up a descendant for your brother." 339 But Onan knew that the child<sup>34</sup> would not be considered his.<sup>35</sup> So whenever 36 he had sexual relations with<sup>37</sup> his brother's wife, he withdrew prematurely<sup>38</sup> so as not to give his brother a descendant. 10 What he did was evil in the LORD's sight, so the LORD<sup>39</sup> killed him too.

Thus the term refers to a woman who did not marry, but was dedicated to temple service as a cult prostitute. The masculine form of this noun is used for male cult prostitutes. Judah thought he had gone to an ordinary prostitute (v. 15); but Hirah went looking for a cult prostitute, perhaps because it had been a sheep-shearing festival. For further discussion see E. M. Judah had been irresponsible and unfaithful to his duty to see that the family line continued through the levirate marriage of his son Shelah. Tamar fought for her right to be the mother of Judah's line. When she was not given Shelah and Judah's wife died, she took action on her own to ensure that the line did not die out. Though deceptive, it was a desperate and courageous act. For Tamar it was within her rights; she did nothing that the law did not entitle her to do. But for Judah it was wrong because he thought he was going to a prostitute. † tn: Heb "How you have made a breach for yourself!" The Hebrew verb translated "make a breach" frequently occurs, as here, with a cognate accusative. The event provided the meaningful name Perez, "he who breaks through." †† sn: The name Perez means "he who breaks through," referring to Perez reaching out his hand at birth before his brother was born. The naming signified the completion of Tamar's struggle and also depicted the destiny of the tribe of Perez who later became dominant ( Gen 46:12 and Num 26:20). Judah and his brothers had sold Joseph into slavery, thinking they could thwart God's plan that the elder brothers should serve the younger. God demonstrated that principle through these births in Judah's own family, affirming that the elder will serve the younger, and that Joseph's leadership could not so easily be set aside. See J. Goldin, "The Youngest Son; or, Where Does Genesis 38 Belong?" JBL 96 (1977): 27-44. ‡ sn: Perhaps the child was named Zerah because of the scarlet thread. Though the Hebrew word used for "scarlet thread" in v. 28 is not related to the name Zerah, there is a related root in Babylonian and western Aramaic that means "scarlet" or "scarlet thread." In Hebrew the name appears to be derived from a root meaning "to shine." The name could have originally meant something like "shining one" or "God has shined." Zerah became the head of a tribe ( Num 26:20) from whom Achan descended ( Josh 7:1). †† tn: The disjunctive clause resumes the earlier narrative pertaining to Joseph by recapitulating the event described in 37:36. Here the expression "lie with" is a euphemism for sexual intercourse. sn: The story of Joseph and Potiphar's wife has long been connected with the wisdom warnings about the strange woman who tries to seduce the young man with her boldness and directness (see Prov 5-7, especially 7:6-27). This is part of the literary background of the story of Joseph that gives it a wisdom flavor. See G. von Rad, God at Work in Israel, 19-35; and G. W. <sup>19</sup> When his master heard his wife say,§† "This is the way§†† your slave treated me,"§‡ he became furious. <sup>§††20</sup> Joseph's master took him and threw him into the prison,§† the place where the king's prisoners were confined. So he was there in the prison.§‡

<sup>21</sup> But the LORD was with Joseph and showed him kindness. §§† He granted him favor in the sight of the prison warden. <sup>§§‡22</sup> The warden put all the prisoners under Joseph's care. They spent some time in custody. <sup>255</sup> Both of them, the cupbearer and the baker of the king of Egypt, who were confined in the prison, had a dream<sup>26</sup> the same night. <sup>27</sup> Each man's dream had its own meaning. <sup>286</sup> When Joseph came to them in the morning, he saw that they were looking depressed. <sup>297</sup> So he asked Pharaoh's officials, who were with him in custody in his master's house, "Why do you look so sad today?" <sup>308</sup> They told him, "We both had dreams,<sup>31</sup> but there is no one to interpret them." Joseph responded, "Don't interpretations belong to God? Tell them<sup>32</sup> to me."

<sup>9</sup> So the chief cupbearer told his dream to Joseph:<sup>33</sup> "In my dream, there was a vine in front of me. <sup>10</sup> On the vine there were three branches. As it budded, its blossoms opened and its clusters ripened into grapes. <sup>11</sup> Now Pharaoh's cup was in my hand, so I took the grapes, squeezed them into his<sup>34</sup> cup, and put the cup in Pharaoh's hand." <sup>35</sup>

<sup>12</sup> "This is its meaning," Joseph said to him. "The three branches represent<sup>36</sup> three days. <sup>13</sup> In three more days Pharaoh will reinstate you<sup>37</sup> and restore you to your office. heads of grain represent seven years. Both dreams have the same meaning. 2627 The seven lean, bad-looking cows that came up after them represent seven years, as do the seven empty heads of grain burned with the east wind. They represent<sup>27</sup> seven years of famine. 28 This is just what I told<sup>28</sup> Pharaoh : God has shown Pharaoh what he is about to do. 29 Seven years of great abundance are coming throughout the whole land of Egypt. 30 But seven years of famine will occur<sup>29</sup> after them, and all the abundance will be forgotten in the land of Egypt. The famine will devastate<sup>30</sup> the land. 31 The previous abundance of the land will not be remembered<sup>31</sup> because of the famine that follows, for the famine will be very severe. 3232 The dream was repeated to Pharaoh<sup>33</sup> because the matter has been decreed<sup>34</sup> by God, and God will make it happen soon. 35 33 “ So now Pharaoh should look<sup>36</sup> for a wise and discerning man<sup>37</sup> and give him authority<sup>38</sup> over all the land of Egypt. 34 Pharaoh should do<sup>39</sup> this – he should appoint 40 officials 41 throughout the land to collect one-fifth of the produce of the land of Egypt 42 during the seven years of abundance. 35 They should gather all the excess food<sup>43</sup> during these good years that are coming. By Pharaoh’s authority<sup>44</sup> they should store up grain so the cities will have food, 45 and they should preserve it. 4636 This food should be held in storage for the land in preparation for the seven years of famine that will occur throughout the land of Egypt. In this way the land will survive the famine.” 47 tn: Heb “declared.” 25 tn: The active participle here indicates what is imminent. 26 tn: Heb “one dream it is.” 27 tn: Heb “are.” Another option is to translate, “There will be seven years of famine.” 28 tn: Heb “it is the word that I spoke.” 29 tn: The perfect with the vav consecutive continues the time frame of the preceding participle, which has an imminent future nuance here. 30 tn: The Hebrew verb לָקַח

31 tn: Heb “known.” 32 tn: Or “heavy.” 33 tn: Heb “and concerning the repeating of the dream to Pharaoh two times.” The Niphal infinitive here is the object of the preposition; it is followed by the subjective genitive “of the dream.” 34 tn: Heb “established.” 35 tn: The clause combines a participle and an infinitive construct: God “is hurrying...to do it,” meaning he is going to do it soon. 36 tn: Heb “let Pharaoh look.” The jussive form expresses Joseph’s advice to Pharaoh. 37 tn: Heb “a man discerning and wise.” The order of the terms is rearranged in the translation for stylistic reasons. 38 tn: Heb “and let him set him.” 39 tn: The imperfect verbal form has an obligatory nuance here. The Samaritan Pentateuch has a jussive form here, “and let [Pharaoh] do.” 40 tn: Heb “and let him appoint.” The jussive form expresses Joseph’s advice to Pharaoh. 41 tn: Heb “appointees.” The noun is a cognate accusative of the preceding verb. Since “appoint appointees” would be redundant in English, the term “officials” was used in the translation instead. 42 tn: Heb “and he shall collect a fifth of the land of Egypt.” The language is figurative (metonymy); it means what the land produces, i.e., the harvest. 43 tn: Heb “all the food.” 44 tn: Heb “under the hand of Pharaoh.” 45 tn: Heb “[for] food in the cities.” The noun translated “food” is an adverbial accusative in the sentence. 46 tn: The perfect with vav ( ו )

47 tn: Heb “and the land will not be cut off in the famine.”

<sup>37</sup> This advice made sense to Pharaoh and all his officials. <sup>†38</sup> So Pharaoh asked his officials, "Can we find a man like Joseph,†† one in whom the Spirit of God is present?" <sup>‡39</sup> So Pharaoh said to Joseph, "Because God has enabled you to know all this, there is no one as wise and discerning‡† as you are! <sup>40</sup> You will oversee my household, and all my people will submit to your commands.‡ Only I, the king, will be greater than you. ‡‡

† tn: Heb "and the matter was good in the eyes of Pharaoh and in the eyes of all his servants." †† tn: Heb "like this," but the referent could be misunderstood to be a man like that described by Joseph in v. 33, rather than Joseph himself. For this reason the proper name "Joseph" has been supplied in the translation. ‡ tn: The rhetorical question expects the answer "No, of course not!" ‡† tn: Heb "as discerning and wise." The order has been rearranged in the translation for stylistic reasons. ‡‡ tn: Heb "and at your mouth (i.e., instructions) all my people will kiss." G. J. Wenham translates this "shall kowtow to your instruction" ( Genesis [WBC], 2:395). Although there is some textual support for reading "will be judged, ruled by you," this is probably an attempt to capture the significance of this word. Wenham lists a number of references where individuals have tried to make connections with other words or expressions – such as a root meaning "order themselves" lying behind "kiss," or an idiomatic idea of "kiss" meaning "seal the mouth," and so "be silent and submit to." See K. A. Kitchen, "The Term Nsq in Genesis 41:40," ExpTim 69 (1957): 30; D. S. Sperling, "Genesis 41:40: A New Interpretation," JANESCU 10 (1978): 113-19. ‡‡† tn: Heb "only the throne, I will be greater than you." ‡‡‡ tn: The translation assumes that the perfect verbal form is descriptive of a present action. Another option is to understand it as rhetorical, in which case Pharaoh describes a still future action as if it had already occurred in order to emphasize its certainty. In this case one could translate "I have placed" or "I will place." The verb נָתַן

Many recent commentators have followed the proposal of G. <sup>53</sup> The seven years of abundance in the land of Egypt came to an end. <sup>54</sup> Then the seven years of famine began, †† just as Joseph had predicted. There was famine in all the other lands, but throughout the land of Egypt there was food. <sup>55</sup> When all the land of Egypt experienced the famine, the people cried out to Pharaoh for food. Pharaoh said to all the people of Egypt, †† “Go to Joseph and do whatever he tells you.”

<sup>56</sup> While the famine was over all the earth, †† Joseph opened the storehouses†† and sold grain to the Egyptians. The famine was severe throughout the land of Egypt. <sup>57</sup> People from every country††† came to Joseph in Egypt to buy grain because the famine was severe throughout the earth.

42 When Jacob heard††† there was grain in Egypt, he<sup>s</sup> said to his sons, “Why are you looking at each other?” ††† He then said, “Look, I hear that there is grain in Egypt. Go down there and buy grain for us††† so that we may live †† and not die.” †††

<sup>3</sup> So ten of Joseph’s brothers went down to buy grain from Egypt. <sup>4</sup> But Jacob did not send Joseph’s brother Benjamin with his brothers, †† for he said, †† “What if some accident††† happens ††† to him?” <sup>5</sup> So Israel’s sons came to buy grain among the other travelers, ††† for the famine was severe in the land of Canaan.

Note that the following verb is plural in form, indicating that the inhabitants of the earth are in view. †††† tn: Heb “saw.” †††† tn: Heb “Jacob.” Here the proper name has been replaced by the pronoun (“he”) in the translation for stylistic reasons. †††† sn: Why are you looking at each other? The point of Jacob’s question is that his sons should be going to get grain rather than sitting around doing nothing. Jacob, as the patriarch, still makes the decisions for the whole clan. †††† tn: Heb “and buy for us from there.” The word “grain,” the direct object of “buy,” has been supplied for clarity, and the words “from there” have been omitted in the translation for stylistic reasons. †††† tn: Following the imperatives, the prefixed verbal form with prefixed vav expresses purpose of result. †††† tn: The imperfect tense continues the nuance of the verb before it. †††† tn: Heb “But Benjamin, the brother of Joseph, Jacob did not send with his brothers.” The disjunctive clause highlights the contrast between Benjamin and the other ten. †††† tn: The Hebrew verb אָמַר

<sup>8</sup> Joseph recognized his brothers, but they did not recognize him. <sup>9</sup> Then Joseph remembered<sup>24</sup> the dreams he had dreamed about them, and he said to them, “You are spies; you have come to see if our land is vulnerable!” <sup>25</sup>

<sup>14</sup> But Joseph told them, “It is just as I said to you.<sup>31</sup> You are spies! <sup>15</sup> You will be tested in this way: As surely as Pharaoh lives, <sup>32</sup> you will not depart from this place unless your youngest brother comes here. <sup>16</sup> One of you must go and get<sup>33</sup> your brother, while<sup>34</sup> the rest of you remain in prison. <sup>35</sup> In this way your words

<sup>18</sup> tn: The disjunctive clause either introduces a new episode in the unfolding drama or provides the reader with supplemental information necessary to understanding the story. <sup>19</sup> sn: Joseph’s brothers came and bowed down before him. Here is the beginning of the fulfillment of Joseph’s dreams (see Gen 37). But it is not the complete fulfillment, since all his brothers and his parents must come. The point of the dream, of course, was not simply to get the family to bow to Joseph, but that Joseph would be placed in a position of rule and authority to save the family and the world (41:57). <sup>20</sup> tn: The word “faces” is an adverbial accusative, so the preposition has been supplied in the translation. <sup>21</sup> sn: But pretended to be a stranger. Joseph intends to test his brothers to see if they have changed and have the integrity to be patriarchs of the tribes of Israel. He will do this by putting them in the same situations that they and he were in before. The first test will be to awaken their conscience. <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb “said.” <sup>23</sup> tn: The verb is denominative, meaning “to buy grain”; the word “food” could simply be the direct object, but may also be an adverbial accusative. <sup>24</sup> sn: You are spies. Joseph wanted to see how his brothers would react if they were accused of spying. <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb “to see the nakedness of the land you have come.” <sup>26</sup> tn: Heb “and they said to him.” In context this is best understood as an exclamation. <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb “and he said, ‘No, for the nakedness of the land you have come to see.’” The order of the introductory clause and the direct discourse has been rearranged in the translation for clarity. <sup>28</sup> tn: Heb “twelve [were] your servants, brothers [are] we.” <sup>29</sup> tn: Heb “today.” <sup>30</sup> tn: Heb “and the one is not.” <sup>31</sup> tn: Heb “to you, saying.” <sup>32</sup> tn: Heb “[By] the life of Pharaoh.” sn: As surely as Pharaoh lives. Joseph uses an oath formula to let the brothers know the certainty of what he said. There is some discussion in the commentaries on swearing by the life of Pharaoh, but since the formulation here reflects the Hebrew practice, it would be hard to connect the ideas exactly to Egyptian practices. Joseph did this to make the point in a way that his Hebrew brothers would understand. See M. R. Lehmann, “Biblical Oaths,” ZAW 81 (1969): 74-92. <sup>33</sup> tn: Heb

"send from you one and let him take." After the imperative, the prefixed verbal form with prefixed vav ( ו ) <sup>34</sup>
 tn: The disjunctive clause is here circumstantial-temporal. <sup>35</sup> tn: Heb "bound." † tn: The words "to see" have been supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. †† tn: Heb "the truth [is] with you." ‡ sn: The same Hebrew word is used for Joseph's imprisonment in 40:3, 4, 7. There is some mirroring going on in the narrative. The Hebrew word used here ( וָרָחַץ )

††† sn: For I fear God. Joseph brings God into the picture to awaken his brothers' consciences. The godly person cares about the welfare of people, whether they live or die. So he will send grain back, but keep one of them in Egypt. This action contrasts with their crime of selling their brother into slavery. ††† tn: Heb "bound in the house of your prison." § tn: The disjunctive clause is circumstantial-temporal. §† tn: Heb "[for] the hunger of your households." §†† tn: The imperfect here has an injunctive force. §‡ tn: After the injunctive imperfect, this imperfect with vav indicates purpose or result. §†† tn: The Niphal form of the verb has the sense of "to be faithful; to be sure; to be reliable." Joseph will test his brothers to see if their words are true. §† tn: Heb "and they did so." §‡ tn: Heb "a man to his neighbor." §§† tn: Or "we are guilty"; the Hebrew word can also refer to the effect of being guilty, i.e., "we are being punished for guilt." §§‡ tn: Heb "the distress of his soul." §§§ sn: The repetition of the Hebrew noun translated distress draws attention to the fact that they regard their present distress as appropriate punishment for their refusal to ignore their brother when he was in distress. <sup>18</sup> tn: Heb "and also his blood, look, it is required." God requires compensation, as it were, from those who shed innocent blood (see Gen 9:6). In other words, God exacts punishment for the crime of murder. <sup>19</sup> tn: The disjunctive clause provides supplemental information that is important to the story. <sup>20</sup> tn: "was listening." The brothers were not aware that Joseph could understand them as they spoke the preceding words in their native language. <sup>21</sup> tn: Heb "for [there was] an interpreter between them." On the meaning of the word here translated "interpreter" see HALOT 590 s.v. וְרָחַץ

<sup>29</sup> They returned to their father Jacob in the land of Canaan and told him all the things that had happened to them, saying, <sup>30</sup> "The man, the lord of the land, spoke harshly to us and treated us<sup>34</sup> as if we were <sup>35</sup> spying on the land. <sup>31</sup> But we said to him, 'We are honest men; we are not spies!' <sup>32</sup> We are from a family of twelve brothers; we are the sons of one father. <sup>36</sup> One is no longer alive,<sup>37</sup> and the youngest is with our father at this time<sup>38</sup> in the land of Canaan."

<sup>33</sup> "Then the man, the lord of the land, said to us, 'This is how I will find out if you are honest men. Leave one of your brothers with me, and take grain<sup>39</sup> for your hungry households and go. <sup>34</sup> But bring your youngest brother back to me so I will know<sup>40</sup> that you are honest men and not spies. <sup>41</sup> Then I will give your

<sup>31</sup> tn: Heb "and their heart went out." Since this expression is used only here, the exact meaning is unclear. The following statement suggests that it may refer to a sudden loss of emotional strength, so "They were dismayed" adequately conveys the meaning (cf. NRSV); NIV has "Their hearts sank." <sup>32</sup> tn: Heb "and they trembled, a man to his neighbor." <sup>33</sup> tn: Heb "What is this God has done to us?" The demonstrative pronoun ("this") adds emphasis to the question. <sup>34</sup> tn: Heb "made us." <sup>35</sup> tn: The words "if we were" have been supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. <sup>36</sup> tn: Heb "twelve [were] we, brothers, sons of our father [are] we." <sup>37</sup> tn: Heb "the one is not." <sup>38</sup> tn: Heb "today." <sup>39</sup> tn: The word "grain" is not in the Hebrew text, but has been supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. <sup>40</sup> tn: After the imperative, the cohortative with prefixed vav indicates purpose/result. <sup>41</sup> tn: Heb "that you are not spies, that you are honest men."

brother back to you and you may move about freely in the land.”†

<sup>35</sup> When they were emptying their sacks, there was each man's bag of money in his sack ! When they and their father saw the bags of money, they were afraid.

<sup>37</sup> Then Reuben said to his father, “You may‡‡ put my two sons to death if I do not bring him back to you. Put him in my care‡‡‡ and I will bring him back to you.”

<sup>38</sup> But Jacob‡‡‡ replied, “My son will not go down there with you, for his brother is dead and he alone is left. § If an accident happens to him on the journey you have to make, then you will bring down my gray hair§† in sorrow to the grave.” §††

43 Now the famine was severe in the land. <sup>§‡2</sup> When they finished eating the grain they had brought from Egypt, their father said to them, “Return, buy us a little more food.”

answered him in this way. <sup>20</sup> How could we possibly know<sup>21</sup> that he would say, <sup>22</sup> ‘ Bring your brother down?’”

<sup>8</sup> Then Judah said to his father Israel, “Send the boy with me and we will go immediately. <sup>23</sup> Then we will live<sup>24</sup> and not die – we and you and our little ones. <sup>9</sup> I myself pledge security<sup>25</sup> for him; you may hold me liable. If I do not bring him back to you and place him here before you, I will bear the blame before you all my life. <sup>26</sup><sup>10</sup> But if we had not delayed, we could have traveled there and back<sup>27</sup> twice by now!”

<sup>11</sup> Then their father Israel said to them, “If it must be so, then do this : Take some of the best products of the land in your bags, and take a gift down to the man – a little balm and a little honey, spices and myrrh, pistachios and almonds. <sup>12</sup> Take double the money with you;<sup>28</sup> you must take back<sup>29</sup> the money that was returned in the mouths of your sacks – perhaps it was an oversight. <sup>13</sup> Take your brother too, and go right away<sup>30</sup> to the man. <sup>31</sup><sup>14</sup> May the sovereign God<sup>32</sup> grant you mercy before the man so that he may release<sup>33</sup> your other brother<sup>34</sup> and Benjamin ! As for me, if I lose my children I lose them.” <sup>35</sup> terrogation, whether he asked the specific questions or not. That may be twisting the truth to protect themselves, not wanting to admit that they volunteered the information. (They admitted as much in 42:31, but now they seem to be qualifying that comment.) On the other hand, when speaking to Joseph later (see 44:19), Judah claims that Joseph asked for the information about their family, making it possible that 42:13 leaves out some of the details of their first encounter. <sup>20</sup> tn: Heb “and we told to him according to these words.” <sup>21</sup> tn: The infinitive absolute emphasizes the imperfect verbal form, which here is a historic future (that is, future from the perspective of a past time). <sup>22</sup> tn: Once again the imperfect verbal form is used as a historic future (that is, future from the perspective of past time). <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb “and we will rise up and we will go.” The first verb is adverbial and gives the expression the sense of “we will go immediately.” <sup>24</sup> tn: After the preceding cohortatives, the prefixed verbal form (either imperfect or cohortative) with the prefixed conjunction here indicates purpose or result. <sup>25</sup> tn: The pronoun before the first person verbal form draws attention to the subject and emphasizes Judah's willingness to be personally responsible for the boy. <sup>26</sup> sn: I will bear the blame before you all my life. It is not clear how this would work out if Benjamin did not come back. But Judah is offering his life for Benjamin's if Benjamin does not return. <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb “we could have returned.” <sup>28</sup> tn: Heb “in your hand.” <sup>29</sup> tn: Heb “take back in your hand.” The imperfect verbal form probably has an injunctive or obligatory force here, since Jacob is instructing his sons. <sup>30</sup> tn: Heb “arise, return,” meaning “get up and go back,” or “go back immediately.” <sup>31</sup> sn: The man refers to the Egyptian official, whom the reader or hearer of the narrative knows is Joseph. In this context both the sons and Jacob refer to him simply as “the man” (see vv. 3-7). <sup>32</sup> tn: Heb “El Shaddai.” See the extended note on the phrase “sovereign God” in Gen 17:1. <sup>33</sup> tn: Heb “release to you.” After the jussive this perfect verbal form with prefixed vav (

<sup>15</sup> So the men took these gifts, and they took double the money with them, along with Benjamin. Then they hurried down to Egypt† and stood before Joseph. <sup>16</sup> When Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to the servant who was over his household, "Bring the men to the house. Slaughter an animal and prepare it, for the men will eat with me at noon." <sup>17</sup> The man did just as Joseph said; he†† brought the men into Joseph's house. ‡

<sup>18</sup> But the men were afraid when they were brought to Joseph's house. They said, "We are being brought in because of††† the money that was returned in our sacks last time. ‡‡ He wants to capture us, ‡‡‡ make us slaves, and take‡‡‡ our donkeys!" <sup>19</sup> So they approached the man who was in charge of Joseph's household and spoke to him at the entrance to the house. <sup>20</sup> They said, "My lord, we did indeed come down§ the first time§† to buy food. <sup>21</sup> But when we came to the place where we spent the night, we opened our sacks and each of us found his money – the full amount§†† – in the mouth of his sack. So we have returned it. §‡‡‡ We have brought additional money with us to buy food. We do not know who put the money in our sacks!"

<sup>23</sup> "Everything is fine," §†† the man in charge of Joseph's household told them. "Don't be afraid. Your God and the God of your father has given you treasure in your sacks. §† I had your money." §‡ Then he brought Simeon out to them.

† tn: Heb "they arose and went down to Egypt." The first verb has an adverbial function and emphasizes that they departed right away. †† tn: Heb "the man." This has been replaced in the translation by the pronoun "he" for stylistic reasons. ‡ sn: This verse is a summary statement. The next verses delineate intermediate steps (see v. 24) in the process. ‡† tn: Heb "over the matter of." ‡†† tn: Heb "in the beginning," that is, at the end of their first visit. ‡††† tn: Heb "to roll himself upon us and to cause himself to fall upon us." The infinitives here indicate the purpose (as viewed by the brothers) for their being brought to Joseph's house. ‡‡‡ tn: The word "take" has been supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. § tn: The infinitive absolute is used for emphasis before the finite verbal form. §† tn: Heb "in the beginning" (see the note on the phrase "last time" in v. 18). §†† tn: Heb "in its weight." §‡ tn: Heb "brought it back in our hand." §‡† tn: Heb "and he said, 'peace to you.'" Here the statement has the force of "everything is fine," or perhaps even "calm down." The referent of "he" (the man in charge of Joseph' household) has been specified in the translation for clarity, and the order of the introductory clause and the direct discourse has been rearranged for stylistic reasons. §† sn: Your God and the God of your father... This is the first clear reference in the story to the theme of divine providence – that God works through the human actions to do his will. §‡ tn: Heb "your money came to me." §§† tn: Heb "the man." §§‡ tn: The construction uses the infinitive construct after the preposition, followed by the subjective genitive. §§§ tn: The action precedes the action of preparing the gift, and so must be translated as past perfect. 18 tn: Heb "eat bread." The imperfect verbal form is used here as a historic future (future from the perspective of the past).

<sup>26</sup> When Joseph came home, they presented him with the gifts they had brought inside, <sup>19</sup> and they bowed down to the ground before him. <sup>27</sup> He asked them how they were doing. <sup>20</sup> Then he said, "Is your aging father well, the one you spoke about? Is he still alive?" <sup>28</sup> "Your servant our father is well," they replied. "He is still alive." They bowed down in humility. <sup>21</sup>

<sup>31</sup> Then he washed his face and came out. With composure he said, <sup>26</sup> "Set out the food." <sup>32</sup> They set a place for him, a separate place for his brothers,<sup>27</sup> and another for the Egyptians who were eating with him. (The Egyptians are not able to eat with Hebrews, for the Egyptians think it is disgusting<sup>28</sup> to do so.) <sup>29</sup><sup>33</sup> They sat before him, arranged by order of birth, beginning with the firstborn and ending with the youngest. <sup>30</sup> The men looked at each other in astonishment. <sup>31</sup><sup>34</sup> He gave them portions of the food set before him, <sup>32</sup> but the portion for Benjamin was five times greater than the portions for any of the others. They drank with Joseph until they all became drunk. <sup>33</sup>

44 He instructed the servant who was over his household, "Fill the sacks of the men with as much food as they can carry and put each man's money in the mouth of his sack. <sup>2</sup> Then put† my cup – the silver cup – in the mouth of the youngest one's sack, along with the money for his grain." He did as Joseph instructed. ††

19 tn: Heb "into the house." 20 tn: Heb "concerning peace." 21 tn: Heb "and they bowed low and they bowed down." The use of synonyms here emphasizes the brothers' humility. 22 tn: Heb "and he lifted his eyes." The referent of "he" (Joseph) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 23 sn: Joseph's language here becomes warmer and more personal, culminating in calling Benjamin my son. 24 tn: Heb "for his affection boiled up concerning his brother." The same expression is used in 1 Kgs 3:26 for the mother's feelings for her endangered child. 25 tn: Heb "and he sought to weep." 26 tn: Heb "and he controlled himself and said." 27 tn: Heb "them"; the referent (Joseph's brothers) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 28 tn: Or "disgraceful." The Hebrew word תועבה

29 tn: Heb "and they set for him by himself, and for them by themselves, and for the Egyptians who were eating with him by themselves, for the Egyptians are not able to eat food with the Hebrews, for it is an abomination for the Egyptians." The imperfect verbal form in the explanatory clause is taken as habitual in force, indicating a practice that was still in effect in the narrator's time. sn: That the Egyptians found eating with foreigners disgusting is well-attested in extra-biblical literature by writers like Herodotus, Diodorus, and Strabo. 30 tn: Heb "the firstborn according to his birthright and the youngest according to his youth." 31 sn: The brothers' astonishment indicates that Joseph arranged them in this way. They were astonished because there was no way, as far as they were concerned, that Joseph could have known the order of their birth. 32 tn: Heb "and he lifted up portions from before his face to them." 33 tn: Heb "and they drank and were intoxicated with him" (cf. NIV "drank freely with him"; NEB "grew merry"; NRSV "were merry"). The brothers were apparently relaxed and set at ease, despite Joseph's obvious favoritism toward Benjamin.

it. <sup>12</sup> Then the man<sup>21</sup> searched. He began with the oldest and finished with the youngest. The cup was found in Benjamin's sack! <sup>13</sup> They all tore their clothes! Then each man loaded his donkey, and they returned to the city.

<sup>14</sup> So Judah and his brothers<sup>22</sup> came back to Joseph's house. He was still there, <sup>23</sup> and they threw themselves to the ground before him. <sup>15</sup> Joseph said to them, "What did you think you were doing <sup>‡24</sup>? Don't you know that a man like me can find out things like this by divination?" <sup>25</sup>

<sup>16</sup> Judah replied, "What can we say<sup>26</sup> to my lord? What can we speak? How can we clear ourselves? <sup>27</sup> God has exposed the sin of your servants! <sup>28</sup> We are now my lord's slaves, we and the one in whose possession the cup was found."

<sup>17</sup> But Joseph said, "Far be it from me to do this! The man in whose hand the cup was found will become my slave, but the rest of<sup>29</sup> you may go back<sup>30</sup> to your father in peace."

<sup>18</sup> Then Judah approached him and said, "My lord, please allow your servant to speak a word with you. <sup>31</sup> Please do not get angry with your servant, <sup>32</sup> for you are just like Pharaoh. <sup>3319</sup> My lord asked his servants, 'Do you have a father or a brother?' <sup>20</sup> We said to my lord, 'We have an aged father, and there is a young boy who was born when our father was old. <sup>34</sup> The

Heb "and they hurried and they lowered." Their speed in doing this shows their presumption of innocence. <sup>21</sup> tn: Heb "and he"; the referent (the man who was in charge of Joseph's household) has been specified in the translation for clarity. <sup>22</sup> sn: Judah and his brothers. The narrative is already beginning to bring Judah to the forefront. <sup>23</sup> tn: The disjunctive clause here provides supplemental information. <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "What is this deed you have done?" The demonstrative pronoun ("this") adds emphasis to the question. A literal translation seems to contradict the following statement, in which Joseph affirms that he is able to divine such matters. Thus here the emotive force of the question has been reflected in the translation, "What did you think you were doing?" <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb "[is] fully able to divine," meaning that he can find things out by divination. The infinitive absolute appears before the finite verb for emphasis, stressing his ability to do this. <sup>26</sup> tn: The imperfect verbal form here indicates the subject's potential. <sup>27</sup> tn: The Hitpael form of the verb <sup>†73</sup>

<sup>28</sup> sn: God has exposed the sin of your servants. The first three questions are rhetorical; Judah is stating that there is nothing they can say to clear themselves. He therefore must conclude that they have been found guilty. <sup>29</sup> tn: The words "the rest of" have been supplied in the translation for clarification and for stylistic reasons. <sup>30</sup> tn: Heb "up" (reflecting directions from their point of view – "up" to Canaan; "down" to Egypt). <sup>31</sup> tn: Heb "Please my lord, let your servant speak a word into the ears of my lord." <sup>32</sup> tn: Heb "and let not your anger burn against your servant." <sup>33</sup> sn: You are just like Pharaoh. Judah's speech begins with the fear and trembling of one who stands condemned. Joseph has as much power as Pharaoh, either to condemn or to pardon. Judah will make his appeal, wording his speech in such a way as to appeal to Joseph's compassion for the father, whom he mentions no less than fourteen times in the speech. <sup>34</sup> tn: Heb "and a small boy of old age," meaning that he was born when his father was elderly.

<sup>21</sup> "Then you told your servants, 'Bring him down to me so I can see† him.'<sup>††22</sup> We said to my lord, 'The boy cannot leave his father. If he leaves his father, his father‡ will die.'<sup>‡†23</sup> But you said to your servants, 'If your youngest brother does not come down with you, you will not see my face again.'<sup>24</sup> When we returned to your servant my father, we told him the words of my lord.

<sup>45</sup> Joseph was no longer able to control himself before all his attendants, <sup>20</sup> so he cried out, "Make everyone go out from my presence!" The tension remains as to how the brothers' wickedness and God's intentions work together. Clearly God is able to transform the actions of wickedness to bring about some gracious end. But this is saying more than that; it is saying that from the beginning it was God who sent Joseph here. Although harmonization of these ideas remains humanly impossible, the divine intention is what should be the focus. Only that will enable reconciliation. <sup>26</sup> tn: Heb "the famine [has been] in the midst of." <sup>27</sup> sn: God sent me. about everything you have seen. But bring my father down here quickly!" †

14 Then he threw himself on the neck of his brother Benjamin and wept, and Benjamin wept on his neck. 15 He kissed all his brothers and wept over them. After this his brothers talked with him.

16 Now it was reported†† in the household of Pharaoh, "Joseph's brothers have arrived." It pleased‡ Pharaoh and his servants. 17 Pharaoh said to Joseph, "Say to your brothers, 'Do this : Load your animals and go‡‡ to the land of Canaan! 18 Get your father and your households and come to me! Then I will give you‡‡ the best land in Egypt and you will eat‡‡‡ the best‡‡‡ of the land.' 19 You are also commanded to say,§'Do this : Take for yourselves wagons from the land of Egypt for your little ones and for your wives. Bring your father and come. 20 Don't worry§† about your belongings, for the best of all the land of Egypt will be yours.'"

21 So the sons of Israel did as he said.§†† Joseph gave them wagons as Pharaoh had instructed, §‡ and he gave them provisions for the journey. 22 He gave sets of clothes to each one of them,§†† but to Benjamin he gave three hundred pieces of silver and five sets of clothes. <sup>§†23</sup> To his father he sent the following :§‡ ten donkeys loaded with the best products of Egypt and ten female donkeys loaded with grain, food, and provisions for his father's journey. 24 Then he sent his brothers on their way and they left. He said to them, "As you travel don't be overcome with fear." §§†

25 So they went up from Egypt and came to their father Jacob in the land of Canaan. <sup>§§†26</sup> They told him, "Joseph is still alive and he is ruler over all the land of Egypt !" Jacob was stunned, §§§ for he did not believe them. 27 But when they related to him everything Joseph had said to them, <sup>18</sup> and when he saw the wagons that Joseph had sent to transport him, their father Jacob's spirit revived. 28 Then Israel said, "Enough ! My son Joseph is still alive ! I will go and see him before I die."

46 So Israel began his journey, taking with him all that he had. <sup>19</sup> When he came to Beer Sheba<sup>20</sup> he offered sacrifices to the God of his father Isaac. 2 God spoke to Israel in a vision during the night<sup>21</sup> and said, "Jacob, Jacob !" He replied, "Here I am!" 3 He said, "I am God, <sup>22</sup> the God of your father. Do not be afraid to go down to Egypt, for I will make you into a great nation there. 4 I will go down with you to Egypt and I myself will certainly bring you back from there.<sup>23</sup> Joseph will close your eyes." <sup>24</sup>

5 Then Jacob started out<sup>25</sup> from Beer Sheba, and the sons of Israel carried their father Jacob, their little children, and their wives in the wagons that Pharaoh had sent along to transport him. 6 Jacob and all his descendants took their livestock and the possessions they had acquired in the land of Canaan, and they went to Egypt. <sup>267</sup> He brought with him to Egypt his sons and grandsons,<sup>27</sup> his daughters and granddaughters – all his descendants.

8 These are the names of the sons of Israel who went to Egypt – Jacob and his sons :
Reuben, the firstborn of Jacob.

9 The sons of Reuben :
Hanoch, Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi.

10 The sons of Simeon :
Jemuel, Jamin, Ohad, Jakin, Zohar, and Shaul (the son of a Canaanite woman).

11 The sons of Levi :
Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

12 The sons of Judah :
Er, Onan, Shelah, Perez, and Zerah
(but Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan ).
The sons of Perez were Hezron and Hamul.

13 The sons of Issachar :

Sered, Elon, and Jahleel.

15 These were the sons of Leah, whom she bore to Jacob in Paddan Aram, along with Dinah his daughter. His sons and daughters numbered thirty-three in all. <sup>30</sup>

The sons of Beriah were Heber and Malkiel.
18 These were the sons of Zilpah, whom Laban gave to Leah his daughter. She bore these to Jacob, sixteen in all.
19 The sons of Rachel the wife of Jacob :
Joseph and Benjamin.
20 Manasseh and Ephraim were born to Joseph in the land of Egypt. Asenath daughter of Potiphera, priest of On, †† bore them to him.

3 Pharaoh said to Joseph's<sup>20</sup> brothers, "What is your occupation?" They said to Pharaoh, "Your servants take care of flocks, just as our ancestors did." 214 Then they said to Pharaoh, "We have come to live as temporary residents<sup>22</sup> in the land. There<sup>23</sup> is no pasture for your servants' flocks because the famine is severe in the land of Canaan. So now, please let your servants live in the land of Goshen."

All††† the years of my life have been few and painful; ‡‡‡ the years of my travels are not as long as those of my ancestors." <sup>§10</sup> Then Jacob blessed Pharaoh and went out from his presence. §†

11 So Joseph settled his father and his brothers. He gave them territory§†† in the land of Egypt, in the best region of the land, the land of Rameses, §‡ just as Pharaoh had commanded. 12 Joseph also provided food for his father, his brothers, and all his father's household, according to the number of their little children.

13 But there was no food in all the land because the famine was very severe; the land of Egypt and the land of Canaan wasted away§†† because of the famine. 14 Joseph collected all the money that could be found in the land of Egypt and in the land of Canaan as payment§† for the grain they were buying. Then Joseph brought the money into Pharaoh's palace. <sup>§†15</sup> When the money from the lands of Egypt and Canaan was used up, all the Egyptians§§† came to Joseph and said, "Give us food! <sup>8</sup> When Israel saw Joseph's sons, he asked, "Who are these?" <sup>9</sup> Joseph said to his father, "They are the<sup>27</sup> sons God has given me in this place." His father<sup>28</sup> said, "Bring them to me so I may bless them." <sup>29</sup><sup>10</sup> Now Israel's eyes were failing<sup>30</sup> because of his age; he was not able to see well. <sup>12</sup> So Joseph moved them from Israel's knees<sup>37</sup> and bowed down with his face to the ground. <sup>13</sup> Joseph positioned them;<sup>38</sup> he put Ephraim on his right hand across from Israel's left hand, and Manasseh on his left hand across from Israel's right hand. The weakness of Israel's sight is one of several connections between this chapter and Gen 27. Here there are two sons, and it appears that the younger is being blessed over the older by a blind old man. While it was by Jacob's deception in chap. 27, here it is with Jacob's full knowledge. <sup>31</sup> tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Joseph) has been specified in the translation for clarity. <sup>32</sup> tn: Heb "them"; the referent (Joseph's sons) has been specified in the translation for clarity. <sup>33</sup> tn: Heb "and he"; the referent (Joseph's father) has been specified in the translation for clarity. <sup>34</sup> tn: On the meaning of the Hebrew verb <sup>לָמַד</sup>

 " May the God before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac walked – the God who has been my shepherd†† all my life long to this day,

 May my name be named in them, †† and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac.
 May they grow into a multitude on the earth."

17 When Joseph saw that his father placed his right hand on Ephraim's head, it displeased him.‡‡‡ So he took his father's hand to move it from Ephraim's head to Manasseh's head. 18 Joseph said to his father, "Not so, my father, for this is the firstborn. Put your right hand on his head."

19 But his father refused and said, "I know, my son, I know. He too will become a nation and he too will become great. In spite of this, his younger brother will be even greater and his descendants will become a multitude‡‡‡ of nations." 20 So he blessed them that day, saying,

" By you<sup>s</sup> will Israel bless, †† saying,

 †† tn: Heb "shepherded me." The verb has been translated as an English noun for stylistic reasons. ‡ sn: The Samaritan Pentateuch reads "king" here, but the traditional reading ("angel") may be maintained. Jacob closely associates God with an angelic protective presence. This does not mean that Jacob viewed his God as a mere angel, but it does suggest that he was aware of an angelic presence sent by God to protect him. Here he so closely associates the two that they become virtually indistinguishable. In this culture messengers typically carried the authority of the one who sent them and could even be addressed as such. Perhaps Jacob thought that the divine blessing would be mediated through this angelic messenger.

Issachar would work ( become a slave laborer) for the Canaanites, a reversal of the oracle on Canaan. See C. M. Carmichael, "Some Sayings in Genesis 49," JBL 88 (1969): 435-44; and S. 28 These‡† are the twelve tribes of Israel. This is what their father said to them when he blessed them. He gave each of them an appropriate blessing. ‡††

29 Then he instructed them, ‡†† "I am about to go‡‡‡ to my people. Bury me with my fathers in the cave in the field of Ephron the Hittite. ‡† It is the cave in the field of Machpelah, near Mamre in the land of Canaan, which Abraham bought for a burial plot from Ephron the Hittite. ‡† There they buried Abraham and his wife Sarah; there they buried Isaac and his wife Rebekah; and there I buried Leah. ‡† The field and the cave in it were acquired from the sons of Heth." 18

33 When Jacob finished giving these instructions to his sons, he pulled his feet up onto the bed, breathed his last breath, and went<sup>19</sup> to his people.

50 Then Joseph hugged his father's face. ‡† He wept over him and kissed him. ‡† Joseph instruct- ed the physicians in his service<sup>21</sup> to embalm his father, so the physicians embalmed Israel. ‡† They took forty days, for that is the full time needed for embalming. ‡† The Egyptians mourned<sup>23</sup> for him seventy days. ‡†

4 When the days of mourning<sup>25</sup> had passed, Joseph said to Pharaoh's royal court, ‡† "If I have found favor in your sight, please say to Pharaoh, ‡†<sup>275</sup> ' My father made me swear an oath. He said, ‡† " I am about to die. Bury me<sup>29</sup> in my tomb that I dug for myself there in the land of Canaan." However, there is no known connection between these sons of Heth, apparently a Canaanite group (see Gen 10:15), and the Hittites of Asia Minor. See H. A. Hoffner, Jr., "Hittites," Peoples of the Old Testa- ment World, 152-53. 19 tn: Heb "was gathered." 20 tn: Heb "fell on." This probably refers to a time of national mourning. 25 tn: Heb "weeping." 26 tn: Heb "the house of Pharaoh." 27 tn: Heb "in the ears of Pharaoh." 28 tn: Heb "saying." 29 tn: The imper- fect verbal form here has the force of a command. 30 tn: Heb "he made you swear on oath." 31 tn: Or "dignitaries"; Heb "el- ders." 32 tn: Heb "camp." 33 sn: The location of the threshing with very great and bitter sorrow. † There Joseph observed a seven day period of mourning for his father.

*floor of Atad is not certain. The expression the other side of the Jordan could refer to the eastern or western bank, depending on one's perspective. him, Joseph wept. <sup>‡†18</sup> Then his brothers also came and threw themselves down before him; they said, "Here we are; we are your slaves." <sup>19</sup> But Joseph answered them, "Don't be afraid. Am‡†† I in the place of God? <sup>20</sup> As for you, you meant to harm me,‡‡ but God intended it for a good purpose, so he could preserve the lives of many people, as you can see this day. <sup>‡††21</sup> So now, don't be afraid. I will provide for you and your little children." Then he consoled them and spoke kindly‡† to them.

<sup>24</sup> Then Joseph said to his brothers, "I am about to die. But God will surely come to you‡‡‡ and lead you up from this land to the land he swore on oath to give<sup>18</sup> to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob." <sup>25</sup> Joseph made the sons of Israel swear an oath. He said, "God will surely come to you. Then you must carry my bones up from this place." <sup>26</sup> So Joseph died at the age of 110. <sup>19</sup> After they embalmed him, his body<sup>20</sup> was placed in a coffin in Egypt.

Blessing during Bondage in Egypt †

† sn: Chapter 1 introduces the theme of bondage in Egypt and shows the intensifying opposition to the fulfillment of promises given earlier to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. The first seven verses announce the theme of Israel's prosperity in Egypt. The second section (vv. 8-14) reports continued prosperity in the face of deliberate opposition. The third section (vv. 15-21) explains the prosperity as divine favor in spite of Pharaoh's covert attempts at controlling the population. The final verse records a culmination in the developing tyranny and provides a transition to the next section – Pharaoh commands the open murder of the males. The power of God is revealed in the chapter as the people flourish under the forces of evil. However, by the turn of affairs at the end of the chapter, the reader is left with a question about the power of God – “What can God do?” This is good Hebrew narrative, moving the reader through tension after tension to reveal the sovereign power and majesty of the LORD

§ sn: Gen 46 describes in more detail Jacob's coming to Egypt with his family. The Greek text of Exod 1:5 and of Gen 46:27 and two Qumran manuscripts, have the number as seventy-five, counting the people a little differently. E. H. Merrill in conjunction with F. Delitzsch notes that the list in Gen 46 of those who entered Egypt includes Hezron and Hamul, who did so in potentia, since they were born after the family entered Egypt. Joseph's sons

Joseph §† and his brothers and all that generation died. 7 The Israelites, §†† however, §† were fruitful, increased greatly, multiplied, and became extremely strong, §† so that the land was filled with them.

The disjunctive word order in Hebrew draws attention to the fact that Joseph, in contrast to his brothers, did not come to Egypt at the same time as Jacob. §†† tn: The text simply uses the vav ( ו )

§† tn: The verse has a singular verb, “and Joseph died, and all his brothers, and all that generation.” Typical of Hebrew style the verb need only agree with the first of a compound subject. sn: Since the deaths of “Joseph and his brothers and all that generation” were common knowledge, their mention must serve some rhetorical purpose. In contrast to the flourishing of Israel, there is death. This theme will appear again: In spite of death in Egypt, the nation flourishes. §†† tn: Heb “the sons of Israel.” §† tn: The disjunctive vav marks a contrast with the note about the deaths of the first generation. §† tn: Using קָאָד

§†† sn: Many scholars assume that because this city was named Rameses, the Pharaoh had to be Rameses II, and hence that a late date for the exodus (and a late time for the sojourn in Egypt) is proved. But if the details of the context are taken as seriously as the mention of this name, this cannot be the case. If one grants for the sake of discussion that Rameses II was on the throne and oppressing Israel, it is necessary to note that Moses is not born yet. It would take about twenty or more years to build the city, then eighty more years before Moses appears before Pharaoh (Rameses), and then a couple of years for the plagues - this man would have been Pharaoh for over a hundred years. That is clearly not the case for the historical Rameses II. But even more determining is the fact that whoever the Pharaoh was for whom the Israelites built the trea-

The Bible says that when Moses grew up and killed the Egyptian, he fled from Pharaoh (whoever that was) and remained in exile until he heard that that Pharaoh had died. So this verse cannot be used for a date of the exodus in the days of Rameses, unless many other details in the chapters are ignored. If it is argued that Rameses was the Pharaoh of the oppression, then his successor would have been the Pharaoh of the exodus. Rameses reigned from 1304 B.C.

They simply followed a higher authority that prohibited killing. Fearing God is a basic part of the true faith that leads to an obedient course of action and is not terrified by worldly threats. There probably was enough truth in what they were saying to be believable, but they clearly had no intention of honoring the king by participating in murder, and they saw no reason to give him a straightforward answer. Finally, with this decree, he throws off any subtlety and commands the open extermination of Hebrew males. The verse forms a transition to the next chapter, in which Moses is saved by Pharaoh’s own daughter. These chapters show that the king’s efforts to destroy the strength of Israel – so clearly a work of God – met with failure again and again. And that failure involved the efforts of women, whom Pharaoh did not consider a threat. §§§ sn: The chapter records the exceptional survival of Moses under the decree of death by Pharaoh (vv. 1-10), the flight of Moses from Pharaoh after killing the Egyptian (vv. 11-15), the marriage of Moses (vv. 16-22), and finally a note about the LORD

It may be connected to the Egyptian word for "chest." †† sn: The circumstances of the saving of the child Moses have prompted several attempts by scholars to compare the material to the Sargon myth. See R. F. Johnson, IDB 3:440-50; for the text see L. W. King, Chronicles concerning Early Babylonian Kings, 2:87-90. Those who see the narrative using the Sargon story's pattern would be saying that the account presents Moses in imagery common to the ancient world's expectations of extraordinary achievement and deliverance. In the Sargon story the infant's mother set him adrift in a basket in a river; he was loved by the gods and destined for greatness. Saying Israel used this to invent the account in Exodus would undermine its reliability. But there are other difficulties with the Sargon comparison, not the least of which is the fact that the meaning and function of the Sargon story are unclear. Second, there is no outside threat to the child Sargon. The account simply shows how a child was exposed, rescued, nurtured, and became king (see B. S. Childs, Exodus [OTL], 8-12). Third, other details do not fit: Moses' father is known, Sargon's is not; Moses is never abandoned, since he is never out of the care of his parents, and the finder is a princess and not a goddess. Moreover, without knowing the precise function and meaning of the Sargon story, it is almost impossible to explain its use as a pattern for the biblical account. By itself, the idea of a mother putting a child by the river if she wants him to be found would have been fairly sensible, for that is where the women of the town would be washing their clothes or bathing. If someone wanted to be sure the infant was discovered by a sympathetic woman, there would be no better setting (see R. A. Cole, Exodus [TOTC], 57). While there need not be a special genre of storytelling here, it is possible that Exodus 2 might have drawn on some of the motifs and forms of the other account to describe the actual event in the sparing of Moses – if they knew of it. If so it would show that Moses was cast in the form of the greats of the past. ‡ tn: Or "stood." The verb is the Hitpa'el preterite of יָצַב:

‡† tn: Heb "to know"; many English versions have "to see." ‡‡ tn: The verb is a Niphal imperfect; it should be classified here as a historic future, future from the perspective of a point in a past time narrative. ‡‡‡ sn: It is impossible, perhaps, to identify with certainty who this person was. For those who have taken a view that Rameses was the pharaoh, there were numerous daughters for Rameses. She is named Tharmuth in Jub. 47:5; Josephus spells it Thermouthis (Ant. 2.9.5 [2.224]), but Eusebius has Merris (Praep. Ev. ix. 27). E. H. Merrill (Kingdom of Priests, 60) makes a reasonable case for her identification as the famous Hatshepsut, daughter of Thutmose I. She would have been there about the time of Moses' birth, and the general picture of her from history shows her to be the kind of princess with enough courage to countermand a decree of her father. ‡‡‡ tn: Or "bathe." § sn: A disjunctive vav initiates here a circumstantial clause. Here is part of the irony of the passage: What was perceived by many to be a womanly weakness – compassion for a baby – is a strong enough emotion to prompt the woman to defy the orders of Pharaoh. The ruler had thought sparing women was safe, but the midwives, the Hebrew mother, the daughter of Pharaoh, and Miriam, all work together to spare one child – Moses (cf. 1 Cor 1:27-29). §§‡ sn: The text uses אָמַתָּה

the northern or Delta area of Egypt, rather than up the Nile as in later periods. The proximity of the royal residences to the Israelites makes this and the plague narratives all the more realistic. Such direct contact would have been unlikely if Moses had had to travel up the Nile to meet with Pharaoh. In the Delta area things were closer. Here all the people would have had access to the tributaries of the Nile near where the royal family came, but the royal family probably had pavilions and hunting lodges in the area. See also N. Chapter 2 first told how God providentially provided the deliverer, but now when this deliverer attempted to deliver one of his people, it turned out badly, and he had to flee for his life. This section makes an interesting study in the presumption of the leader, what Christian expositors would rightly describe as trying to do God's work by the flesh. The section has two parts to it: the flight from Egypt over the failed attempt to deliver (vv. 11-15), and Moses' introduction to life as the deliverer in Midian (vv. 16-22).

The Midianites seem to have traveled extensively in the desert regions. R. A. Cole ( Exodus [TOTC], 60) reasons that since they later were enemies of Israel, it is unlikely that these traditions would have been made up about Israel’s great lawgiver; further, he explains that “Ishmaelite” and “Kenite” might have been clan names within the region of Midian. But see, from a different point of view, G. W. Coats, “Moses and Midian,” JBL 92 (1973): 3-10. 24 tn: The verb reads “and he sat” or “and he lived.” To translate it “he sat by a well” would seem anticlimactic and unconnected. It probably has the same sense as in the last clause, namely, that he lived in Midian, and he lived near a well, which detail prepares for what follows. 25 tn: The word has the definite article, “the well.” Gesenius lists this use of the article as that which denotes a thing that is yet unknown to the reader but present in the mind under the circumstances (GKC 407-8 §126. q-r). Where there was a well, people would settle, and as R. A. Cole says it, for people who settled there it was “the well” ( Exodus [TOTC], 60). 26 tn: The preterites describing their actions must be taken in an ingressive sense, since they did not actually complete the job. §§† sn: The next section of the book is often referred to as the "Call of Moses," and that is certainly true. But it is much more than that. It is the divine preparation of the servant of God, a servant who already knew what his destiny was. In this section Moses is shown how his destiny will be accomplished. It will be accomplished because the divine presence will guarantee the power, and the promise of that presence comes with the important "I AM" revelation. The message that comes through in this, and other "I will be with you" passages, is that when the promise of God's presence is correctly appropriated by faith, the servant of God can begin to build confidence for the task that lies ahead. It will no longer be, "Who am I that I should go?" but "I AM with you" that matters. The first little section, 2:23-25, serves as a transition and introduction, for it records the LORD

However, in this revelation the fire is coming from within the bush, not from outside, and it represents the LORD

In the translation the words "that is both" are supplied because in contemporary English "good and" combined with any additional descriptive term can be understood as elative ("good and large" = "very large"; "good and spacious" = "very spacious"; "good and ready" = "very ready"). The point made in the Hebrew text is that the land to which they are going is both good (in terms of quality) and large (in terms of size). ‡‡‡ tn: This vibrant description of the promised land is a familiar one. Gesenius classifies "milk and honey" as expegetical genitives because they provide more precise description following a verbal adjective in the construct state (GKC 418-19 §128. x). The land is modified by "flowing," and "flowing" is explained by the genitives "milk and honey." These two products will be in abundance in the land, and they therefore exemplify what a desirable land it is. The language is hyperbolic, as if the land were streaming with these products. § tn: Each people group is joined to the preceding by the vav conjunction, "and." Each also has the definite article, as in other similar lists (3:17; 13:5; 34:11). 18 sn: In view of Moses' hesitancy, a sign is necessary to support the promise. A sign is often an unusual or miraculous event that introduces, authenticates, or illustrates the message. One expects a direct connection between the sign and the message (for a helpful discussion, see S. Porúbcan, "The Word 'OT in Isaia 7,14," CBQ 22 [1960]: 144-49). In this passage the sign is a confirming one, i.e., when Israel worships at the mountain that will be the proof that God delivered them from Egypt. Thus, the purpose of the exodus that makes possible the worship will be to prove that it was God who brought it about. In the meantime, Moses will have to trust in Yahweh. 19 tn: The verb תַּעֲבֹדוּן

‡ sn: There has been considerable debate about the name of Yahweh in the Pentateuch, primarily because of theories that have maintained that the name Yahweh was not known in antiquity (see also 6:3 and notes there). The argument of this whole section nullifies that view. The idea that God's name was revealed only here raises the question of what he was called earlier. The word "God" is not a name. "El Shaddai" is used only a few times in Genesis. But Israel would not have had a nameless deity – especially since Genesis says that from the very beginning people were making proclamation of the name of Yahweh ( Gen 4:26; 12:8). It is possible that they did not always need a name if they were convinced that only he existed and there was no other God. But probably what Moses was anticipating was the Israelites' wanting to be sure that Moses came with a message from their God, and that some sign could prove it. They would have known his name (Yahweh), and they would have known the ways that he had manifested himself. It would do no good for Moses to come with a new name for God, for that would be like introducing them to a new God. That would in no way authenticate to them Moses' call, only confuse; after all, they would not be expecting a new name – they had been praying to their covenant God all along. They would want to be sure that their covenant God actually had sent Moses. To satisfy the Israelites Moses would have had to have been familiar with the name Yahweh – as they were – and know that he appeared to individuals. They would also want to know if Yahweh had sent Moses, how this was going to work in their deliverance, because they had been crying to him for deliverance. As it turned out, the Israelites had less problem with this than Moses anticipated – they were delighted when he came. It is likely that much of this concern was Moses' own need for assurance that this was indeed the God of the fathers and that the promised deliverance was now to take place. †† tn: The imperfect tense here has a deliberative nuance ("should"), for Moses is wondering what would be best to say when the Israelites want proof of the calling. ‡‡ tn: The verb form used here is הִיאָהֳרָה

Some have taken v. 19b to refer to God’s mighty hand also, meaning that the king would not let them go unless a mighty hand compels him (NIV). The expression “mighty hand” is used of God’s rescuing Israel elsewhere ( Exod 6:1, 13:9, 32:11; but note also Num 20:20). This idea is a rather general interpretation of the words; it owes much to the LXX, which has “except by a mighty hand,” though “and not with” does not have the meaning of “except” or “unless” in other places. In view of these difficulties, others have suggested that v. 19b means “strong [threats]” from the Israelites (as in 4:24ff. and 5:3; see B. Jacob, Exodus, 81). This does not seem as convincing as the first view. Another possibility is that the phrase conveys Pharaoh’s point of view and intention; the Lord knows that Pharaoh plans to resist letting the Israelites go, regardless of the exercise of a strong hand against him (P. Addinall, “Exodus III 19B and the Interpretation of Biblical Narrative,” VT 49 [1999]: 289-300; see also the construction “and not with” in Num 12:8; 1 Sam 20:15 and elsewhere). If that is the case, v. 20 provides an ironic and pointed contradiction to Pharaoh’s plans one will be treated well by the observer. It is unlikely that it means here that the Egyptians will like the Hebrews. Rather, it means that the Egyptians will give things to the Hebrews free – gratis (see 12:35-36). Not only will God do mighty works to make the king yield, but also he will work in the minds of the Egyptian people so that they will be favorably disposed to give Israel wealth. §‡ tn: The temporal indicator (here future) with the particle כִּי ( כִּי )

† sn: In chap. 3, the first part of this extensive call, Yahweh promises to deliver his people. At the hesitancy of Moses, God guarantees his presence will be with him, and that assures the success of the mission. But with chap. 4, the second half of the call, the tone changes sharply. Now Moses protests his inadequacies in view of the nature of the task. In many ways, these verses address the question, “Who is sufficient for these things?” There are three basic movements in the passage. The first nine verses tell how God gave Moses signs in case Israel did not believe him (4:1-9). The second section records how God dealt with the speech problem of Moses (4:10-12). And finally, the last section records God’s provision of a helper, someone who could talk well (4:13-17). See also J. E. Moses should not have resisted the call or pleaded such excuses or hesitated with such weak faith. Now God abandoned the gentle answer and in anger brought in a form of retribution. Because Moses did not want to do this, he was punished by not having the honor of doing it alone. His reluctance and the result are like the refusal of Israel to enter the land and the result they experienced (see U. Cassuto, Exodus, 49-50). §†† tn: Heb "Is not" or perhaps "Is [there] not." §‡ sn: S. R. Driver (Exodus, 29) suggests that the term "Levite" may refer to a profession rather than ancestry here, because both Moses and Aaron were from the tribe of Levi and there would be little point in noting that ancestry for Aaron. In thinking through the difficult problem of the identity of Levites, he cites McNeile as saying "the Levite" referred to one who had had official training as a priest (cf. Judg 17:7, where a member of the tribe of Judah was a Levite). If it was the duty of the priest to

§‡ sn: It is unlikely that this simply means that as a brother he will be pleased to see Moses, for the narrative has no time for that kind of comment. It is interested in more significant things. The implication is that Aaron will rejoice because of the revelation of God to Moses and the plan to deliver Israel from bondage (see B. Jacob, Exodus, 93). §§† tn: Or "I will help you speak." The independent pronoun puts emphasis ("as for me") on the subject ("I"). §§‡ tn: Or "and will help him speak." §§§ tn: The word "both" is supplied to convey that this object ("you") and the subject of the next verb ("you must do") are plural in the Hebrew text, referring to Moses and Aaron. In 4:16 "you" returns to being singular in reference to Moses. 18 tn: The imperfect tense carries the obligatory nuance here as well. The relative pronoun with this verb forms a noun clause functioning as the direct object of "I will teach." 19 tn: The word "he" represents the Hebrew independent pronoun, which makes the subject emphatic. 20 tn: The phrase "as if" is supplied for clarity. 21 tn: Heb "and it will be [that] he, he will be to you for a mouth," or more simply, "he will be your mouth." 22 tn: Heb "he will be to you for a mouth." 23 tn: The phrase "as if" is supplied for clarity. The word "you" represents the Hebrew independent pronoun, which makes the subject emphatic. sn: Moses will be like God to Aaron, giving him the words to say, inspiring him as God would inspire a prophet. The whole process had now been removed one step. Instead of God speaking to Moses and Moses telling the people, Aaron would be the speaker for a while. But God was still going to work through Moses. 24 sn: Mention of the staff makes an appropriate ending to the section, for God's power (represented by the staff) will work through Moses. The applicable point that this whole section is making could be worded this way: The servants of God who sense their inadequacy must demonstrate the power of God as their sufficiency. 25 sn: This last section of the chapter reports Moses' compliance with the commission. It has four parts: the decision to return (18-20), the instruction (21-23), the confrontation with Yahweh (24-26), and the presentation with Aaron (27-31). 26 tn: The two verbs form a verbal hendiadys, the second verb becoming adverbial in the translation: "and he went and he returned" becomes "and he went back." 27 tn: There is a sequence here with the two cohortative forms: אֲלֶיכֶם נָא וְאַשׁוּבָה

The explanation of Gershom's name was important to Moses' sojourn in Midian. The explanation of the name Eliezer fits better in the later chapter ( 18:2-4). ‡†† tn: The verb would literally be rendered "and returned"; however, the narrative will record other happenings before he arrived in Egypt, so an ingressive nuance fits here - he began to return, or started back. ‡†† tn: Heb "And Yahweh said." § tn: The construction may involve a verbal hendiadys using the two infinitive forms: "when you go to return" ( לָשׁוּב לָקַחְתָּ )

God first tells Moses he must do the miracles, but he also announces that he will harden Pharaoh's heart, as if working against Moses. It will help Moses to know that God is bringing about the resistance in order to bring a greater victory with greater glory. There is a great deal of literature on this, but see among the resources F. W. Danker, "Hardness of Heart: A Study in Biblical Thematic," CTM 44 (1973): 89-100; R. R. Wilson, "The Hardening of Pharaoh's Heart," CBQ 41 (1979): 18-36; and R. B. It shows that the words given to the prophet are still binding. §§† sn: The metaphor uses the word "son" in its connotation of a political dependent, as it was used in ancient documents to describe what was intended to be a loyal relationship with well-known privileges and responsibilities, like that between a good father and son. The word can mean a literal son, a descendant, a chosen king (and so, the Messiah), a disciple (in Proverbs), and here, a nation subject to God. If the people of Israel were God's "son," then they should serve him and not Pharaoh. Malachi reminds people that the Law said "a son honors his father," and so God asked, "If I am a father, where is my honor?" ( Mal 1:6). §§§ tn: The text uses the imperative, "send out" ( שְׁלַח )

Or "at a lodging place" or "at an inn." <sup>21</sup> sn: The next section (vv. 24-26) records a rather strange story. God had said that if Pharaoh would not comply he would kill his son - but now God was ready to kill Moses, the representative of Israel, God's own son. Apparently, one would reconstruct that on the journey Moses fell seriously ill, but his wife, learning the cause of the illness, saved his life by circumcising her son and casting the foreskin at Moses' feet (indicating that it was symbolically Moses' foreskin). The point is that this son of Abraham had not complied with the sign of the Abrahamic covenant. No one, according to Exod 12:40-51, would take part in the Passover-exodus who had not complied. So how could the one who was going to lead God's people not comply? The bold anthropomorphisms and the location at the border invite comparisons with Gen 32, the Angel wrestling with Jacob. In both cases there is a brush with death that could not be forgotten. See also, W. Dumbrell, "Exodus 4:24-25: A Textual Re-examination," HTR 65 (1972): 285-90; T. C. The LXX has "and she fell at his feet" and then "the blood of the circumcision of my son stood." But it is clear that she caused the foreskin to touch Moses' feet, as if the one were a substitution for the other, taking the place of the other (see U. Cassuto, Exodus, 60). <sup>23</sup> sn: U. Cassuto explains that she was saying, "I have delivered you from death, and your return to life makes you my bridegroom a second time, this time my blood bridegroom, a bridegroom acquired through blood" ( Exodus, 60-61).

§†† sn: The enthusiasm of the worshipers in the preceding chapter turns sour in this one when Pharaoh refuses to cooperate. The point is clear that when the people of God attempt to devote their full service and allegiance to God, they encounter opposition from the world. Rather than finding instant blessing and peace, they find conflict. This is the theme that will continue through the plague narratives. But what makes chapter 5 especially interesting is how the people reacted to this opposition. The chapter has three sections: first, the confrontation between Moses and Pharaoh (vv. 1-5); then the report of the stern opposition of the king (vv. 6-14); and finally, 21 sn: The last clause of this verse is rather unexpected here: "lest he meet [afflict] us with pestilence or sword." To fail to comply with the summons of one's God was to invite such calamities. The Law would later incorporate many such things as the curses for disobedience. Moses is indicating to Pharaoh that there is more reason to fear Yahweh than Pharaoh.

thinking, † “The people of the land are now many, and you are giving them rest from their labor.”

6 That same day Pharaoh commanded†† the slave masters and foremen‡ who were‡† over the people: ‡‡7 “You must no longer‡‡† give straw to the people for making bricks‡‡‡ as before. § Let them go‡† and collect straw for themselves. 8 But you must require‡† of them the same quota of bricks that they were making before. §‡ Do not reduce it, for they are slackers. §‡† That is why they are crying, ‘Let us go sacrifice to our God.’ 9 Make the work harder‡† for the men so they will keep at it‡† and pay no attention to lying words!” §‡†

† sn: The clause is a rhetorical question. Pharaoh is not asking them why they do this, but rather is accusing them of doing it. He suspects their request is an attempt to get people time away from their labor. In Pharaoh’s opinion, Moses and Aaron were “removing the restraint” (פָּרַע)

†† tn: Heb “And Pharaoh said.” This is not the kind of thing that Pharaoh is likely to have said to Moses, and so it probably is what he thought or reasoned within himself. Other passages (like Exod 2:14; 3:3) show that the verb “said” can do this. (See U. Cassuto, Exodus, 67.) ‡ tn: Heb “and Pharaoh commanded on that day.” ‡† tn: The Greek has “scribes” for this word, perhaps thinking of those lesser officials as keeping records of the slaves and the bricks. ‡‡ tn: The phrase “who were” is supplied for clarity. ‡‡† sn: In vv. 6-14 the second section of the chapter describes the severe measures by the king to increase the labor by decreasing the material. The emphasis in this section must be on the harsh treatment of the people and Pharaoh’s reason for it – he accuses them of idleness because they want to go and worship. The real reason, of course, is that he wants to discredit Moses (v. 9) and keep the people as slaves. ‡‡‡ tn: The construction is a verbal hendiadys: לֹא תִאֶסְפוּן לָתֵת

§ tn: The expression “for making bricks” is made of the infinitive construct followed by its cognate accusative: לִלְבֹּן הַלְבָּיִם ‡† tn: Heb “as yesterday and three days ago” or “as yesterday and before that.” This is idiomatic for “as previously” or “as in the past.” §†† tn: The jussive יִלְכוּ

The Israelite foremen went and cried out to Pharaoh, “Why are you treating‡‡‡ your servants this way? 16 No straw is given to your servants, but we are told, 27 ‘Make bricks ! Your servants are even‡‡‡ being beaten, but the fault‡‡‡ is with your people.”

25 sn: The idioms for time here are found also in 3:10 and 5:7-8. This question no doubt represents many accusations shouted at Israelites during the period when it was becoming obvious that, despite all their efforts, they were unable to meet their quotas as before. 26 sn: The last section of this event tells the effect of the oppression on Israel, first on the people (15-19) and then on Moses and Aaron (20-21). The immediate reaction of Israel was to cry to Pharaoh – something they would learn should be directed to God. When Pharaoh rebuffed them harshly, they turned bitterly against their leaders. 27 tn: The imperfect tense should be classified here with the progressive imperfect nuance, because the harsh treatment was a present reality. 28 tn: Heb “[they] are saying to us,” the line can be rendered as a passive since there is no expressed subject for the participle. 29 tn: הִנֵּה

The passage can be divided into three parts: the complaint of Moses ( 5:22-23), the promise of Yahweh ( 6:1-9), and the instructions for Moses ( 6:10-13). Moses complains because God has not delivered his people as he had said he would, and God answers that he will because he is the sovereign covenant God who keeps his word. Therefore, Moses must keep his commission to speak God's word. See further, E. A. Martens, "Tackling Old Testament Theology," JETS 20 (1977): 123-32. The complaint of Moses ( 5:22-23) can be worded with Peter's "Where is the promise of his coming?" theme; the assurance from Yahweh ( 6:1-9) can be worded with Peter's "The Lord is not slack in keeping his promises" ( 2 Pet 3:9); and the third part, the instructions for Moses ( 6:10-13) can be worded with Peter's "Prepare for the day of God and speed its coming" ( 2 Pet 3:12). The people who speak for God must do so in the sure confidence of the coming deliverance - Moses with the deliverance from the bondage of Egypt, and Christians with the deliverance from this sinful world. §§† tn: Heb "and Moses returned." §§†† tn: The designation in Moses' address is "Lord" (אֲדֹנָי)

The antecedent of the pronoun is the Egyptians who have imposed slave labor on the Hebrews. ‡‡ sn: These covenant promises are being reiterated here because they are about to be fulfilled. They are addressed to the nation, not individuals, as the plural suffixes show. Yahweh was their God already, because they had been praying to him and he is acting on their behalf. When they enter into covenant with God at Sinai, then he will be the God of Israel in a new way (19:4-6; cf. Gen 17:7-8; 28:20-22; Lev 26:11-12; Jer 24:7; Ezek 11:17-20). ‡‡† tn: Heb "from under the burdens of" (so KJV, NASB); NIV "from under the yoke of." ‡‡†† tn: Heb "which I raised my hand to give it." The relative clause specifies which land is their goal. The bold anthropomorphism mentions part of an oath-taking ceremony to refer to the whole event and reminds the reader that God swore that he would give the land to them. The reference to taking an oath would have made the promise of God sure in the mind of the Israelite. § sn: Here is the twofold aspect again clearly depicted: God swore the promise to the patriarchs, but he is about to give what he promised to this generation. This generation will know more about him as a result. §† sn: The final part of this section focuses on instructions for Moses. The commission from God is the same – he is to speak to Pharaoh and he is to lead Israel out. It should have been clear to him that God would do this, for he had just been reminded how God was going to lead out, deliver, redeem, take the people as his people, and give them land. It was God's work of love from beginning to end. Moses simply had his task to perform. §†† tn: Heb "and Moses spoke thus." §‡† tn: Heb "to Moses." §† sn: With the first plague, or blow on Pharaoh, a new section of the book unfolds. Until now the dominant focus has been on preparing the deliverer for the exodus. From here the account will focus on preparing Pharaoh for it. The theological emphasis for exposition of the entire series of plagues may be: The sovereign Lord is fully able to deliver his people from the oppression of the world so that they may worship and serve him alone. The distinct idea of each plague then will contribute to this main idea. It is clear from the outset that God could have delivered his people simply and suddenly. But he chose to draw out the process with the series of plagues. There appear to be several reasons: First, the plagues are designed to judge Egypt. It is justice for slavery. Second, the plagues are designed to inform Israel and Egypt of the ability of Yahweh. Everyone must know that it is Yahweh doing all these things. The Egyptians must know this before they are destroyed. Third, the plagues are designed to deliver Israel. The first plague is the plague of blood: God has absolute power over the sources of life. Here Yahweh strikes the heart of Egyptian life with death and corruption. The lesson is that God can turn the source of life into the prospect of death. Moreover, the Nile was venerated; so by turning it into death Moses was showing the superiority of Yahweh. §§† tn: Or "unresponsive" (so HALOT 456 s.v. †† sn: W. C. Kaiser summarizes a view that has been adopted by many scholars, including a good number of conservatives, that the plagues overlap with natural phenomena in Egypt. Accordingly, the "blood" would not be literal blood, but a reddish contamination in the water. If there was an unusually high inundation of the Nile, the water flowed sluggishly through swamps and was joined with the water from the mountains that washed out the reddish soil. If the flood were high, the water would have a deeper red color. In addition to this discoloration, there is said to be a type of algae which produce a stench and a deadly fluctuation of the oxygen level of the river that is fatal to fish (see W. C. Kaiser, Jr., "Exodus," EBC 2:350; he cites Greta Hort, "The Plagues of Egypt," ZAW 69 [1957]: 84-103; same title, ZAW 70 [1958]: 48-59). While most scholars would agree that the water did not actually become blood (any more than the moon will be turned to literal blood [Joel 2:31]), many are not satisfied with this kind of explanation. If the event was a fairly common feature of the Nile, it would not have been any kind of sign to Pharaoh – and it should still be observable. The features that would have to be safeguarded are that it was understood to be done by the staff of God, that it was unexpected and not a mere coincidence, and that the magnitude of the contamination, color, stench, and death, was unparalleled. God does use natural features in miracles, but to be miraculous signs they cannot simply coincide with natural phenomena. ‡ tn: The definite article here has the generic use, indicating the class – "fish" (R. §†† tn: The text could be rendered "in the sight of," or simply "before," but the literal idea of "before the eyes of" may stress how obvious the event was and how personally they were witnesses of it. §† sn: U. Casuto (Exodus, 98) notes that the striking of the water was not a magical act. It signified two things: (1) the beginning of the sign, which was in accordance with God's will, as Moses had previously announced, and (2) to symbolize actual "striking," wherewith the Lord strikes Egypt and its gods (see v. 25). §‡ sn: There have been various attempts to explain the details of this plague or blow. One possible suggestion is that the plague turned the Nile into "blood," but that it gradually turned back to its normal color and substance. However, the effects of the "blood" polluted the water so that dead fish and other contamination left it undrinkable. This would explain how the magicians could also do it – they would not have tried if all water was already turned to blood. It also explains why Pharaoh did not ask for the water to be turned back. This view was put forward by B. Schor; it is summarized by B. Jacob (Exodus, 258), who prefers the view of Rashi that the blow affected only water in use. §§† tn: The first clause in this verse begins with a vav disjunctive, introducing a circumstantial clause to the statement that the water stank. ## The Second Blow: Frogs †

8 †† Then the LORD said to Moses, “Go to Pharaoh and tell him, ‘Thus says the LORD : “Release my people in order that they may serve me! <sup>2</sup> But if you refuse to release them, then I am going to plague‡‡ all your territory with frogs. ††<sup>3</sup> The Nile will swarm‡‡ with frogs, and they will come up and go into your house, in your bedroom, and on your bed, and into the houses of your servants and your people, and into

† sn: An attempt to connect this plague with the natural phenomena of Egypt proposes that because of the polluted water due to the high Nile, the frogs abandoned their normal watery homes (seven days after the first plague) and sought cover from the sun in homes wherever there was moisture. Since they had already been exposed to the poisonous water, they died very suddenly. The miracle was in the announcement and the timing, i.e., that Moses would predict this blow, and in the magnitude of it all, which was not natural (Greta Hort, “The Plagues of Egypt,” ZAW 69 [1957]: 95-98). It is also important to note that in parts of Egypt there was a fear of these creatures as embodying spirits capable of great evil. People developed the mentality of bowing to incredibly horrible idols to drive away the bad spirits. Evil spirits are represented in the book of Revelation in the forms of frogs ( Rev 16:13). The frogs that the magicians produced could very well have been in the realm of evil spirits. Exactly how the Egyptians thought about this plague is hard to determine, but there is enough evidence to say that the plague would have made them spiritually as well as physically uncomfortable, and that the death of the frogs would have been a “sign” from God about their superstitions and related beliefs. The frog is associated with the god Hapi, and a frog-headed goddess named Heqet was supposed to assist women at childbirth. The plague would have been evidence that Yahweh was controlling their environment and upsetting their beliefs for his own purpose. †† tn: The text literally has “and seven days were filled.” Seven days gave Pharaoh enough time to repent and release Israel. When the week passed, God’s second blow came. ‡ tn: This is a temporal clause made up of the preposition, the Hiphil infinitive construct of נָכַח הַכּוֹת

‡† sn: Beginning with 8:1, the verse numbers through 8:32 in English Bibles differ from the verse numbers in the Hebrew text ( BHS), with 8:1 ET = 7:26 HT, 8:2 ET = 7:27 HT, 8:3 ET = 7:28 HT, 8:4 ET = 7:29 HT, 8:5 ET = 8:1 HT, etc., through 8:32 ET = 8:28 HT. Thus in English Bibles chapter 8 has 32 verses, while in the Hebrew Bible it has 28 verses, with the four extra verses attached to chapter 7. ‡† tn: The construction here uses the deictic particle and the participle to convey the imminent future: “I am going to plague/about to plague.” The verb נָכַח

‡†† tn: Heb “plague all your border with frogs.” The expression “all your border” is figurative for all the territory of Egypt and the people and things that are within the borders (also used in Exod 10:4, 14, 19; 13:7). sn: This word for frogs is mentioned in the OT only in conjunction with this plague (here and Pss 78:45, 105:30). R. A. Cole ( Exodus [TOTC], 91) suggests that this word “frogs” ( צַפְרִדִּים )

<sup>8</sup> Then Pharaoh summoned‡†† Moses and Aaron and said, “Pray‡†† to the LORD that he may take the frogs away‡†† from me and my people, and I will release<sup>18</sup> the people that they may sacrifice<sup>19</sup> to the LORD.” <sup>9</sup> Moses said to Pharaoh, “You may have the honor over me <sup>20</sup> – when shall I pray for you, your servants, and your people, for the frogs to be removed <sup>21</sup> from you and your houses, so that <sup>22</sup> they will be left <sup>23</sup> only in

§ sn: This verse lists places the frogs will go. The first three are for Pharaoh personally – they are going to touch his private life. Then the text mentions the servants and the people. Mention of the ovens and kneading bowls (or troughs) of the people indicates that food would be contaminated and that it would be impossible even to eat a meal in peace. §† tn: Here again is the generic use of the article, designating the class – frogs. §†† sn: The word order of the Hebrew text is important because it shows how the plague was pointedly directed at Pharaoh: “and against you, and against your people, and against all your servants frogs will go up.” §† sn: After the instructions for Pharaoh ( 7:25-8:4), the plague now is brought on by the staff in Aaron’s hand ( 8:5-7). This will lead to the confrontation (vv. 8-11) and the hardening (vv. 12-15). §†† tn: The noun is singular, a collective. B. Jacob notes that this would be the more natural way to refer to the frogs ( Exodus, 260). §† tn: Heb “thus, so.” §† sn: In these first two plagues the fact that the Egyptians could and did duplicate them is ironic. Just as Moses had told Pharaoh "according to your word" (v. 10), now the LORD §† tn: Heb "and the frogs died." §††† tn: Heb "and they piled them." For clarity the translation supplies the referent "the Egyptians" as the ones who were piling the frogs. §††† tn: The word "heaps" is repeated: הֵמְרָם הֵמְרָם

§††† tn: The word קָטַץ קָטַץ §††† tn: וְהִרְבֵּד

§††† sn: The end of the plague revealed clearly God's absolute control over Egypt's life and deities – all at the power of the man who prayed to God. Yahweh had made life unpleasant for the people by sending the plague, but he was also the one who could remove it. The only recourse anyone has in such trouble is to pray to the sovereign Lord God. Everyone should know that there is no one like Yahweh. §††† sn: The third plague is brief and unannounced. Moses and Aaron were simply to strike the dust so that it would become gnats. Not only was this plague unannounced, but also it was not duplicated by the Egyptians. §§††† tn: The verb is the perfect tense with vav ( ו )

‡††† tn: The noun is כְּנִים

They did so; Aaron extended his hand with his staff, he struck the dust of the ground, and it became gnats on people§§§ and on animals. All the dust of the ground became gnats throughout all the land of Egypt.<sup>18</sup> When<sup>18</sup> the magicians attempted<sup>19</sup> to bring forth gnats by their secret arts, they could not. So there were gnats on people and on animals.<sup>19</sup> The magicians said<sup>20</sup> to Pharaoh, "It is the finger<sup>21</sup> of God!" But Pharaoh's heart remained hard,<sup>22</sup> and he did not listen to them, just as the LORD had predicted.

The Fourth Blow: Flies <sup>23</sup>

<sup>20</sup> The LORD<sup>24</sup> said to Moses, "Get up early in the morning and position yourself before Pharaoh as he goes out to the water, and tell him, 'Thus says the LORD, "Release my people that they may serve me! <sup>21</sup> If you do not release<sup>25</sup> my people, then I am going to send<sup>26</sup> swarms of flies<sup>27</sup> on you and on your servants

§§§† tn: Heb "man," but in the generic sense of "humans" or "people" (also in v. 18). 18 tn: The preterite with vav ( ו )

19 tn: Heb "and the magicians did so." sn: The report of what the magicians did (or as it turns out, tried to do) begins with the same words as the report about the actions of Moses and Aaron – "and they did so" (vv. 17 and 18). The magicians copy the actions of Moses and Aaron, leading readers to think momentarily that the magicians are again successful, but at the end of the verse comes the news that "they could not." Compared with the first two plagues, this third plague has an important new feature, the failure of the magicians and their recognition of the source of the plague. 20 tn: Heb "and the magicians said." 21 tn: The word "finger" is a bold anthropomorphism (a figure of speech in which God is described using human characteristics). sn: The point of the magicians' words is clear enough. They knew they were beaten and by whom. The reason for their choice of the word "finger" has occasioned many theories, none of which is entirely satisfying. At the least their statement highlights that the plague was accomplished by God with majestic ease and effortlessness. Perhaps the reason that they could not do this was that it involved producing life – from the dust of the ground, as in Genesis 2:7. The creative power of God confounded the magic of the Egyptians and brought on them a loathsome plague. 22 tn: Heb "and the heart of Pharaoh became hard." This phrase translates the Hebrew word קָטַץ

23 sn: The announcement of the fourth plague parallels that of the first plague. Now there will be flies, likely dogflies. Egypt has always suffered from flies, more so in the summer than in the winter. But the flies the plague describes involve something greater than any normal season for flies. The main point that can be stressed in this plague comes by tracing the development of the plagues in their sequence. Now, with the flies, it becomes clear that God can inflict suffering on some people and preserve others – a preview of the coming judgment that will punish Egypt but set Israel free. God is fully able to keep the dog-fly in the land of the Egyptians and save his people from these judgments. 24 tn: Heb "And Yahweh said." 25 tn: The construction uses the predicator of nonexistence – אֵין

and on your people and in your houses. The houses of the Egyptians will be full of flies, and even the ground they stand on. <sup>122</sup> But on that day I will mark off† the land of Goshen, where my people are staying, ‡ so that no swarms of flies will be there, that you may know that I am the LORD in the midst of this land. <sup>‡23</sup> I will put a division‡‡ between my people and your people. This sign will take place‡‡‡ tomorrow.<sup>‡‡‡‡</sup> <sup>24</sup> The LORD did so; a‡‡‡ thick § swarm of flies came into§† Pharaoh's house and into the houses§†† of his servants, and throughout the whole land of Egypt the land was ruined§‡ because of the swarms of flies.

<sup>25</sup> Then Pharaoh summoned Moses and Aaron and said, "Go, sacrifice to your God within the land." <sup>§††26</sup> But Moses said, "That would not be the right thing to

<sup>29</sup> Moses said, "I am going to go out<sup>27</sup> from you and pray to the LORD, and the swarms of flies will go away from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people tomorrow. Only do not let Pharaoh deal falsely again<sup>28</sup>

§† tn: The clause is a little unusual in its formation. The form וְכִן

§‡ tn: This translation has been smoothed out to capture the sense. The text literally says, "for the abomination of Egypt we will sacrifice to Yahweh our God." In other words, the animals that Israel would sacrifice were sacred to Egypt, and sacrificing them would have been abhorrent to the Egyptians. §§† tn: An "abomination" is something that is off-limits, something that is tabu. It could be translated "detestable" or "loathsome." §§‡ sn: U. Cassuto (Exodus, 109) says there are two ways to understand "the abomination of the Egyptians." One is that the sacrifice of the sacred animals would appear an abominable thing in the eyes of the Egyptians, and the other is that the word "abomination" could be a derogatory term for idols – we sacrifice what is an Egyptian idol. So that is why he says if they did this the Egyptians would stone them. §§§ tn: Heb "if we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians [or "of Egypt"] before their eyes." <sup>18</sup> tn: The interrogative clause has no particle to indicate it is a question, but it is connected with the conjunction to the preceding clause, and the meaning of these clauses indicate it is a question (GKC 473 §150. a). <sup>19</sup> tn: The verb וַלֵךְ

The clause could also be subordinated as a temporal clause. <sup>28</sup> tn: The verb

§† tn: Here, and in the next phrase, the word "house" has to be taken as an adverbial accusative of termination. §†† tn: The Hebrew text has the singular here. §‡ tc: Concerning the connection of "the land was ruined" with the preceding, S. R. Driver (Exodus, 68) suggests reading with the LXX, Smr, and Peshitta; this would call for adding a conjunction before the last clause to make it read, "into the house of Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses, and into all the land of Egypt; and

§†† sn: After the plague is inflicted on the land, then Pharaoh makes an appeal. So there is the familiar confrontation (vv. 25-29). Pharaoh's words to Moses are an advancement on his previous words. Now he uses imperatives: "Go, sacrifice to your God." But he restricts it to "in the [this] land." This is a subtle attempt to keep them as a subjugated people and prevent their absolute allegiance to their God. This offered compromise would destroy the point of the exodus – to leave Egypt and find a new allegiance under the LORD by not releasing† the people to sacrifice to the LORD.”

 30 So Moses went out from Pharaoh and prayed to the LORD,<sup>31</sup> and the LORD did as Moses asked†† – he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people. Not one remained!<sup>32</sup> But Pharaoh hardened‡ his heart this time also and did not release the people.

9 Then the LORD said to Moses, “Go to Pharaoh and tell him, ‘Thus says the LORD, the God of the Hebrews, “Release my people that they may serve me!<sup>2</sup> For if you refuse to release them†† and continue holding them, ‡‡‡ then the hand of the LORD will surely bring††† a very terrible plague‡‡‡ on your livestock in the field, on the horses, the donkeys, the camels,§ the herds, and the flocks. <sup>4</sup> But the Lord will distinguish§† between the livestock of Israel and the livestock of Egypt, and nothing§†† will die of all that the Israelites have.’”‡‡‡ ‡

He is able to strike the animals with disease and death, thus delivering a blow to the economic as well as the religious life of the land. By the former plagues many of the Egyptian religious ceremonies would have been interrupted and objects of veneration defiled or destroyed. Now some of the important deities will be attacked. In Goshen, where the cattle are merely cattle, no disease hits, but in the rest of Egypt it is a different matter. Osiris, the savior, cannot even save the brute in which his own soul is supposed to reside. Apis and Mnevis, the ram of Ammon, the sheep of Sais, and the goat of Mendes, perish together. Hence, Moses reminds Israel afterward, “On their gods also Yahweh executed judgments” ( Num 33:4). When Jethro heard of all these events, he said, “Now I know that Yahweh is greater than all the gods” ( Exod 18:11). ‡‡ tn: The object “them” is implied in the context. ‡‡† tn: עוד

Greta Hort, “The Plagues of Egypt,” ZAW 69 [1957]: 101-3, suggests it is skin anthrax (see W. C. Kaiser, Jr., “Exodus,” EBC 2:359). The lesson of this plague is that Yahweh has absolute control over the physical health of the people. Physical suffering consequent to sin comes to all regardless of their position and status. <sup>20</sup> Those<sup>21</sup> of Pharaoh's servants who feared the word of the LORD hurried to bring their<sup>22</sup> servants and livestock into the houses, <sup>21</sup> but those<sup>23</sup> who did not take<sup>24</sup> the word of the LORD seriously left their servants and their cattle<sup>25</sup> in the field.

† tn: This phrase translates the Hebrew word קוּחַ
 †† sn: With the seventh plague there is more explanation of what God is doing to Pharaoh. This plague begins with an extended lesson (vv. 13-21). Rain was almost unknown in Egypt, and hail and lightning were harmless. The Egyptians were fascinated by all these, though, and looked on them as portentous. Herodotus describes how they studied such things and wrote them down (1.2.c.38). If ordinary rainstorms were ominous, what must fire and hail have been? The Egyptians had denominated fire Hephaistos, considering it to be a mighty deity (cf. Diodorus, 1.1.c.1). Porphry says that at the opening of the temple of Serapis the Egyptians worshiped with water and fire. If these connections were clearly understood, then these elements in the plague were thought to be deities that came down on their own people with death and destruction. ‡ tn: Heb "and Yahweh said." ‡† tn: Or "take your stand." ‡‡ tn: The expression "all my plagues" points to the rest of the plagues and anticipates the proper outcome. Another view is to take the expression to mean the full brunt of the attack on the Egyptian people. ‡‡† tn: Heb "to your heart." ‡† sn: This clause provides the purpose/result of Moses' intention: he will pray to Yahweh and the storms will cease "that you might know..." It was not enough to pray and have the plague stop. Pharaoh must "know" that Yahweh is the sovereign Lord over the earth. Here was that purpose of knowing through experience. This clause provides the key for the exposition of this plague: God demonstrated his power over the forces of nature to show his sovereignty - the earth is Yahweh's. He can destroy it. He

Gesenius notes that the boldness of such clauses is often indicated by the repetition of nouns at the beginning (see GKC 452 §141. d). Some have concluded that because they have been put here rather than back after v. 25 or 26, they form part of Moses' speech to Pharaoh, explaining that the crops that were necessary for humans were spared, but those for other things were destroyed. This would also mean that Moses was saying there is more that God can destroy (see B. Jacob, Exodus, 279). ‡‡† tn: The unusual forms גִּזְתָּהֶם

† sn: The Egyptians dreaded locusts like every other ancient civilization. They had particular gods to whom they looked for help in such catastrophes. The locust-scaring deities of Greece and Asia were probably looked to in Egypt as well (especially in view of the origins in Egypt of so many of those religious ideas). The announcement of the plague falls into the now-familiar pattern. God tells Moses to go and speak to Pharaoh but reminds Moses that he has hardened his heart. Yahweh explains that he has done this so that he might show his power, so that in turn they might declare his name from generation to generation. This point is stressed so often that it must not be minimized. He is planning to keep the women and children as hostages to force the men to return. U. Cassuto (Exodus, 125) paraphrases it this way: "May the help of your God be as far from you as I am from giving you permission to go forth with your little ones." The real irony, Cassuto observes, is that in the final analysis he will let them go, and Yahweh will be with them. ‡† tn: The context of Moses' list of young and old, sons and daughters, and the contrast with the word for strong "men" in v. 11 indicates that טפכם

But that does not make much sense in the sentence – why would he tell them to take heed or look out about that? U. Cassuto (Exodus, 126) makes a better suggestion. He argues that Pharaoh is saying, "Don't push me too far." The evil, then, would be what Pharaoh was going to do if these men kept making demands on him. This fits the fact that he had them driven out of his court immediately. There could also be here an allusion to Pharaoh's god Re', the sun-deity and head of the pantheon; he would be saying that the power of his god would confront them. ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "not thus." § tn: The word is גבירים

sn: The ninth plague is that darkness fell on all the land – except on Israel. This plague is comparable to the silence in heaven, just prior to the last and terrible plague ( Rev 8:1). Here Yahweh is attacking a core Egyptian religious belief as well as portraying what lay before the Egyptians. Throughout the Bible darkness is the symbol of evil, chaos, and judgment. Blindness is one of its manifestations (see Deut 28:27-29). But the plague here is not blindness, or even spiritual blindness, but an awesome darkness from outside (see Joel 2:2; Zeph 1:15). It is particularly significant in that Egypt's high god was the Sun God. Lord Sun was now being shut down by Lord Yahweh. If Egypt would not let Israel go to worship their God, then Egypt's god would be darkness. The structure is familiar: the plague, now unannounced (21-23), and then the confrontation with Pharaoh (24-27). †† tn: Or "the sky" (also in the following verse). The Hebrew term שָׁמַיִם

Driver says, "The darkness was no doubt occasioned really by a sand-storm, produced by the hot electrical wind...which blows in intermittently..." ( Exodus, 82, 83). This is another application of the antisupernatural approach to these texts. The text, however, is probably describing something that was not a seasonal wind, or Pharaoh would not have been intimidated. If it coincided with that season, then what is described here is so different and so powerful that the Egyptians would have known the difference easily. Pharaoh here would have had to have been impressed that this was something very abnormal, and that his god was powerless. Besides, there was

24 Then Pharaoh summoned Moses and said, "Go, serve the LORD – only your flocks and herds will be detained. Even your families‡† may go with you."

Not a hoof is to be left behind! For we must take‡‡ these animals‡‡† to serve the LORD our God. Until we arrive there, we do not know what we must use to serve the LORD." ‡‡†

27 But the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he was not willing to release them. 28 Pharaoh said to him, "Go from me!‡‡‡ Watch out for yourself! Do not appear before me again, 18 for when19 you see my face you will die!" 29 Moses said, "As you wish !20 I will not see your face again." 21 22 passage records the announcement of the judgment first to Moses and then through Moses to Pharaoh. The first two verses record the word of God to Moses. This is followed by a parenthetical note about how God had elevated Moses and Israel in the eyes of Egypt (v. 3). Then there is the announcement to Pharaoh (vv. 4-8). This is followed by a parenthetical note on how God had hardened Pharaoh so that Yahweh would be elevated over him. It is somewhat problematic here that Moses is told not to see Pharaoh's face again. On the one hand, given the nature of Pharaoh to blow hot and cold and to change his mind, it is not impossible for another meeting to have occurred. But Moses said he would not do it (v. 29). One solution some take is to say that the warning in 10:28 originally stood after chapter 11. A change like that is unwarranted, and without support. It may be that vv. 1-3 are parenthetical, so that the announcement in v. 4 follows closely after 10:29 in the chronology. The instruction to Moses in 11:1 might then have been given before he left Pharaoh or even before the interview in 10:24-29 took place. Another possibility, supported by usage in Akkadian, is that the expression "see my face" (and in v. 29 "see your face") has to do with seeking to have an official royal audience (W. H. C. Propp, Exodus 1-18 [AB], 342). Pharaoh thinks that he is finished with Moses, but as 11:8 describes, Moses expects that in fact Moses will soon be the one in a position like that of royalty granting an audience to Egyptians. 24 tn: The expression וַיִּשְׁמַע יְהוָה

§† tn: Heb "I will go out in the midst of Egypt." §†† sn: The firstborn in Egyptian and Israelite cultures was significant, but the firstborn of Pharaoh was most important. Pharaoh was considered a god, the son of Re, the sun god, for the specific purpose of ruling over Re's chief concern, the land of Egypt. For the purpose of re-creation, the supreme god assumed the form of the living king and gave seed which was to become the next king and the next "son of Re." Moreover, the Pharaoh was the incarnation of the god Horus, a falcon god whose province was the heavens. Horus represented the living king who succeeded the dead king Osiris. Every living king was Horus, every dead king Osiris (see J. A. Wilson, "Egypt," Before Philosophy, 83-84). To strike any firstborn was to destroy the heir, who embodied the hopes and aspirations of the Egyptians, but to strike the firstborn son of Pharaoh was to destroy this cardinal doctrine of the divine kingship of Egypt. Such a blow would be enough for Pharaoh, for then he would drive the Israelites out. §† tn: Heb "which like it there has never been." §†† tn: Heb "and like it it will not add." §† tn: Or perhaps "growl"; Heb "not a dog will sharpen his tongue." Moreover, the celebration of this festival of Passover was to become a central part of the holy calendar of Israel. The contents of this chapter have significance for NT studies as well, since the Passover was a type of the death of Jesus. The structure of this section before the crossing of the sea is as follows: the institution of the Passover ( 12:1-28), the night of farewell and departure ( 12:29-42), slaves and strangers ( 12:43-51), and the laws of the firstborn ( 13:1-16). In this immediate section there is the institution of the

of months; it will be your first month of the year. <sup>13</sup> Tell the whole community of Israel, 'In the tenth day of this month they each†† must take a lamb‡ for themselves according to their families‡‡ – a lamb for each household. ‡‡‡ If any household is too small‡‡‡ for a lamb, ‡‡‡ the man§ and his next-door neighbor§† are to take§†† a lamb according to the number of people – you will make your count for the lamb according to how much each one can eat. <sup>§‡5</sup> Your lamb must be§†† perfect, §† a male, one year old; §‡ you may take§§† it from the sheep or from the goats. <sup>6</sup> You must care for it§§† until the fourteenth day of this month, and then the whole community§§§ of Israel will kill it around sun-down. <sup>187</sup> They will take some of the blood and put it

Each man who is the head of a household was to determine how much his family could eat, and this in turn would determine how many families shared the lamb. §† tn: The construction has: "[The] lamb...will be to you." This may be interpreted as a possessive use of the lamed, meaning, "[the] lamb...you have" (your lamb) for the Passover. For seven days§†† you must eat§† bread made without yeast. §† Surely§†† on the first day you must put away yeast from your houses because anyone who eats bread made with yeast§†† from the first day to the seventh day will be cut off§†§ from Israel.

16 On the first day there will be a holy convocation, 18 and on the seventh day there will be a holy convocation for you. You must do no work of any kind19 on them, only what every person will eat – that alone may be prepared for you. 17 So you will keep the Feast of Unleavened Bread, because on this very20 day I brought your regiments21 out from the land of Egypt, and so you must keep this day perpetually as a lasting ordinance. 2218 In the first month,23 from the fourteenth day of the month, in the evening, you will eat bread made without yeast until the twenty-first day of the month in the evening. 19 For seven days24 yeast

The word "convocation" implies that the people were called together, and Num 10:2 indicates they were called together by trumpets. 20 tn: Heb "on the bone of this day." The expression means "the substance of the day," the day itself, the very day (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 95). 21 tn: The word is "armies" or "divisions" (see Exod 6:26 and the note there; cf. also 7:4). ### The Deliverance from Egypt<sup>18</sup>

Verses 28 and 29 could be included in the exposition of the previous section as the culmination of that part. The message might highlight God’s requirement for deliverance from bondage through the application of the blood of the sacrifice, God’s instruction for the memorial of deliverance through the purging of corruption, and the compliance of those who believed the message. But these verses also form the beginning of this next section (and so could be used transitionally). <sup>21</sup> sn: Here as well some scholars work with the number 430 to try to reduce the stay in Egypt for the bondage. Some argue that if the number included the time in Canaan, that would reduce the bondage by half. S. R. Driver ( Exodus, 102) notes that P thought Moses was the fourth generation from Jacob ( 6:16-27), if those genealogies are not selective. Exodus 6 has Levi – Kohath – Amram – Moses. This would require a period of about 100 years, and that is unusual. There is evidence, however, that the list is selective. In 1 Chr 2:3-20 the text has Bezalel (see Exod 31:2-5) a contemporary of Moses and yet the seventh from Judah. Elishama, a leader of the Ephraimites ( Num 10:22), was in the ninth generation from Jacob ( 1 Chr 7:22-26). Joshua, Moses' assistant, was the eleventh from Jacob ( 1 Chr 7:27). So the "four generations" leading up to Moses are not necessarily complete. With regard to Exod 6, K. A. Kitchen has argued that the four names do not indicate successive generations, but tribe (Levi), clan (Kohath), family (Amram), and individual (Moses; K. A. very day, all the regiments† of the LORD went out of the land of Egypt. <sup>42</sup> It was a night of vigil for the LORD to bring them out from the land of Egypt, †† and so‡ on this night all Israel is to keep the vigil†† to the LORD for generations to come.

Participation in the Passover ‡‡

The word refers primarily to the work of one's occupation. B. Jacob (Exodus, 322) explains that since this comes prior to the fuller description of laws for Sabbaths and festivals, the passage simply restricts all work except for the preparation of food. Once the laws are added, this qualification is no longer needed. Gesenius translates this as "no manner of work shall be done" (GKC 478-79 §152. b).

<sup>3</sup> Moses said to the people, "Remember§§§ this day on which you came out from Egypt, from the place where you were enslaved, <sup>18</sup> for the LORD brought you out of there<sup>19</sup> with a mighty hand – and no bread

§† <sup>sn</sup>: This next section seems a little confusing at first glance: vv. 1 and 2 call for the dedication of the firstborn, then vv. 3-10 instruct concerning the ritual of the Feast of Unleavened Bread, and then vv. 11-16 return to the firstborn. B. Jacob (Exodus, 360) explains that vv. 3-16 contain a sermon, in which Moses "began his speech by reminding the people of the events which had just occurred and how they would be recalled by them in the future," and then he explained the rulings that went along with it. So the first two verses state the core of the sermon, a new command calling for the redeemed (firstborn) to be sanctified. The second portion stresses that God requires the redeemed to remember their redemption by purifying themselves (3-10). The third section (11-16) develops the theme of dedication to Yahweh. The point is that in view of God's mighty redemption, the redeemed (represented by the firstborn) must be set apart for Yahweh's service. §‡ <sup>tn</sup>: Heb "and Yahweh spoke." §§† <sup>tn</sup>: The verb "sanctify" is the Piel imperative of קָדַשׁ

Kaiser notes how this noun was translated "slavery" and "work" in the book, but "service" or "ceremony" for Yahweh. Israel was saved from slavery to Egypt into service for God as remembered by this ceremony ("Exodus," EBC 2:383). §†† tn: Heb "Seven days." §† tn: The imperfect tense functions with the nuance of instruction or injunction. It could also be given an obligatory nuance: "you must eat" or "you are to eat." many cases, he continues, it is the spirit that kills and the letter makes alive – because people who argue against a literal usage do so to excuse lack of action. This is a rather interesting twist in the discussion. The point of the teaching was obviously meant to keep the Law of Yahweh in the minds of the people, to remind them of their duties. <sup>21</sup> tn: That is, this ceremony. <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb "for a sign." <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb "for a memorial." <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "between your eyes" (KJV and ASV both similar); the same expression occurs in v. 16. sn: That these festivals and consecrations were to be signs and memorials is akin to the expressions used in the book of Proverbs ( Prov 3:3, "bind them around your neck...write them on your heart"). The people were to use the festivals as outward and visible tokens to remind them to obey what the Law required. <sup>25</sup> tn: The purpose of using this ceremony as a sign and a memorial is that the Law might be in their mouth. The imperfect tense, then, receives the classification of final imperfect in the purpose clause. <sup>26</sup> sn: "Mouth" is a metonymy of cause; the point is that they should be ever talking about the Law as their guide as they go about their duties (see Deut 6:7; 11:19; Josh 1:8). <sup>27</sup> tn: This causal clause gives the reason for what has just been instructed. Because Yahweh delivered them from bondage, he has the strongest claims on their life. <sup>28</sup> tn: The form is a perfect tense with the vav ( ו )

‡ tn: The conditional clause uses an imperfect tense; this is followed by a perfect tense with the vav consecutive providing the obligation or instruction. The owner might not redeem the donkey, but if he did not, he could not keep it, he had to kill it by breaking its neck (so either a lamb for it, or the donkey itself). The donkey could not be killed by shedding blood because that would make it a sacrifice, and that was not possible with this kind of animal. See G. Brin, "The Firstling of Unclean Animals," JQR 68 (1977): 1-15. †† tn: Heb "and every firstborn of man among your sons." The addition of "man" is clearly meant to distinguish firstborn humans from animals. sn: One was to sacrifice the firstborn animals to Yahweh, but the children were to be redeemed by their fathers. The redemption price was five shekels ( Num 18:15-16). †‡ sn: As with v. 8, the Law now requires that the children be instructed on the meaning of this observance. It is a memorial of the deliverance from bondage and the killing of the firstborn in Egypt. ††† tn: Heb "tomorrow." †††† tn: Heb "and it will be when your son will ask you." ‡ tn: The question is cryptic; it simply says, "What is this?" but certainly refers to the custom just mentioned. It asks, "What does this mean?" or "Why do we do this?" ‡† tn: The expression is "with strength of hand," making "hand" the genitive of specification. In translation "strength" becomes the modifier, because "hand" specifies where the strength was. But of course the whole expression is anthropomorphic for the power of God. ‡†† tn: Heb "house of slaves." ‡† tn: Heb "dealt hardly in letting us go" or "made it hard to let us go" (see S. R. The Leading of God ‡†

‡†† sn: The pattern of the passage now emerges more clearly; it concerns the grateful debt of the redeemed. In the first part eating the unleavened bread recalls the night of deliverance in Egypt, and it calls for purity. In the second part the dedication of the firstborn was an acknowledgment of the deliverance of the firstborn from bondage. They were to remember the deliverance and choose purity; they were to remember the deliverance and choose dedication.

The NT will also say, "You are not your own, for you were bought with a price, therefore, glorify God" ( 1 Cor 6:20). Here too the truths of God's great redemption must be learned well and retained well from generation to generation. ‡†† sn: This short section (vv. 17-22) marks the beginning of the journey of the Israelites toward the sea and Sinai. The emphasis here is on the leading of Yahweh – but this leading is manifested in a unique, supernatural way – unlikely to be repeated with these phenomena. Although a primary application of such a passage would be difficult, the general principle is clear: God, by his clear revelation, leads his people to the fulfillment of the promise. This section has three short parts: the leading to the sea (17-18), the bones of Joseph (19), and the leading by the cloud and pillar (20-22). ‡††† tn: The construction for this temporal clause is the temporal indicator with the vav ( ו )

19 tn: The word "way" is an adverbial accusative, providing the location for the verb "lead"; it is in construct so that "land of the Philistines" is a genitive of either indirect object ("to the land") or location ("in" or "through" the land). 20 sn: The term Philistines has been viewed by modern scholarship as an anachronism, since the Philistines were not believed to have settled in the region until the reign of Rameses III (in which case the term would not fit either the early or the late view of the exodus). But the OT clearly refers to Philistines in the days of the patriarchs. The people there in the earlier period may have been Semites, judging from their names, or they may have been migrants from Crete in the early time. The Philistines after the exodus were of Greek origin. The danger of warfare at this time was clearly with Canaanitish tribes. For further details, see K. A. Kitchen, "The Philistines," Peoples of Old Testament Times, 53-54; J. M. "Saying" introduces the content of what Joseph said. ‡† sn: This verb appears also in 3:16 and 4:31. The repetition here is a reminder that God was doing what he had said he would do and what Joseph had expected. ‡‡ tn: The form is a Hiphil perfect with the vav (ו)

Whatever the exact nature of these things, they formed direct, visible revelations from God, who was guiding the people in a clear and unambiguous way. Both clouds and fire would again and again represent the presence of God in his power and majesty, guiding and protecting his people, by judging their enemies. ‡‡‡ tn: The infinitive construct here indicates the result of these manifestations – "so that they went" or "could go." ‡ tn: These are adverbial accusatives of time. ‡† sn: See T. In the argument of the book it marks the division between the bondage in Egypt and the establishment of the people as a nation. Here is the deliverance from Egypt. The chapter divides simply in two, vv. 1-14 giving the instructions, and vv. 15-31 reporting the victory. See among others, G. Coats, "History and Theology in the Sea Tradition," ST 29 (1975): 53-62; A. J. Ehlen, "Deliverance at the Sea: Diversity and Unity in a Biblical Theme," CTM 44 (1973): 168-91; J. B.  sn: B. Jacob (Exodus, 396-97) notes how the speech is overly dramatic and came from a people given to using such exaggerations (Num 16:14), even using a double negative. The challenge to Moses brings a double irony. To die in the desert would be without proper burial, but in Egypt there were graves - it was a land of tombs and graves! Gesenius notes that two negatives in the sentence do not nullify each other but make the sentence all the more emphatic: "Is it because there were no graves...?" (GKC 483 §152. y). ‡† tn: The demonstrative pronoun has the enclitic use again, giving a special emphasis to the question (R. J. ‡‡† tn: Heb "Is not this the word that we spoke to you." ‡‡† sn: U. Cassuto (Exodus, 164) explains this statement by the people as follows: "The question appears surprising at first, for we have not read previously that such words were spoken to Moses. Nor is the purport of the protest of the Israelite foremen (v 21 [5:21]) identical with that of the words uttered now. However, from a psychological standpoint the matter can be easily explained. In the hour of peril the children of Israel remember that remonstrance, and now it seems to them that it was of a sharper character and flowed from their foresight, and that the present situation justifies it, for death awaits them at this moment in the desert." This declaration that "we told you so," born of fright, need not have been strictly accurate or logical. ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "better for us to serve." <sup>18</sup> tn: Since Hebrew does not use quotation marks to indicate the boundaries of quotations, there is uncertainty about whether the Israelites' statement in Egypt includes the end of v. 12 or consists solely of "leave us alone so that we can serve the Egyptians." In either case, the command to Moses to leave them alone rested on the assumption, spoken or unspoken, that serving Egypt would be less risky than what Moses was proposing. Now with the Egyptian army on the horizon, the Israelites are sure that their worst predictions are about to take place. <sup>19</sup> tn: The use of לָךְ

‡‡† sn: B. Jacob (Exodus, 400-401) makes a good case that there may have been only one pillar, one cloud; it would have been a dark cloud behind it, but in front of it, shining the way, a pillar of fire. He compares the manifestation on Sinai, when the mountain was on fire but veiled by a dark cloud (Deut 4:11; 5:22). See also Exod 13:21; Num 14:14; Deut 1:33; Neh 9:12, 19; Josh 24:7; Pss 78:14; 105:39. ‡‡‡ tn: The two nouns “cloud” and “darkness” form a nominal hendiadys: “and it was the cloud and the darkness” means “and it was the dark cloud.” Perhaps this is what the Egyptians saw, preventing them from observing Moses and the Israelites. § tn: Heb “this to this”; for the use of the pronouns in this reciprocal sense of “the one to the other,” see GKC 448 §139. e, n. 3. §† tc: The LXX reads very differently at the end of this verse: “and there was darkness and blackness and the night passed.” B. S. Childs (Exodus [OTL], 218) summarizes three proposals: (1) One takes the MT as it stands and explains it along the lines of the Targum and Jewish exegesis, that there was one cloud that was dark to one group and light to the other. (2) Another tries to reconstruct a verb from the noun “darkness” or make some use of the Greek verb. (3) A third seeks a different meaning for the verb “lit,” “gave light” by comparative philology, but no consensus has been reached. Given that there is no easy solution apart from reconstructing the text, and given that the MT can be interpreted as it is, the present translation follows the MT. §†† tn: Or “drove the sea back” (NIV, NCV, NRSV, TEV). §†† sn: Here the title of “servant” is given to Moses. This is the highest title a mortal can have in the OT – the “servant of Yahweh.” It signifies more than a believer; it describes the individual as acting on behalf of God. For example, when Moses stretched out his hand, God used it as his own ( Isa 63:12). Moses was God’s personal representative. The chapter records both a message of salvation and of judgment. Like the earlier account of deliverance at the Passover, this chapter can be a lesson on deliverance from present troubles – if God could do this for Israel, there is no trouble too great for him to overcome. The passage can also be understood as a picture (at least) of the deliverance at the final judgment on the world. But the Israelites used this account for a paradigm of the power of God: namely, God is able to deliver his people from danger because he is the sovereign Lord of creation. His people must learn to trust him, even in desperate situations; they must fear him and not the situation. God can bring any threat to an end by bringing his power to bear in judgment on the wicked. §† sn: This chapter is a song of praise sung by Moses and the people right after the deliverance from the Sea. The song itself is vv. 1b-18; it falls into three sections – praise to God (1b-3), the cause for the praise (4-13), and the conclusion (14-18). The point of the first section is that God’s saving acts inspire praise from his people; the second is that God’s powerful acts deliver his people from the forces of evil; and the third section is that God’s demonstrations of his sovereignty inspire confidence in him by his people. So the Victory Song is very much like the other declarative praise psalms – the resolve to praise, the power of God, the victory over the enemies, the incomparability of God in his redemption, and the fear of the people. 22 tn: Heb “man of war” (so KJV, ASV). “Warrior” is now the preferred translation since “man of war” is more commonly known today as a warship. The expression indicates that Yahweh is one who understands how to fight and defeat the enemy. The word “war” modifies “man” to reveal that Yahweh is a warrior. Other passages use similar descriptions: Isa 42:13 has “man of wars”; Ps 24:8 has “mighty man of battle.” See F. Cross, “The Divine Warrior in Israel’s Early Cult,” Biblical Motifs, 11-30. 23 tn: Heb “Yahweh is his name.” As throughout, the name “Yah-

Freedman, "The Song of Miriam," JNES 14 (1955): 243-47. 22 tn: The question is of course rhetorical; it is a way of affirming that no one is comparable to God. See C. J. Labuschagne, The Incomparability of Yahweh in the Old Testament, 22, 66-67, and 94-97. 23 sn: Verses 11-17 will now focus on Yahweh as the incomparable one who was able to save Israel from their foes and afterward lead them to the promised land. 24 tn: S. R. Driver suggests "praiseworthy acts" as the translation (Exodus, 137). 25 tn: The verb is the prefixed conjugation, the preterite without the vav consecutive. The subject, the "earth," must be inclusive of the sea, or it may indicate the grave or Sheol; the sea drowned them. Some scholars wish to see this as a reference to Dathan and Abiram, and therefore evidence of a later addition or compilation. It fits this passage well, however. 26 tn: The verbs in the next two verses are perfect tenses, but can be interpreted as a prophetic perfect, looking to the future. 27 tn: The particle וַיִּכְרַס

28 tn: This verb seems to mean "to guide to a watering-place" (See Ps 23:2). 29 tn: This verb is a prophetic perfect, assuming that the text means what it said and this song was sung at the Sea. So all these countries were yet to hear of the victory. 30 tn: The word properly refers to "pangs" of childbirth. When the nations hear, they will be terrified. 31 tn: The verb is again a prophetic perfect. 32 tn: This is a prophetic perfect. 33 tn: This verb is imperfect tense. 34 tn: The two words can form a nominal hendiadys, "a dreadful fear," though most English versions retain the two separate terms. 35 tn: The form is an imperfect. 36 tn: The adjective is in construct form and governs the noun "arm" ("arm" being the anthropomorphic expression for what God did). § sn: This song of the sea is, then, a great song of praise for Yahweh’s deliverance of Israel at the Sea, and his preparation to lead them to the promised land, much to the (anticipated) dread of the nations. The principle here, and elsewhere in Scripture, is that the people of God naturally respond to God in praise for his great acts of deliverance. Few will match the powerful acts that were exhibited in Egypt, but these nonetheless set the tone. The song is certainly typological of the song of the saints in heaven who praise God for delivering them from the bondage of this world by judging the world. The focus of the praise, though, still is on the person (attributes) and works of God. §† sn: The first event of the Israelites’ desert experience is a failure, for they murmur against Yahweh and are given a stern warning – and the provision of sweet water. The event teaches that God is able to turn bitter water into sweet water for his people, and he promises to do such things if they obey. He can provide for them in the desert – he did not bring them into the desert to let them die. But there is a deeper level to this story – the healing of the water is incidental to the healing of the people, their lack of trust. The passage is arranged in a neat chiasm, starting with a journey (A), ending with the culmination of the journey (A’); developing to bitter water (B), resolving to sweet water (B’); complaints by the people (C), leading to the instructions for the people (C’); and the central turning point is the wonder miracle (D). §†† tn: The verb form is unusual; the normal expression is with the Qal, which expresses that they journeyed. But here the Hiphil is used to under-

score that Moses caused them to journey – and he is following God. So the point is that God was leading Israel to the bitter water. §‡ sn: The mention that they travelled for three days into the desert is deliberately intended to recall Moses’ demand that they go three days into the wilderness to worship. Here, three days in, they find bitter water and complain – not worship. §‡† sn: The Hebrew word “Marah” means “bitter.” This motif will be repeated four times in this passage to mark the central problem. Earlier in the book the word had been used for the “bitter herbs” in the Passover, recalling the bitter labor in bondage. So there may be a double reference here – to the bitter waters and to Egypt itself – God can deliver from either. §† tn: The infinitive construct here provides the direct object for the verb “to be able,” answering the question of what they were not able to do. §‡ tn: The causal clause here provides the reason for their being unable to drink the water, as well as a clear motivation for the name. §§† sn: Many scholars have attempted to explain these things with natural phenomena. Here Marah is identified with Ain Hawarah. It is said that the waters of this well are notoriously salty and brackish; Robinson said it was six to eight feet in diameter and the water about two feet deep; the water is unpleasant, salty, and somewhat bitter. As a result the Arabs say it is the worst tasting water in the area (W. C. Kaiser, Jr., “Exodus,” EBC 2:398). But that would not be a sufficient amount of water for the number of Israelites in the first place, and in the second, they could not drink it at all. But third, how did Moses change it? §§‡ tn: The עָלֶיךָ

19 tn: The imperfect tense here should be given a potential nuance: “What can we drink?” since the previous verse reports that they were not able to drink the water. sn: It is likely that Moses used words very much like this when he prayed. The difference seems to lie in the prepositions – he cried “to” Yahweh, but the people murmured “against” Moses. 20 tn: The verb is נִיזְרְהוּ

21 tn: Or “a [piece of] wood” (cf. NAB, NIV, NRSV, TEV, CEV); NLT “a branch.” sn: S. R. Driver (Exodus, 143) follows some local legends in identifying this tree as one that is supposed to have – even to this day – the properties necessary for making bitter water sweet. B. Jacob (Exodus, 436) reports that no such tree has ever been found, but then he adds that this does not mean there was not such a bush in the earlier days. He believes that here God used a natural means (“showed, instructed”) to sweeten the water. He quotes Ben Sira as saying God had created these things with healing properties in them. 22 tn: Heb “he”; the referent (Moses) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 23 tn: Heb “there he”; the referent (the Lord) is supplied for clarity. 24 tn: Heb “for him” (referring to Israel as a whole). 25 tn:

§ sn: Judging from the way the story is told they were not far from the oasis. But God had other plans for them, to see if they would trust him wholeheartedly and obey. They did not do very well this first time, and they will have to learn how to obey. The lesson is clear: God uses adversity to test his people’s loyalty. The response to adversity must be prayer to God, for he can turn the bitter into the sweet, the bad into the good, and the prospect of death into life. §† sn: Exod 16 plays an important part in the development of the book’s theme. It is part of the wider section that is the prologue leading up to the covenant at Sinai, a part of which was the obligation of obedience and loyalty (P. W. Ferris, Jr., “The Manna Narrative of Exodus 16:1-10,” JETS 18 [1975]: 191-99). The record of the wanderings in the wilderness is selective and not exhaustive. It may have been arranged somewhat topically for instructional reasons. U. Cassuto describes this section of the book as a didactic anthology arranged according to association of both context and language ( Exodus, 187). Its themes are: lack of vital necessities, murmuring, proving, and providing. All the wilderness stories reiterate the same motifs. So, later, when Israel arrived in Canaan, they would look back and be reminded that it was Yahweh who brought them all the way, in spite of their rebellions. Because he is their Savior and their Provider, he will demand loyalty from them. In the Manna Narrative there is murmuring over the lack of bread (1-3), the disputation with Moses (4-8), the appearance of the glory

Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their exodus§† from the land of Egypt. 2 The entire company§†† of Israelites murmured against Moses and Aaron in the desert. 3 The Israelites said to them, “If only we had died§† by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, when we sat by§† the pots of meat, when we ate bread to the full, §†† for you have brought us out into this desert to kill§†† this whole assembly with hunger!”

§† tn: The word is often rendered “congregation” (so KJV, ASV, NASB, NRSV), but the modern perception of a congregation is not exactly what is in mind in the desert. Another possible rendering is “community” (NAB, NIV, NCV, TEV) or “assembly.” The Hebrew word is used of both good and bad groups ( Judg 14:8; Ps 1:5; 106:17-18). §†† tn: The form in the text is אָמַר

§†† tn: The form is a Qal infinitive construct used in a temporal clause, and the verb “when we ate” has the same structure. §§† sn: That the complaint leading up to the manna is unjustified can be seen from the record itself. They left Egypt with flocks and herds and very much cattle, and about 45 days later they are complaining that they are without food. Moses reminded them later that they lacked nothing ( Deut 3:7; for the whole sermon on this passage, see 8:1-20). Moreover, the complaint is absurd because the food of work gangs was far more meager than they recall. The complaint was really against Moses. They craved the eating of meat and of bread and so God will meet that need; he will send bread from heaven and quail as well. §§§ tn: אָמַר

why to gather twice as much on the sixth day. In other words, this instruction seems to presume that they knew about the Sabbath law. That law will be included in this chapter in a number of ways, suggesting to some scholars that this chapter is out of chronological order, placed here for a purpose. Some argue that the manna episode comes after the revelation at Sinai. But it is not necessary to take such a view. God had established the Sabbath in the creation, and if Moses has been expounding the Genesis traditions in his teachings then they would have known about that. † tn: The text simply has "evening, and you will know." Gesenius notes that the perfect tense with the vav consecutive occurs as the apodosis to temporal clauses or their equivalents. Here the first word implies the idea "[when it becomes] evening" or simply "[in the] evening" (GKC 337-38 §112. oo). sn: Moses is very careful to make sure that they know it is Yahweh who has brought them out, and it will be Yahweh who will feed them. They are going to be convinced of this now. †† tn: Heb "morning, and you will see." ‡ tn: The form is a Qal infinitive construct with a preposition and a suffix. It forms an adverbial clause, usually of time, but here a causal clause. ‡† tn: The words "as for us" attempt to convey the force of the Hebrew word order, which puts emphasis on the pronoun: "and we - what?" The implied answer to the question is that Moses and Aaron are nothing, merely the messengers. The next verse repeats the question to further press the seriousness of what the Israelites are doing. ‡‡ tn: "You will know this" has been added to make the line smooth. Because of the abruptness of the lines in the verse, and the repetition with v. 7, B. S. Childs (Exodus [OTL], 273) thinks that v. 8 is merely a repetition by scribal error - even though the versions render it as the MT has it. But B. Jacob (Exodus, 447) suggests that the contrast with vv. 6 and 7 is important for another reason - there Moses and Aaron speak, and it is smooth and effective, but here only Moses speaks, and it is labored and clumsy. "We should realize that Moses had properly claimed to be no public speaker." ‡‡† tn: Here again is an infinitive construct with the preposition forming a temporal clause. ‡‡‡ tn: The words "as for us" attempt to convey the force of the Hebrew word order, which puts emphasis on the pronoun: "and we - what?" The implied answer to the question is that Moses and Aaron are nothing, merely the messengers. § tn: The word order is "not against us [are] your murmurings." §† tn: Or "congregation" (KJV, ASV, NASB, NRSV); the same word occurs in v. 10. §†† tn: The verb means "approach, draw near." It is used in the Torah of drawing near for religious purposes. It is possible that some sacrifice was involved here, but no mention is made of that. §‡ tn: Heb "and it was as Aaron spoke." The construction uses the temporal indicator and then the Piel infinitive construct followed by the subjective genitive "Aaron." §†† sn: S. R. Driver says, "A brilliant glow of fire...symbolizing Jehovah's presence, gleamed through the cloud, resting...on the Tent of Meeting. The cloud shrouds the full brilliancy of the glory, which human eye could not behold" (Exodus, 147-48; see also Ezek 1:28; 3:12, 23; 8:4; 9:3, et al.).

A Hebrew word often translated "behold" or "lo" introduces the surprising sight. §† tn: The verb is the Niphal perfect of the verb "to see" - "it was seen." But the standard way of translating this form is from the perspective of Yahweh as subject - "he appeared." §‡ tn: Heb "during the evenings"; see Exod 12:6. §§† sn: One of the major interpretive difficulties is the comparison between Exod 16 and Num 11. In Numbers we find that the giving of the manna was about 24 months after the Exod 16 time (assuming there was a distinct time for this chapter), that it was after the erection of the tabernacle, that Taberah (the Burning) preceded it (not in Exod 16), that the people were tired of the manna (not that there was no bread to eat) and so God would send the quail, and that there was a severe tragedy over it. In Exod 16 both the manna and the quail are given on the same day, with no mention of quail on the following days. Contemporary scholarship generally assigns the accounts to two different sources because complete reconciliation seems impossible. Even if we argue that Exodus has a thematic arrangement and "telescopes" some things to make a point, there will still be difficulties in harmonization. Two considerations must be kept in mind: 1) First, they could be separate events entirely. If this is true, then they should be treated separately as valid accounts of things that appeared or occurred during the period of the wanderings. Similar things need not be the same thing. 2) Secondly, strict chronological order is not always maintained in the Bible narratives, especially if it is a didactic section. Perhaps Exod 16 describes the initiation of the giving of manna as God's provision of bread, and therefore placed in the prologue of the covenant, and Num 11 is an account of a mood which developed over a period of time in response to the manna. Num 11 would then be looking back from a different perspective. §§‡ tn: The verb means "to be sated, satisfied"; in this context it indicates that they would have sufficient bread to eat - they would be full. §§§ tn: The form is a Qal perfect with the vav ( |

for the Israelites to gather an omer a day per person, and they gathered it day by day throughout the wilderness sojourn. Num 11 says it was like coriander seed with the appearance of bdellium, it tasted like fresh oil, and it fell with the dew. Deut 8:3 says it was unknown to Israel or her ancestors; Psalm 78:24 parallels it with grain. Some scholars compare ancient references to honeydew that came from the heavens. F. S. Bodenheimer (“The Manna of Sinai,” BA 10 [1947]: 2) says that it was a sudden surprise for the nomadic Is- raelites because it provided what they desired – sweetness. He says that it was a product that came from two insects, making the manna a honeydew excretion from plant lice and scale insects. The excre- tion hardens and drops to the ground as a sticky solid. He notes that some cicadas are called man in Arabic. This view accounts for some of the things in these passages: the right place, the right time, the right description, and a similar taste. But there are major difficulties: Exodus requires a far greater amount, it could breed worms, it could melt away, it could be baked into bread, it could decay and stink. The suggestion is in no way convincing. Bodenheimer argues that “worms” could mean “ants” that carried them away, but that is con- trived – the text could have said ants. The fact that the Bible calls it “bread” creates no problem. לָקַח

‡† sn: B. Jacob (Exodus, 454-55) suggests that Moses was saying to them, “It is not manna. It is the food Yahweh has given you.” He comes to this conclusion based on the strange popular etymology from the interrogative word, noting that people do not call things “what?” ‡† sn: For other views see G. Vermès, “He Is the Bread’ Targum Neofiti Ex. 16:15,” SJLA 8 (1975): 139-46; and G. J. Cowling, “Targum Neofiti Ex. 16:15,” AJBA (1974-75): 93-105. ‡†† tn: Heb “the thing that.” ‡††† tn: The perfect tense could be taken as a definite past with Moses now reporting it. In this case a very recent past. But in declaring the word from Yahweh it could be instantaneous, and receive a present tense translation – “here and now he commands you.” ‡ tn: The form is the plural imperative: “Gather [you] each man according to his eating.” ‡† sn: The omer is an amount mentioned only in this chapter, and its size is unknown, except by comparison with the ephah (v. 36). A number of recent English versions approximate the omer as “two his tent.”<sup>17</sup> The Israelites did so, and they gathered – some more, some less.<sup>18</sup> When§† they measured with an omer, the one who gathered much had nothing left over, and the one who gathered little lacked nothing; each one had gathered what he could eat.

<sup>24</sup> So they put it aside until the morning, just as Moses had commanded, and it did not stink, nor were there any worms in it.<sup>25</sup> Moses said, “Eat it today, for today is a Sabbath to the LORD ; today you will not find it in the area.<sup>31,26</sup> Six days you will gather it, but on the seventh day, the Sabbath, there will not be any.”

NCV, CEV, NLT); TEV “two litres.” ‡†† tn: Heb “for a head.” ‡† tn: The word “number” is an accusative that defines more precisely how much was to be gathered (see GKC 374 §118. h). ‡†† tn: Traditionally “souls.” ‡†† tn: Heb “will take.” ‡†† tn: “lives” has been supplied. ‡††† tn: The preterite with the vav ( ו ) ‡††† tn:

This is an example of the repetition of words to express the distribu- tive sense; here the meaning is “every morning” (see GKC 388 §121. c).<sup>21</sup> tn: The perfect tenses here with vav ( ו )

† tn: Heb "in the field" (so KJV, ASV, NASB, NCV, NRSV); NAB, NIV, NLT "on the ground." †† tn: The verb is plural, and so it is addressed to the nation and not to Moses. The perfect tense in this sentence is the characteristic perfect, denoting action characteristic, or typical, of the past and the present. ‡ sn: Noting the rabbinic teaching that the giving of the Sabbath was a sign of God's love – it was accomplished through the double portion on the sixth day – B. Jacob says, "God made no request unless He provided the means for its execution" (Exodus, 461). ‡‡ tn: Heb "remain, a man where he is." ‡‡‡ tn: Or "Let not anyone go" (see GKC 445 §138. d). ‡‡‡ sn: The name "house of Israel" is unusual in this context. ‡‡‡ tn: Hebrew מן § tn: Heb "like seed of coriander, white, its taste was." §† tn: Heb "This is the thing that." §†† tn: Heb "for keeping." §‡ tn: Heb "according to your generations" (see Exod 12:14). §†† tn: In this construction after the particle expressing purpose or result, the imperfect tense has the nuance of final imperfect, equal to a subjunctive in the classical languages. §† sn: The "Testimony" is a reference to the Ark of the Covenant; so the pot of manna would be placed before Yahweh in the tabernacle. W. C. Kaiser says that this later instruction came from a time after the tabernacle had been built (see Exod 25:10-22; W. C. Kaiser, Jr., "Exodus," EBC 2:405). This is not a problem since the final part of this chapter had to have been included at the end of the forty years in the desert. §‡ tn: "for keeping." §§† tn: The words "omer" and "ephah" are transliterated Hebrew words. The omer is mentioned only in this passage. (It is different from a "homer" [cf. Ezek 45:11-14].) An ephah was a dry measure whose capacity is uncertain: "Quotations given for the ephah vary from ca. 45 to 20 liters" (C. Houtman, Exodus, 2:340-41). sn: The point of this chapter, with all its instructions and reports included, is God's miraculous provision of food for his people. This is a display of sovereign power that differs from the display of military power. Once again the story calls for faith, but here it is faith in Yahweh to provide for his people. The provision is also a test to see if they will obey the instructions of God. Deut 8 explains this. The point, then, is that God provides for the needs of his people that they may demonstrate their dependence on him by obeying him. The exposition of this passage must also correlate to John 6. God's providing manna from heaven to meet the needs of his people takes on new significance in the application that Jesus makes of the subject to himself. There the requirement is the same – will they believe and obey? But at the end of the event John explains that they murmured about Jesus. §§‡ sn: This is the famous story telling how the people rebelled against Yahweh when they thirsted, saying that Moses had brought them out into the wilderness to kill them by thirst, and how Moses with the staff brought water from the rock. As a result of this the name was called Massa and Meribah because of the testing and the striving. It was a challenge to Moses' leadership as well as a test of Yahweh's presence. The narrative in its present form serves an important point in the argument of the book. The story turns on the gracious provision of God who can give his people water when there is none available. The narrative is structured to show how the people strove. Thus, the story intertwines God's free flowing grace with the sad memory of Israel's sins. The passage can be divided into three parts: the situation and the complaint (1-3), the cry and the miracle (4-6), and the commemoration by naming (7). §§§ tn: Or "congregation" (KJV, ASV, NASB, NRSV). <sup>18</sup> tn: The text says that they journeyed "according to their journeyings." Since the verb form (and therefore the derived noun) essentially means to pull up the tent pegs and move along, this verse would be saying that they traveled by stages, or, from place to place. <sup>19</sup> sn: The location is a bit of a problem. Exod 19:1-2 suggests that it is near Sinai, whereas it is normally located near Kadesh in the north. Without any details provided, M. Noth concludes that two versions came together (Exodus [OTL], 138). S. R. Driver says that the writer wrote not knowing that they were 24 miles apart (Exodus, 157). Critics have long been bothered by this passage because of the two names given at the same place. If two sources had been brought together, it is not possible now to identify them. But Noth insisted that if there were two names there were two different locations. The names Massah and Meribah occur alone in Scripture (Deut 9:22, and Num 20:1 for examples), but together in Ps 95 and in Deut 33:8. But none of these passages is a clarification of the difficulty. Most critics would argue that Massah was a secondary element that was introduced into this account, because Exod 17 focuses on Meribah. From that starting point they can diverge greatly on the interpretation, usually having something to do with a water test. But although Num 20 is parallel in several ways, there are major differences: 1) it takes place 40 years later than this, 2) the name Kadesh is joined to the name Meribah there, and 3) Moses is punished there. One must conclude that if an event could occur twice in similar ways (complaint about water would be a good candidate for such), then there is no reason a similar name could not be given. <sup>20</sup> tn: The disjunctive vav introduces a parenthetical clause that is essential for this passage – there was no water. <sup>21</sup> tn: Here the construction uses a genitive after the infinitive construct for the subject: "there was no water for the drinking of the people" (GKC 353-54 §115. c). <sup>22</sup> tn: The verb

§§‡ sn: This short passage gives the first account of Israel's holy wars. The war effort and Moses' holding up his hands go side by side until the victory is won and commemorated. Many have used this as an example of intercessory prayer – but the passage makes no such mention. In Exodus so far the staff of God is the token of the power of God; when Moses used it, God demonstrated his power. To use the staff of God was to say that God did it; to fight without the staff was to face defeat. Using the staff of God was a way of submitting to and depending on the power of God in all areas of life. The first part of the story reports the attack and the preparation for the battle (8,9). The second part describes the battle and its outcome (10-13). The final section is the preservation of this event in the memory of Israel (14-16). §§§ tn: Heb "and Amalek came"; NIV, NCV, TEV, CEV "the Amalekites." <sup>18</sup> tn: Or "fought with." <sup>19</sup> tn: This could be rendered literally "choose men for us." But here God was going to wipe out the memory of them. But the idea of removing the memory of a people is an idiom for destroying them – they will have no posterity and no lasting heritage.

18 sn: The message of this short narrative, then, concerns the power of God to protect his people. The account includes the difficulty, the victory, and the commemoration. The victory must be retained in memory by the commemoration. So the expository idea could focus on that: The people of God must recognize (both for engaging in warfare and for praise afterward) that victory comes only with the power of God. In the NT the issue is even more urgent, because the warfare is spiritual – believers do not wrestle against flesh and blood. So only God's power will bring victory. <sup>19</sup> sn: This chapter forms the transition to the Law. There has been the deliverance, the testing passages, the provision in the wilderness, and the warfare. Any God who can do all this for his people deserves their allegiance. In chap. 18 the Lawgiver is giving advice, using laws and rulings, but then he is given advice to organize the elders to assist. Thus, when the Law is fully revealed, a system will be in place to administer it. The point of the passage is that a great leader humbly accepts advice from other godly believers to delegate responsibility. He does not try to do it all himself; God does not want one individual to do it all. The chapter has three parts: vv. 1-12 tell how Jethro heard and came and worshiped and blessed; vv. 13-23 have the advice of Jethro, and then vv. 24-27 tell how Moses implemented the plan and Jethro went home. See further E. J. Runions, "Exodus Motifs in 1 Samuel 7 and 8," EvQ 52 (1980): 130-31; and also see for another idea T. C. Butler, "An Anti-Moses Tradition," JSOT 12 (1979): 9-15. <sup>20</sup> tn: This clause beginning with וַיִּזְכֹּר verb “delivered” is an important motif in this chapter (see its use in vv. 8, 9, and 10 with reference to Pharaoh). ‡† tn: Heb “his”; the referent (Moses) has been specified in the translation for clarity. ‡‡ tn: This is an adverbial accusative that defines the place (see GKC 373-74 §118. g). ‡‡† sn: The mountain of God is Horeb, and so the desert here must be the Sinai desert by it. But chap. 19 suggests that they left Rephidim to go the 24 miles to Sinai. It may be that this chapter fits in chronologically after the move to Sinai, but was placed here thematically. W. C. Kaiser defends the present location of the story by responding to other reasons for the change given by Lightfoot, but does not deal with the travel locations (W. C. Kaiser, Jr., “Exodus,” EBC 2:411). ‡‡‡ sn: This verse may seem out of place, since the report has already been given that they came to the desert. It begins to provide details of the event that the previous verse summarizes. The announcement in verse 6 may have come in advance by means of a messenger or at the time of arrival, either of which would fit with the attention to formal greetings in verse 7. This would suit a meeting between two important men; the status of Moses has changed. The LXX solves the problem by taking the pronoun “I” as the particle “behold” and reads it this way: “one said to Moses, ‘Behold, your father-in-law has come....’” § sn: This is more than polite oriental custom. Jethro was Moses’ benefactor, father-in-law, and a priest. He paid much respect to him. Now he could invite Jethro into his home (see B. The Syriac, Targum, and Vulgate have “offered.” But Cody argues because of the precise wording in the text Jethro did not offer the sacrifices but received them (A. Cody, “Exodus 18,12: Jethro Accepts a Covenant with the Israelites,” Bib 49 [1968]: 159-61). §§§ sn: Jethro brought offerings as if he were the one who had been delivered. The “burnt offering” is singular, to honor God first. The other sacrifices were intended for the invited guests to eat (a forerunner of the peace offering). See B. † tn: The "decrees" or "statutes" were definite rules, stereotyped and permanent; the "laws" were directives or pronouncements given when situations arose. S. R. Driver suggests this is another reason why this event might have taken place after Yahweh had given laws on the mountain (Exodus, 165). †† tn: Heb "the thing." ‡ tn: The verb means "to fall and fade" as a leaf (Ps 1:3). In Ps 18:45 it is used figuratively of foes fading away, failing in strength and courage (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 166). Here the infinitive absolute construction heightens the meaning. ‡† tn: Gesenius lists the specialized use of the comparative min (n

This is introducing the aspect of the work that only Moses could do, what he has been doing. He is to be before God for the people, to pray for them, to appeal on their behalf. Jethro is essentially saying, I understand that you cannot delegate this to anyone else, so continue doing it (U. Cassuto, Exodus, 219-20). § tn: The form is the perfect tense with the vav ( ו )

The imperfect tense should be given the nuance of obligatory imperfect – it is the way they must walk. §†† tn: This last part is parallel to the preceding: "work" is also a direct object of the verb "make known," and the relative clause that qualifies it also uses an obligatory imperfect. §† tn: The construction uses the independent pronoun for emphasis, and then the imperfect tense "see" ( רָאָה )

ing, deciding cases, meeting needs), so that there will be peace, and so that leaders will not be exhausted. Probably capable people are more ready to do that than leaders are ready to relinquish control. But leaders have to be willing to take the risk, to entrust the task to others. Here Moses is the model of humility, receiving correction and counsel from Jethro. And Jethro is the ideal adviser, for he has no intention of remaining there to run the operation. † sn: This chapter is essentially about mediation. The people are getting ready to meet with God, receive the Law from him, and enter into a covenant with him. All of this required mediation and preparation. Through it all, Israel will become God's unique possession, a kingdom of priests on earth – if they comply with his Law. The chapter can be divided as follows: vv. 1-8 tell how God, Israel's great deliverer promised to make them a kingdom of priests; this is followed by God's declaration that Moses would be the mediator (v. 9); vv. 10-22 record instructions for Israel to prepare themselves to worship Yahweh and an account of the manifestation of Yahweh with all the phenomena; and the chapter closes with the mediation of Moses on behalf of the people (vv. 23-25). Having been redeemed from Egypt, the people will now be granted a covenant with God. See also R. E. Bee, "A Statistical Study of the Sinai Pericope," Journal of the Royal Statistical Society 135 (1972): 406-21. †† tn: The construction uses the infinitive construct followed by the subjective genitive to form a temporal clause. ‡ tn: Heb "on this day." ‡† tn: The form is a preterite with vav ( ו )

If this mountain is Jebel Musa, the traditional site of Sinai, then the plain in front of it would be Er-Rahah, about a mile and a half long by half a mile wide, fronting the mountain on the NW side (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 169). The plain itself is about 5000 feet above sea level. A mountain on the west side of the Arabian Peninsula has also been suggested as a possible site. ‡†† tn: Heb "and Moses went up." ‡‡‡ tn: This expression is normally translated as "Israelites" in this translation, but because in this place it is parallel to "the house of Jacob" it seemed better to offer a fuller rendering. § tn: The figure compares the way a bird would teach its young to fly and leave the nest with the way Yahweh brought Israel out of Egypt. This may be a deliberate allusion to another metaphor for the covenant relationship. §†† tn: Heb "listen to my voice." The idiom "listen to the voice of" implies obedience, not just mental awareness of sound. §‡ tn: The verb is a perfect tense with vav ( ו )

§§† tn: The construction "a kingdom of priests" means that the kingdom is made up of priests. W. C. Kaiser ("Exodus," EBC 2:417) offers four possible renderings of the expression: 1) apposition, viz., "kings, that is, priests; 2) as a construct with a genitive of specification, "royal priesthood"; 3) as a construct with the genitive being the attribute, "priestly kingdom"; and 4) reading with an unexpressed "and" – "kings and priests." He takes the latter view that they were to be kings and priests. (Other references are R. B. Y. Scott, "A Kingdom of Priests (Exodus xix. 6)," OTS 8 [1950]: 213-19; William L. Moran, "A Kingdom of Priests," The Bible in Current Catholic Thought, 7-20). However, due to the parallelism of the next description which uses an adjective, this is probably a construct relationship. This kingdom of God will be composed of a priestly people. All the Israelites would be living wholly in God's service and enjoying the right of access to him. And, as priests, they would have the duty of representing God to the nations, following what they perceived to be the duties of priests – proclaiming God's word, interceding for people, and making provision for people to find God through atonement (see Deut 33:9,10). §‡† tn: They are also to be "a holy nation." They are to be a nation separate and distinct from the rest of the nations. Here is another aspect of their duty. It was one thing to be God's special possession, but to be that they had to be priestly and holy. The duties of the covenant will specify what it would mean to be a holy nation. In short, they had to keep themselves free from everything that characterized pagan people (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 171). So it is a bilateral covenant: they received special privileges but they must provide special services by the special discipline. See also H. Kruse, "Exodus 19:5 and the Mission of Israel," North East Asian Journal of Theology 24/25 (1980): 239-42. §§§ tn: The verb is an imperfect. The people are not being presumptuous in stating their compliance – there are several options open for the interpretation of this tense. It may be classified as having a desiderative nuance: "we are willing to do" or, "we will do." <sup>18</sup> tn: The construction uses the deictic particle and the participle to express the imminent future, what God was about to do. Here is the first announcement of the theophany. <sup>19</sup> tn: Heb "the thickness of the cloud"; KJV, ASV, NASB, NCV, TEV, CEV, NLT "in a thick cloud." <sup>20</sup> tn: Since "and also in you" begins the clause, the emphasis must be that the people would also trust Moses. See Exod 4:1-9, 31; 14:31. <sup>21</sup> tn: This verb is a Piel perfect

The clause either means that no man will touch the mountain, so that if there is someone who is to be put to death he must be stoned or shot since they could not go into the mountain region to get him, or, it may mean no one is to touch the culprit who went in to the region of the mountain. ††† tn: Heb “a man.” †††† tn: The nuance here is permissive imperfect, “they may go up.” The ram’s horn would sound the blast to announce that the revelation period was over and it was permitted then to ascend the mountain. †††† tn: Heb “do not go near a woman”; NIV “Abstain from sexual relations.” sn: B. God knew them better than Moses did. 21 tn: Heb “sanctify it.” 22 sn: The passage has many themes and emphases that could be developed in exposition. It could serve for meditation: the theology drawn from the three parts could be subordinated to the theme of holiness: God is holy, therefore adhere to his word for service, approach him through a mediator, and adore him in purity and fearful reverence. A developed outline for the exposition could be: I. If the people of God will obey him, they will be privileged to serve in a unique way (1-8); II. If the people of God are to obey, they must be convinced of the divine source of their commands (9); and finally, III. If the people of God are convinced of the divine approval of their mediator, and the divine source of their instructions, they must sanctify themselves before him (vv. 10-25). In sum, the manifestation of the holiness of Yahweh is the reason for sanctification and worship. The correlation is to be made through 1 Peter 2 to the church. The Church is a kingdom of priests; it is to obey the Word of God. What is the motivation for this? Their mediator is Jesus Christ; he has the approval of the Father and manifests the glory of God to his own; and he declares the purpose of their calling is to display his glory. God’s people are to abstain from sin so that pagans can see their good works and glorify God. 23 sn: This chapter is the heart of the Law of Israel, and as such is well known throughout the world. There is so much literature on it that it is almost impossible to say anything briefly and do justice to the subject. But the exposition of the book must point out that this is the charter of the new nation of Israel. These ten commands (words) form the preamble; they will be followed by the decisions (judgments). And then in chap. 24 the covenant will be inaugurated. So when Israel entered into covenant with God, they entered into a theocracy by expressing their willingness to submit to his authority. The Law was the binding constitution for the nation of Israel under Yahweh their God. It was specifically given to them at a certain time and in a certain place. The Law legislated how Israel was to live in order to be blessed by God and used by him as a kingdom of priests. In the process of legislating their conduct and their ritual for worship, the Law revealed God. It revealed the holiness of Yahweh as the standard for all worship and service, and in revealing that it revealed or uncovered sin. But what the Law condemned, the Law (Leviticus) also made provision for in the laws of the sacrifice and the feasts intended for atonement. The NT teaches that the Law was good, and perfect, and holy. But it also teaches that Christ was the end (goal) of the Law, that it ultimately led to him. It was a pedagogue, Paul said, to bring people to Christ. And when the fulfillment of the promise came in him, believers were not to go back under the Law. What this means for Christians is that what the Law of Israel revealed about God and his will is timeless and still authoritative over faith and conduct, but what the Law regulated for Israel in their existence as the people of God has been done away with in Christ. The Ten Commandments reveal the essence of the Law; the ten for the most part are reiterated in the NT because they reflect the holy and righteous nature of God. The NT often raises them to a higher standard, to guard the spirit of the Law as well as the letter. † <sup>sn</sup>: The Bible makes it clear that the Law was the revelation of God at Mount Sinai. And yet study has shown that the law code's form follows the literary pattern of covenant codes in the Late Bronze Age, notably the Hittite codes. The point of such codes is that all the covenant stipulations are appropriate because of the wonderful things that the sovereign has done for the people. God, in using a well-known literary form, was both drawing on the people's knowledge of such to impress their duties on them, as well as putting new wine into old wineskins. The whole nature of God's code was on a much higher level. For this general structure, see M. G. Kline, Treaty of the Great King. For the Ten Commandments specifically, see J. J. Stamm and M. E. Andrew, The Ten Commandments in Recent Research (SBT). See also some of the general articles: M. Barrett, "God's Moral Standard: An Examination of the Decalogue," BV 12 (1978): 34-40; C. J. H. "I" – a person, a living personality, not an object or a mere thought. This enabled him to address "you" – Israel, and all his people, making the binding stipulations for them to conform to his will (B. Jacob, Exodus, 544). ‡ <sup>tn</sup>: Most English translations have "I am Yahweh your God." But the preceding chapters have again and again demonstrated how he made himself known to them. Now, the emphasis is on "I am your God" – and what that would mean in their lives. ‡† <sup>tn</sup>: The suffix on the verb is second masculine singular. It is this person that will be used throughout the commandments for the whole nation. God addresses them all as his people, but he addresses them individually for their obedience. The masculine form is not, thereby, intended to exclude women. ‡‡ <sup>tn</sup>: Heb "the house of slaves" meaning "the land of slavery." <sup>sn</sup>: By this announcement Yahweh

‡ tn: This is an important qualification to the principle. The word rendered “reject” is often translated “hate” and carries with it the idea of defiantly rejecting and opposing God and his word. ‡‡ tn: Heb “to thousands” or “to thousandth.” After “tenth,” Hebrew uses cardinal numbers for ordinals also. This statement is the antithesis of the preceding line. The “thousands” or “thousandth [generation]” are those who love Yahweh and keep his commands. These are descendants from the righteous, and even associates with them, who benefit from the mercy that God extends to his people. S. R. Driver ( Exodus, 195) says that this passage teaches that God’s mercy transcends his wrath; in his providence the beneficial consequences of a life of goodness extend indefinitely further than the retribution that is the penalty for persisting in sin. To say that God’s loyal love extends to thousands of generations or the thousandth generation is parallel to saying that it endures forever ( Ps. 118). See also Exod 34:7; Deut 5:10; 7:9; Ps 18:51; Jer 32:18. ‡†† tn: Or “use” (NCV, TEV); NIV, CEV, NLT “misuse”; NRSV “make wrongful use of.” ‡‡‡ tn: אָשָׁם

§† tn: The Piel infinitive construct provides the purpose of remembering the Sabbath day – to set it apart, to make it distinct from the other days. Verses 9 and 10 explain in part how this was to be done. To set this day apart as holy taught Israel the difference between the holy and the profane, that there was something higher than daily life. If an Israelite bent down to the ground laboring all week, the Sabbath called his attention to the heavens, to pattern life after the Creator (B. Jacob, Exodus, 569-70). §†† tn: The text has simply “six days,” but this is an adverbial accusative of time, answering how long they were to work (GKC 374 §118. k). §† tn: The imperfect tense has traditionally been rendered as a commandment, “you will labor.” But the point of this commandment is the prohibition of work on the seventh day. The permission nuance of the imperfect works well here. §† tn: This is the occupation, or business of the work week. §§† tn: The phrase “on it” has been supplied for clarity. §§† sn: The wife is omitted in the list, not that she was considered unimportant, nor that she was excluded from the rest, but rather in reflecting her high status. She was not man’s servant, not lesser than the man, but included with the man as an equal before God. The “you” of the commandments is addressed to the Israelites individually, male and female, just as God in the Garden of Eden held both the man and the woman responsible for their individual sins (see B. Jacob, Exodus, 567-68). §§§ sn: The Sabbath day was the sign of the Sinaitic Covenant. It required Israel to cease from ordinary labors and devote the day to God. It required Israel to enter into the life of God, to share his Sabbath. It gave them a chance to recall the work of the Creator. But in the NT the apostolic teaching for the Church does not make one day holier than another, but calls for the entire life to be sanctified to God. This teaching is an application of the meaning of entering into the Sabbath of God. The book of Hebrews declares that those who believe in Christ cease from their works and enter into his Sabbath rest. For a Christian keeping Saturday holy is not a requirement from the NT; it may be a good and valuable thing to have a day of rest and refreshment, but it is not a binding law for the Church. The principle of setting aside time to worship and serve the Lord has been carried forward, but the strict regulations have not. 18 tn: The verb שָׁבַת

But as W. C. Kaiser ("Exodus," EBC 2:424) summarizes, the land that was promised was the land of Canaan, and the duration of Israel in the land was to be based on morality and the fear of God as expressed in the home ( Deut 4:26, 33, 40; 32:46-47). The captivity was in part caused by a breakdown in this area ( Ezek 22:7, 15). The Law distinguished between adultery (which had a death penalty) and sexual contact with a young woman (which carried a monetary fine and usually marriage if the father was willing). So it distinguished fornication and adultery. Both were sins, but the significance of each was different. In the ancient world this sin is often referred to as "the great sin."

§† tn: The meaning of וַיִּבְנוּ

§‡ tn: Heb "and they stood from/ at a distance." §§† tn: The verb is a Piel imperative. In this context it has more of the sense of a request than a command. The independent personal pronoun "you" emphasizes the subject and forms the contrast with God's speaking. §§‡ tn: וַיִּבְנוּ

<sup>21</sup> sn: It will not be hard to expound the passage on the Ten Commandments once their place in scripture has been determined. They, for the most part, are reiterated in the NT, in one way or another, usually with a much higher standard that requires attention to the spirit of the laws. Thus, these laws reveal God's standard of righteousness by revealing sin. No wonder the Israelites were afraid when they saw the manifestation of God and heard his laws. When the whole covenant is considered, preamble and all, then it becomes clear that the motivation for obeying the commands is the person and the work of the covenant God – the one who redeemed his people. Obedience then becomes a response of devotion and adoration to the Redeemer who set them free. It becomes loyal service, not enslavement to laws. The point could be worded this way: God requires that his covenant people, whom he has redeemed, and to whom he has revealed himself, give their absolute allegiance and obedience to him. This means they will worship and serve him and safeguard the well-being of each other. <sup>22</sup> sn: Based on the revelation of the holy sovereign God, this pericope instructs Israel on the form of proper worship of such a God. It focuses on the altar, the centerpiece of worship. The point of the section is this: those who worship this holy God must preserve holiness in the way they worship – they worship where he permits, in the manner he prescribes, and with the blessings he promises. This paragraph is said to open the Book of the Covenant, which specifically rules on matters of life and worship. <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb "and Yahweh said." <sup>24</sup> tn: The direct object of the verb must be "gods of silver." The prepositional phrase modifies the whole verse to say that these gods would then be alongside the one true God.

Cassuto explains that by the understanding of parallelism each of the halves apply to the whole verse, so that “with me” and “for you” concern gods of silver or gods of gold ( Exodus, 255). †† sn: The instructions here call for the altar to be made of natural things, not things manufactured or shaped by man. The altar was either to be made of clumps of earth or natural, unhewn rocks. ‡ sn: The “burnt offering” is the offering prescribed in Lev 1. Everything of this animal went up in smoke as a sweet aroma to God. It signified complete surrender by the worshiper who brought the animal, and complete acceptance by God, thereby making atonement. The “peace offering” is legislated in Lev 3 and 7. This was a communal meal offering to celebrate being at peace with God. It was made usually for thanksgiving, for payment of vows, or as a freewill offering. ‡† tn: Gesenius lists this as one of the few places where the noun in construct seems to be indefinite in spite of the fact that the genitive has the article. He says בְּכֵל־הַמִּקְוֹם perfect tense: “If you buy...then he will serve.” The second imperfect tense (the ruling) could be taken either as a specific future or an obligatory imperfect. Gesenius explains how the verb works in the conditional clauses here (see GKC 497 §159. bb). §† sn: The interpretation of “Hebrew” in this verse is uncertain: (1) a gentilic ending, (2) a fellow Israelite, (3) or a class of mercenaries of the population (see W. C. Kaiser, Jr., “Exodus,” EBC 2:431). It seems likely that the term describes someone born a Hebrew, as opposed to a foreigner (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 210). The literature on this includes: M. P. Gray, “The Habiru-Hebrew Problem,” HUCA 29 (1958): 135-202. §† sn: The word מִשְׁפָּטִים

§§† tn: The adverb חָנֹךְ

§§‡ tn: The tense is imperfect, but in the conditional clause it clearly refers to action that is anterior to the action in the next clause. Heb “if he comes in single, he goes out single,” that is, “if he came in single, he will go out single.” §§§ tn: Heb “with his back” meaning “alone.” 18 tn: The phrase says, “if he was the possessor of a wife”; the noun בַּעַל

19 sn: The slave would not have the right or the means to acquire a wife. Thus, the idea of the master’s “giving” him a wife is clear – the master would have to pay the bride price and make the provision. In this case, the wife and the children are actually the possession of the master unless the slave were to pay the bride price – but he is a slave because he got into debt. The law assumes that the master was better able to provide for this woman than the freed slave and that it was most important to keep the children with the mother. 20 tn: The imperfect with the infinitive absolute means that the declaration is unambiguous, that the servant will clearly affirm that he wants to stay with the master. Gesenius says that in a case like this the infinitive emphasizes the importance of the condition on which some consequence depends (GKC 342-43 §113. o). 21 tn: Or taken as a desiderative imperfect, it would say, “I do not want to go out free.” 22 tn: The word is מִלְּהֵימָּוֶה

It is "flesh." The issue here is that the family she was to marry into is wealthy, they ate meat. She was not just to be given the basic food the ordinary people ate, but the fine foods that this family ate. §†† sn: See S. Paul, "Exodus 21:10, A Threefold Maintenance Clause," JNES 28 (1969): 48-53. Paul suggests that the third element listed is not marital rights but ointments since Sumerian and Akkadian texts list food, clothing, and oil as the necessities of life. The translation of "marital rights" is far from certain, since the word occurs only here. The point is that the woman was to be cared for with all that was required for a woman in that situation. §‡ sn: The lessons of slavery and service are designed to bring justice to existing customs in antiquity. The message is: Those in slavery for one reason or another should have the hope of freedom and the choice of service (vv. 2-6). For the rulings on the daughter, the message could be: Women, who were often at the mercy of their husbands or masters, must not be trapped in an unfortunate situation, but be treated well by their masters or husbands (vv. 7-11). God is preventing people who have power over others from abusing it. §†† sn: The underlying point of this section remains vital today: The people of God must treat all human life as sacred. §† tn: The construction uses a Hiphil participle in construct with the noun for "man" (or person as is understood in a law for the nation): "the one striking [of] a man." This is a casus pendens (independent nominative absolute); it indicates the condition or action that involves further consequence (GKC 361 §116. w). §‡ tn: The Hebrew word נָקַח

If he then dies, there is no penalty other than that the owner loses the slave who is his property - he suffers the loss. § tn: This line has occasioned a good deal of discussion. It may indicate that the child was killed, as in a miscarriage; or it may mean that there was a premature birth. The latter view is taken here because of the way the whole section is written: (1) "her children come out" reflects a birth and not the loss of children, (2) there is no serious damage, and (3) payment is to be set for any remuneration. ‡‡† tn: The imperfect tense here has the nuance of obligatory imperfect - he must pay back. ‡‡† tn: קָזַב אָוֵן

§ tn: Heb "found" (so KJV, ASV, NRSV). ‡† tn: The word תָּבֵן תָּבֵן

‡†† tn: The text has "there is not to him bloods." When the word "blood" is put in the plural, it refers to bloodshed, or the price of blood that is shed, i.e., blood guiltiness. sn: This law focuses on what is reasonable defense against burglary. If someone killed a thief who was breaking in during the night, he was not charged because he would not have known it was just a thief, but if it happened during the day, he was guilty of a crime, on the assumption that in daylight the thief posed no threat to the homeowner's life and could be stopped and made to pay restitution. ‡† tn: The words "a thief" have been added for clarification. S. R. Driver (Exodus, 224) thinks that these lines are out of order, since some of them deal with killing the thief and then others with the thief making restitution, but rearranging the clauses is not a necessary way to bring clarity to the paragraph. The idea here would be that any thief caught alive would pay restitution. ‡†† tn: The construction uses a Niphal infinitive absolute and a Niphal imperfect: if it should indeed be found. Gesenius says that in such conditional clauses the infinitive absolute has less emphasis, but instead emphasizes the condition on which some consequence depends (see GKC 342-43 §113. o). ‡† tn: Heb "in his hand." ‡† sn: He must pay back one for what he took, and then one for the penalty - his loss as he was inflicting a loss on someone else. ‡†† tn: The verb בָּעַר

6" If a fire breaks out and spreads‡‡† to thorn bushes, ‡‡‡ so that stacked grain or standing grain or the whole field is consumed, the one who started‡† the fire must surely make restitution.

7" If a man gives his neighbor money or articles‡† for safekeeping, ‡† and it is stolen from the man's house, if the thief is caught, ‡† he must repay double. 8 If the thief is not caught, ‡† then the owner of the house will be brought before the judges‡† to see‡† whether he has laid‡† his hand on his neighbor's goods. 9 In all cases of illegal possessions, ‡† whether for an ox, a donkey, a sheep, a garment, or any kind of lost item, about which someone says 'This belongs to me,‡† the matter of the two of them will come before the judges, ‡† and the one whom‡† the judges declare guilty‡† must repay double to his neighbor. 10 If a man gives his neighbor a donkey or an ox or a sheep or any beast to keep, and it dies or is hurt‡† or is carried away‡† without anyone seeing it, ‡† then there will be an oath to the LORD‡† between the two of them, that he has not laid his hand on his neighbor's goods, and its owner will accept this, and he will not have to pay. 12 But if it was stolen‡† from him, ‡† he will pay its owner. 13 If it is tn: The phrase "his livestock" is supplied from the next clause. ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "if a fire goes out and finds"; NLT "if a fire gets out of control." 18 sn: Thorn bushes were used for hedges between fields, but thorn bushes also burned easily, making the fire spread rapidly. 19 tn: This is a Hiphil participle of the verb "to burn, kindle" used substantivally. This is the one who caused the fire, whether by accident or not. 20 tn: The word usually means "vessels" but can have the sense of household goods and articles. It could be anything from jewels and ornaments to weapons or pottery. 21 tn: Heb "to keep." Here "safekeeping," that is, to keep something secure on behalf of a third party, is intended. 22 tn: Heb "found." 23 tn: Heb "found." 24 tn: Here again the word used is "the gods," meaning the judges who made the assessments and decisions. In addition to other works, see J. R. Vannoy, "The Use of the Word ha'elohim in Exodus 21:6 and 22:7,8," The Law and the Prophets, 225-41. 25 tn: The phrase "to see" has been supplied. 26 tn: The line says "if he has not stretched out his hand." This could be the oath formula, but the construction here would be unusual, or it could be taken as "whether" (see W. C. Kaiser, Jr., "Exodus," EBC 2:438). U. Cassuto (Exodus, 286) does not think the wording can possibly fit an oath; nevertheless, an oath would be involved before God (as he takes it instead of "judges") - if the man swore, his word would be accepted, but if he would not swear, he would be guilty. 27 tn: Heb "concerning every kind [thing] of trespass." 28 tn: The text simply has "this is it" ( הוּא הוּא 29 tn: Again, or "God." 30 tn: This kind of clause Gesenius calls an independent relative clause - it does not depend on a governing substantive but itself expresses a substantive idea (GKC 445-46 §138. e). 31 tn: The verb means "to be guilty" in Qal; in Hiphil it would have a declarative sense, because a causative sense would not possibly fit. 32 tn: The form is a Niphal participle from the verb "to break" - "is broken," which means harmed, maimed, or hurt in any way. 33 tn: This verb is frequently used with the meaning "to take captive." The idea here then is that raiders or robbers have carried off the animal. 34 tn: Heb "there is no one seeing." 35 torn in pieces, then he will bring it for evidence, † and he will not have to pay for what was torn.

14 " If a man borrows an animal†† from his neighbor, and it is hurt or dies when its owner was not with it, the man who borrowed it‡ will surely pay. 15 If its owner was with it, he will not have to pay; if it was hired, what was paid for the hire covers it. ††

Moral and Ceremonial Laws ††

18 " You must not allow a sorceress to live. §†

19 " Whoever has sexual relations§†† with a beast must surely be put to death.

20 " Whoever sacrifices to a god other than the LORD§† alone must be utterly destroyed. §††

tn: The construct relationship יהנה שבעת

36 tn: Both with this verb "stolen" and in the next clauses with "torn in pieces," the text uses the infinitive absolute construction with less than normal emphasis; as Gesenius says, in conditional clauses, an infinitive absolute stresses the importance of the condition on which some consequence depends (GKC 342-43 §113. o).

† sn: The point is that the man should have taken better care of the animal. †† tn: The word נד

‡ tn: Heb "if a man asks [an animal] from his neighbor" (see also Exod 12:36). The ruling here implies an animal is borrowed, and if harm comes to it when the owner is not with it, the borrower is liable. The word "animal" is supplied in the translation for clarity. †† tn: Heb "he"; the referent (the man who borrowed the animal) has been specified in the translation for clarity. ‡‡ tn: Literally "it came with/for its hire," this expression implies that the owner who hired it out and was present was prepared to take the risk, so there would be no compensation.

‡‡† sn: The second half of the chapter records various laws of purity and justice. Any of them could be treated in an expository way, but in the present array they offer a survey of God's righteous standards: Maintain the sanctity of marriage (16-17); maintain the purity of religious institutions (18-20), maintain the rights of human beings (21-28), maintain the rights of Yahweh (29-31). ‡‡† tn: This is the word בתולה

§ tn: Or "pledged" for marriage.

§† tn: The verb נהר

§†† sn: There still were many who wished to follow pagan beliefs and consort with the dead (see Deut 18:10-11). The sorceress was someone who dealt with drugs or herbs for occult purposes. §† tn: Heb "lies with." §†† tn: Heb "not to Yahweh." §† tn: The verb נהר

22 " You must not afflict§§† any widow or orphan. 23 If you afflict them§§† in any way §§§ and they cry to me, I will surely hear<sup>18</sup> their cry, 24 and my anger will burn and I will kill you with the sword, and your wives will be widows and your children will be fatherless. 19

tn: Or "oppress." §§† tn: Or "alien," both here and in 23:9. This individual is a resident foreigner; he lives in the land but, aside from provisions such as this, might easily be without legal rights. §§† tn: The verb "afflict" is a Piel imperfect from נהר

§§§ tn: The accusative here is the masculine singular pronoun, which leads S. R. Driver to conclude that this line is out of place, even though the masculine singular can be used in places like this ( Exodus, 232). U. Cassuto says its use is to refer to certain classes ( Exodus, 292). 18 tn: Here again and with "cry" the infinitive absolute functions with a diminished emphasis (GKC 342-43 §113. o). 19 tn: Here is the normal use of the infinitive absolute with the imperfect tense to emphasize the verb: "I will surely hear," implying, "I will surely respond." 20 sn: The punishment will follow the form of talionic justice, an eye for an eye, in which the punishment matches the crime. God will use invading armies ("sword" is a metonymy of adjunct here) to destroy them, making their wives widows and their children orphans. 21 tn: "any of" has been supplied. 22 sn: The moneylender will be demanding and exacting. In Ps 109:11 and 2 Kgs 4:1 the word is rendered as "extortioner." 23 tn: Heb "set." 24 sn: In ancient times money was lent primarily for poverty and not for commercial ventures (H. Gamoran, "The Biblical Law against Loans on Interest," JNES 30 [1971]: 127-34). The lending to the poor was essentially a charity, and so not to be an opportunity to make money from another person's misfortune. The word נהר sons.<sup>30</sup> You must also do this for your oxen and for your sheep; seven days they may remain with their mothers, but give them to me on the eighth day.

25 tn: The construction again uses the infinitive absolute with the verb in the conditional clause to stress the condition. 26 tn: The clause uses the preposition, the infinitive construct, and the noun that is the subjective genitive – "at the going in of the sun." 27 tn: Heb "his skin." 28 tn: Literally the text reads, "In what can he lie down?" The cloak would be used for a covering at night to use when sleeping. The garment, then, was the property that could not be taken and not given back – it was the last possession. The modern idiom of "the shirt off his back" gets at the point being made here. 29 tn: Heb "and it will be." 30 tn: The two verbs in this verse are synonyms: קלל

31 tn: The word אלהים

† tn: The expressions are unusual. U. Cassuto renders them: "from the fullness of your harvest and from the outflow of your presses" (Exodus, 294). He adds the Hittite parallel material to show that the people were to bring the offerings on time and not let them overlap, because the firstfruits had to be eaten first by the priest. †† sn: The use of this word here has to do with the laws of the sanctuary and not some advanced view of holiness. The ritual holiness at the sanctuary would prohibit eating anything torn to pieces. ‡ tn: Or "by wild animals." ‡† sn: People who claim to worship and serve the righteous judge of the universe must preserve equity and justice in their dealings with others. These verses teach that God's people must be honest witnesses (1-3); God's people must be righteous even with enemies (4-5); and God's people must be fair in dispensing justice (6-9). ‡‡ tn: Heb "take up, lift, carry" ( נָשָׂא )

Sabbaths and Feasts <sup>25</sup>

<sup>10</sup> "For six years<sup>26</sup> you are to sow your land and gather in its produce. <sup>11</sup> But in the seventh year<sup>27</sup> you must let it lie fallow and leave it alone so that the poor of your people may eat, and what they leave any animal in the field<sup>28</sup> may eat; you must do likewise with your vineyard and your olive grove. <sup>12</sup> For six days you are to do your work, but on the seventh day you must cease, in order that your ox and your donkey may rest and that your female servant's son and any hired help<sup>29</sup> may refresh themselves. <sup>30</sup>

<sup>19</sup> tn: Or "stay away from," or "have nothing to do with." <sup>20</sup> tn: Heb "a false matter," this expression in this context would have to be a case in law that was false or that could only be won by falsehood. <sup>21</sup> tn: The two clauses probably should be related: the getting involved in the false charge could lead to the death of an innocent person (so, e.g., Naboth in 1 Kgs 21:10-13). <sup>22</sup> sn: God will not declare right the one who is in the wrong. Society should also be consistent, but it cannot see the intents and motives, as God can. <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb "blinds the open-eyed." <sup>24</sup> tn: The verb means "to crush." S. R. Driver notes that in this context this would probably mean with an unfair judgment in the courts (Exodus, 239). <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb "soul, life" – "you know what it feels like." <sup>26</sup> sn: This section concerns religious duties of the people of God as they worship by giving thanks to God for their blessings. The principles here are: God requires his people to allow the poor to share in their bounty (10-11); God requires his people to provide times of rest and refreshment for those who labor for them (12); God requires allegiance to himself (13); God requires his people to come before him in gratitude and share their bounty (14-17); God requires that his people safeguard proper worship forms (18-19). <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb "and six years"; this is an adverbial accusative telling how long they can work their land. The following references to years and days in vv. 10-12 function similarly. <sup>28</sup> tn: Heb "and the seventh year"; an adverbial accusative with a disjunctive vav ( 29 ו tn: Heb "living thing/creature/beast of the field." A general term for animals, usually wild animals, including predators (cf. v. 29; Gen 2:19-20; Lev 26:22; Deut 7:22; 1 Sam 17:46; Job 5:22-23; Ezek 29:5; 34:5). <sup>30</sup> tn: Heb "alien," or "resident foreigner." Such an individual would have traveled out of need and depended on the goodwill of the people around him. The rendering "hired help" assumes that the foreigner is mentioned in this context because he is working for an Israelite and will benefit from the Sabbath rest, along with his employer.

13 " Pay attention to do† everything I have told you, and do not even mention†† the names of other gods – and do not let them be heard on your lips. ‡

14 " Three times‡† in the year you must make a pilgrim feast ‡† to me. 15 You are to observe the Feast of Unleavened Bread; seven days‡‡† you must eat bread made without yeast, as I commanded you, at the appointed time of the month of Abib, for at that time‡‡† you came out of Egypt. No one may appear before§ me empty-handed.

16 " You are also to observe§† the Feast of Harvest, the firstfruits of your labors that you have sown in the field, and the Feast of Ingathering at the end of the year§†† when you have gathered in§† your harvest §†† out of the field. 17 At§† three times in the year all your males will appear before the Lord God. §†

18 " You must not offer§§† the blood of my sacrifice with bread containing yeast; the fat of my festal sacrifice must not remain until morning. §§†19 The first of the firstfruits of your soil you must bring to the house of the LORD your God.

" You must not cook a young goat in its mother's milk. §§§

† tn: The verb is שׁוּמְרִים

†† tn: The phrase "to do" is added; in Hebrew word order the line says, "In all that I have said to you you will watch yourselves." The verb for paying attention is a Niphal imperfect with an imperatival force. ‡ tn: Or "honor," Hiphil of נָחַד

‡† tn: Heb "mouth." sn: See also Ps 16:4, where David affirms his loyalty to God with this expression. ‡‡ tn: The expression rendered "three times" is really "three feet," or "three foot-beats." The expression occurs only a few times in the Law. The expressing is an adverbial accusative. ‡‡† tn: This is the word נָחַד אֶת

§ tn: Heb "in it." §† tn: The verb is a Niphal imperfect; the nuance of permission works well here – no one is permitted to appear before God empty ( Heb "and they will not appear before me empty"). §†† tn: The words "you are also to observe" are not in the Hebrew text, but are supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. §‡ tn: An infinitive construct with a preposition and a pronominal suffix is used to make a temporal clause: "in the going in of the year." The word "year" is the subjective genitive, the subject of the clause. §‡† tn: An infinitive construct with a preposition and a pronominal suffix is used to make a temporal clause: "in the ingathering of you." §† tn: Heb "gathered in your labors." This is a metonymy of cause put for the effect. "Labors" are not gathered in, but what the labors produced – the harvest.

Here and at 34:26, where this command is repeated, it ends a series of instructions about procedures for worship. 19 sn: This passage has some of the most interesting and perplexing expressions and constructions in the book. It is largely promise, but it is part of the Law and so demands compliance by faith. Its points are: God promises to send his angel to prepare the way before his obedient servants (20-23); God promises blessing for his loyal servants (24-33). So in the section one learns that God promises his protection (victory) and blessing (through his angel) for his obedient and loyal worshipers. 20 tn: The particle הַ

Driver quotes McNeile as saying, "The 'angel' is Jehovah Himself in a temporary descent to visibility for a special purpose." Others take the "name" to represent Yahweh's "power" (NCV) or "authority" (NAB, CEV).

25 tn: The infinitive absolute here does not add as great an emphasis as normal, but emphasizes the condition that is being set forth (see GKC 342-43 §113. o). 26 tn: Heb "will cut them off" (so KJV, ASV). 27 tn: The Hebrew is מַצְבֵּי־אֲבָדָן

to come up to the LORD

§§§ sn: These seventy-four people were to go up the mountain to a certain point. Then they were to prostrate themselves and worship Yahweh as Moses went further up into the presence of Yahweh. Moses occupies the lofty position of mediator (as Christ in the NT), for he alone ascends “to Yahweh” while everyone waits for his return. The emphasis of “bowing down” and that from “far off” stresses again the ominous presence that was on the mountain. This was the holy God – only the designated mediator could draw near to him. 18 tn: The verb is a perfect tense with a vav ( ו )

19 tn: Heb “they.” <sup>20</sup> tn: Now the imperfect tense negated is used; here the prohibition would fit (“they will not come near”), or the obligatory (“they must not”) in which the subjects are obliged to act – or not act in this case. <sup>21</sup> sn: The general consensus among commentators is that this refers to Moses’ coming from the mountain after he made the ascent in 20:21. Here he came and told them the laws (written in 20:22-23:33), and of the call to come up to Yahweh. <sup>22</sup> sn: The Decalogue may not be included here because the people had heard those commands themselves earlier. <sup>23</sup> tn: The text simply has “one voice” ( אֶחָד וְאֶחָד )

24 tn: The verb is the imperfect tense ( וַיִּשְׁמַע )

<sup>25</sup> tn: The two preterites quite likely form a verbal hendiadys (the verb “to get up early” is frequently in such constructions). Literally it says, “and he got up early [in the morning] and he built”; this means “early [in the morning] he built.” The first verb becomes the adverb. <sup>26</sup> tn: “under.” <sup>27</sup> tn: The verb “arranged” is not in the Hebrew text but has been supplied to clarify exactly what Moses did with the twelve stones. <sup>28</sup> tn: The thing numbered is found in the singular when the number is plural – “twelve standing-stone.” See GKC 433 §134. f. The “standing-stone” could be a small piece about a foot high, or a huge column higher than men. They served to commemorate treaties ( Gen 32), or visions ( Gen 28) or boundaries, or graves. Here it will function with the altar as a place of worship. <sup>29</sup> tn: The construct has “young men of the Israelites,” and so “Israelite” is a genitive that describes them. 30

Covenant† and read it aloud†† to the people, and they said, "We are willing to do and obey‡ all that the LORD has spoken." 8 So Moses took the blood and splashed it on‡† the people and said, "This is the blood of the covenant‡‡ that the LORD has made with you in accordance with all these words."

9 Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and the seventy elders of Israel went up, ‡‡†10 and they saw‡‡‡ the God of Israel. Under his feet§ there was something like a pavement§† made of sapphire, clear like the sky itself. §††11 But he did not lay a hand§‡ on the leaders of the Israelites, so they saw God, §‡† and they ate and they drank. §†12 §‡

The LORD said to Moses, "Come up to me to the mountain and remain there, and I will give you the stone tablets§‡† with§‡‡ the law and the commandments that I have written, so that you may teach them." §‡‡§13 So Moses set out18 with 19 Joshua his attendant, and Moses went up the mountain of God. 14 He told the elders, "Wait for us in this place until we return to you. Here are20 Aaron and Hur with you. Whoever has any matters of dispute21 can approach22 them."

15 Moses went up the mountain, and the cloud covered the mountain. 16 The glory of the LORD resided23 on Mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it for six days.24 tn: The verbs and their respective accusatives are cognates. First, they offered up burnt offerings (see Lev 1), which is עָלוּ עֹלֹת

עָלוּ עֹלֹת וְזָבְחוּ זָבָחִים

§‡† tn: Heb "he did not stretch out his hand," i.e., to destroy them. §† tn: The verb is הָיָה

† sn: The people and Yahweh through this will be united by blood, for half was spattered on the altar and the other half spattered on/toward the people (v. 8). †† tn: The noun "book" would be the scroll just written containing the laws of chaps. 20-23. On the basis of this scroll the covenant would be concluded here. The reading of this book would assure the people that it was the same that they had agreed to earlier. But now their statement of willingness to obey would be more binding, because their promise would be confirmed by a covenant of blood. ‡ tn: Heb "read it in the ears of." ‡† tn: A second verb is now added to the people's response, and it is clearly an imperfect and not a cohortative, lending support for the choice of desiderative imperfect in these commitments - "we want to obey." This was their compliance with the covenant. ‡‡ tn: Given the size of the congregation, the preposition might be rendered here "toward the people" rather than on them (all). ‡‡† sn: The construct relationship "the blood of the covenant" means "the blood by which the covenant is ratified" (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 254). The parallel with the inauguration of the new covenant in the blood of Christ is striking (see, e.g., Matt 26:28, 1 Cor 11:25). When Jesus was inaugurating the new covenant, he was bringing to an end the old. ‡‡‡ tn: The verse begins with "and Moses went up, and Aaron...." This verse may supply the sequel to vv. 1-2. At any rate, God was now accepting them into his presence. sn: This next section is extremely interesting, but difficult to interpret. For some of the literature, see: E. W. Nicholson, "The Interpretation of Exodus 24:9-11," VT 24 (1974): 77-97; "The Antiquity of the Tradition in Exodus 24:9-11," VT 26 (1976): 148-60; and T. C. Vriezen, "The Exegesis of Exodus 24:9-11," OTS 17 (1967): 24-53. § sn: S. R. Driver (Exodus, 254) wishes to safeguard the traditional idea that God could not be seen by reading "they saw the place where the God of Israel stood" so as not to say they saw God. But according to U. Cassuto there is not a great deal of difference between "and they saw the God" and "the LORD

§‡ sn: This is the covenant meal, the peace offering, that they are eating there on the mountain. To eat from the sacrifice meant that they were at peace with God, in covenant with him. Likewise, in the new covenant believers draw near to God on the basis of sacrifice, and eat of the sacrifice because they are at peace with him, and in Christ they see the Godhead revealed. §‡† sn: Now the last part is recorded in which Moses ascends to Yahweh to receive the tablets of stone. As Moses disappears into the clouds, the people are given a vision of the glory of Yahweh. §‡‡ sn: These are the stone tablets on which the Ten Commandments would be written. This is the first time they are mentioned. The commandments were apparently proclaimed by God first and then proclaimed to the people by Moses. Now that they have been formally agreed on and ratified, they will be written by God on stone for a perpetual covenant. §‡‡‡ tn: Or "namely"; or "that is to say." The vav ( ו )

The term is simply דְּבָרִים tn: The imperfect tense here has the nuance of potential imperfect. In the absence of Moses and Joshua, Aaron and Hur will be available. sn: Attention to the preparation for Moses' departure contributes to the weight of the guilt of the faithless Israelites (chap. 32) and of Aaron, to whom Moses had delegated an important duty.

24 sn: The verb is וַיִּשְׁכַּן

§† sn: S. R. Driver suggests that they saw the divine Glory, not directly, but as they looked up from below, through what appeared to be a transparent blue sapphire pavement (Exodus, 254). §†† tn: Or "tiles." §‡ tn: Heb "and like the body of heaven for clearness." The Hebrew term שָׁפָר

‡† sn: B. Jacob ( Exodus, 750) offers this description of some of the mystery involved in Moses' ascending into the cloud: Moses ascended into the presence of God, but remained on earth. He did not rise to heaven – the ground remained firmly under his feet. But he clearly was brought into God's presence; he was like a heavenly servant before God's throne, like the angels, and he consumed neither bread nor water. The purpose of his being there was to become familiar with all God's demands and purposes. He would receive the tablets of stone and all the instructions for the tabernacle that was to be built (beginning in chap. 25). He would not descend until the sin of the golden calf. ‡‡ sn: Now begin the detailed instructions for constructing the tabernacle of Yahweh, with all its furnishings. The first paragraph introduces the issue of the heavenly pattern for the construction, calls for the people to make willing offerings (vv. 2-7), and explains the purpose for these offerings (vv. 8-9). The message here is that God calls his people to offer of their substance willingly so that his sanctuary may be made. ‡‡† tn: The verb is ויקחו

No significance for the color is attached. §‡† sn: Likewise this color dye was imported from Phoenicia, where it was harvested from the shellfish or snail. It is a deep purple-red color. §† sn: This color is made from the eggs and bodies of the worm coccus ilicus, which is found with the holly plant – so Heb "worm of brilliance." The powder made from the dried maggots produces a bright red-yellow color (W. C. Kaiser, Jr., "Exodus," EBC 2:452). B. Jacob takes the view that these are not simply colors that are being introduced here, but fabrics dyed with these colors ( Exodus, 765). At any rate, the sequence would then be metals, fabrics, and leathers (v. 5). §‡ sn: This is generally viewed as a fine Egyptian linen that had many more delicate strands than ordinary linen. §§† sn: Goat's hair was spun into yarn ( 35:26) and used to make the material for the first tent over the dwelling. It is ideal for tenting, since it is loosely woven and allows breezes to pass through, but with rain the fibers expand and prevent water from seeping through. §§‡ sn: W. C. Kaiser compares this to morocco leather ("Exodus," EBC 2:453); it was skin that had all the wool removed and then was prepared as leather and dyed red. N. M. Sarna, on the other hand, comments, "The technique of leather production is never described [in ancient Hebrew texts]. Hence, it is unclear whether Hebrew me'oddamim ( מַעֲוָדָמִים )

It expressed God’s will and man’s duty. In other cultures important documents were put at the feet of the gods in the temples. §†† tn: The noun is תְּפִלָּה

Ben-Uri, “The Mosaic Building Code,” Creation Research Society Quarterly 19 (1982): 36-39. †† sn: This section begins with the ark, the most sacred and important object of Israel’s worship. Verses 10-15 provide the instructions for it, v. 16 has the placement of the Law in it, vv. 17-21 cover the mercy lid, and v. 22 the meeting above it. The point of this item in the tabernacle is to underscore the focus: the covenant people must always have God’s holy standard before them as they draw near to worship. A study of this would focus on God’s nature (he is a God of order, precision, and perfection), on the usefulness of this item for worship, and on the typology intended. ††† tn: The word “ark” has long been used by English translations to render אָרוֹן

††† tn: The size is two and a half cubits long, a cubit and a half wide, and a cubit and a half high. The size in feet and inches is estimated on the assumption that the cubit is 18 inches (see S. R. Driver, Exodus, 267). § tn: The verbs throughout here are perfect tenses with the vav ( ו )

§† tn: Here the verb is an imperfect tense; for the perfect sequence to work the verb would have to be at the front of the clause.

§† tn: After verbs of making or producing, the accusative (like “gold” here) may be used to express the material from which something is made (see GKC 371 §117. hh). §† tn: The evidence suggests that the cherubim were composite angelic creatures that always indicated the nearness of God. So here images of them were to be crafted and put on each end of the ark of the covenant to signify that they were there. Ezekiel 1 describes four cherubim as each having human faces, four wings, and parts of different animals for their bodies. Traditions of them appear in the other cultures as well. They serve to guard the holy places and to bear the throne of God. Here they were to be beaten out as part of the lid. §§† tn: The text now shifts to use an imperative with the vav ( ו ) §§† tn: The use of הָ

§§§ sn: The angels were to form one piece with the lid and not be separated. This could be translated “of one piece with” the lid, but it is likely the angels were simply fastened to it permanently. <sup>18</sup> tn: The verb means “overshadowing, screening” in the sense of guarding (see 1 Kgs 8:7; 1 Chr 28:18; see also the account in Gen 3:24). The cherubim then signify two things here: by their outstretched wings they form the throne of God who sits above the ark (with the Law under his feet), and by their overshadowing and guarding they signify this as the place of atonement where people must find propitiation to commune with God. Until toward the atonement lid.<sup>21</sup> You are to put the atonement lid on top of the ark, and in the ark you are to put the testimony I am giving you.<sup>22</sup> I will meet with you there,† and†† from above the atonement lid, from between the two cherubim that are over the ark of the testimony, I will speak with you about all that I will command you for the Israelites.

The Table for the Bread of the Presence ‡

<sup>23</sup> “You are to make a table of acacia wood; its length is to be three feet, its width one foot six inches, and its height two feet three inches.<sup>24</sup> You are to overlay it with‡† pure gold, and you are to make a surrounding border of gold for it.<sup>25</sup> You are to make a surrounding frame‡† for it about three inches broad, and you are to make a surrounding border of gold for its frame.<sup>26</sup> You are to make four rings of gold for it and attach‡†† the rings at the four corners where its four legs are.<sup>‡††27</sup> The rings are to be close to the frame to provide places§ for the poles to carry the table.<sup>28</sup> You are to make the poles of acacia wood and overlay them with gold, so that the table may be carried with them.<sup>§129</sup> You are to make its plates,§†† its ladles,§† its pitchers, and its bowls, to be used in pouring out offerings,§††

then they are barred from his presence. See U. Cassuto, Exodus, 330-35. 19 tn: Heb “their faces a man to his brother.” † tn: Heb “the faces of the cherubim will be” (“the cherubim” was moved to the preceding clause for smoother English). †† sn: Here then is the main point of the ark of the covenant, and the main point of all worship – meeting with God through atonement. The text makes it clear that here God would meet with Moses (“you” is singular) and then he would speak to the people – he is the mediator of the covenant. S. R. Driver (Exodus, 272) makes the point that the verb here is not the word that means “to meet by chance” (as in Exod 3:18), but “to meet” by appointment for a purpose ( וְנִפְגַּעְתָּ )

‡ tn: The verb is placed here in the text: “and I will speak”; it has been moved in this translation to be closer to the direct object clause. †† sn: The Table of the Bread of the Presence (Tyndale’s translation, “Shewbread,” was used in KJV and influenced ASV, NAB) was to be a standing acknowledgment that Yahweh was the giver of daily bread. It was called the “presence-bread” because it was set out in his presence. The theology of this is that God provides, and the practice of this is that the people must provide for constant thanks. So if the ark speaks of communion through atonement, the table speaks of dedicatory gratitude. ‡† tn: “Gold” is an adverbial accusative of material. ‡†† sn: There is some debate as to the meaning of מִנְחָה

‡†† tn: Heb “give.” § tn: Heb “which [are] to four of its feet.” §† tn: Heb “houses”; NAB, NASB “holders.” §†† tn: The verb is a Niphal perfect with vav consecutive, showing here the intended result: “so that [the table] might be lifted up [by them].” The noun “the table” is introduced by what looks like you are to make them of pure gold.<sup>30</sup> You are to set the Bread of the Presence§† on the table before me continually.

The Lampstand §†

<sup>31</sup> “You are to make a lampstand§§† of pure gold. The lampstand is to be made of hammered metal; its base and its shaft, its cups,§§† its buds, and its blossoms are to be from the same piece.<sup>§§§32</sup> Six branches are to extend from the sides of the lampstand,<sup>18</sup> three branches of the lampstand from one side of it and three branches of the lampstand from the other side of it.<sup>1933</sup> Three cups shaped like almond flowers with buds and blossoms are to be on one branch, and three cups shaped like almond flowers with buds and blossoms are to be on the next<sup>20</sup> branch, and the same<sup>21</sup> for the six branches extending from the lampstand.<sup>34</sup> On the lampstand there are to be four cups shaped like almond flowers with buds and blossoms,<sup>35</sup> with a bud under the first<sup>22</sup> two branches from it, and a bud under the next<sup>23</sup> two branches from it, and a bud under the third<sup>24</sup> two branches from it, according to the six branches that extend from the lampstand.<sup>36</sup> Their buds and their branches will be one piece,<sup>25</sup> all of it one hammered piece of pure gold.

the sign of the accusative, but here it serves to introduce or emphasize the nominative (see GKC 365 §117. i). §† tn: Or “a deep gold dish.” The four nouns in this list are items associated with the table and its use. §†† tn: Or “cups” (NAB, TEV). §† tn: The expression “for pouring out offerings” represents Hebrew מִנְחָה יִשְׂרָאֵל

sn: The name basically means that the bread is to be set out in the presence of Yahweh. The custom of presenting bread on a table as a thank offering is common in other cultures as well. The bread here would be placed on the table as a symbol of the divine provision for the twelve tribes – continually, because they were to express their thanksgiving continually. Priests could eat the bread after certain times. Fresh bread would be put there regularly. §§† sn: Clearly the point here is to provide light in the tent for access to God. He provided for his worshipers a light for the way to God, but he also wanted them to provide oil for the lamp to ensure that the light would not go out. Verses 31-36 describe the piece. It was essentially one central shaft, with three branches on either side turned out and upward. The stem and the branches were ornamented every so often with gold that was formed into the shape of the calyx and corolla of the almond flower. On top of the central shaft and the six branches were the lamps. §§† tn: The word is מִנְחָה

§§§ sn: U. Cassuto (Exodus, 342-44) says that the description “the cups, knobs and flowers” is explained in vv. 32-36 as three decorations in the form of a cup, shaped like an almond blossom, to be made on one branch. Every cup will have two parts, (a) a knob, that is, the receptacle at the base of the blossom, and (b) a flower, which is called the corolla, so that each lamp rests on top of a flower. 18 tn: Heb “will be from/of it”; the referent (“the same piece” of wrought metal) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 19 tn: Heb “from the sides of it.” 20 tn: Heb “from the second side.” 21 tn: The text uses “one” again; “the one...the one” means “the one...and the next” in the distributive sense. 22 tn: Heb “thus.” 23 tn: For clarity the phrase “the first” has been supplied. 24 tn: For clarity the

‡ tn: The translation "set up on" is from the Hebrew verb "bring up." The construction is impersonal, "and he will bring up," meaning "one will bring up." It may mean that people were to fix the lamps on to the shaft and the branches, rather than cause the light to go up (see S. R. Driver, Exodus, 277). †† tn: This is a Hiphil perfect with vav consecutive, from אָרַח

‡† sn: The first word refers to something like small tongs or tweezers to pull up and trim the wicks; the second word refers to fire-pans or censers. ‡†† tn: "are to be" has been supplied. ‡†† tn: Heb "a talent." § tn: The text has "he will make it" or "one will make it." With no expressed subject it is given a passive translation. §† tn: The text uses two imperatives: "see and make." This can be interpreted as a verbal hendiadys, calling for Moses and Israel to see to it that they make these things correctly. §†† tn: The participle is passive, "caused to see," or, "shown." §† sn: The message of this section surely concerns access to God. To expound this correctly, though, since it is an instruction section for building the lampstand, the message would be: God requires that his people ensure that light will guide the way of access to God. The breakdown for exposition could be the instructions for preparation for light (one lamp, several branches), then instructions for the purpose and maintenance of the lamps, and then the last verse telling the divine source for the instructions. Naturally, the metaphorical value of light will come up in the study, especially from the NT. So in the NT there is the warning that if churches are unfaithful God will remove their lampstand, their ministry (Rev 2-3). §†† sn: This chapter is given over to the details of the structure itself, the curtains, coverings, boards and walls and veil. The passage can be studied on one level for its function both practically and symbolically for Israel's worship. On another level it can be studied for its typology, for the tabernacle and many of its parts speak of Christ. For this one should see the commentaries. §† tn: The word order in Hebrew thrusts the direct object to the front for particular emphasis. After the first couple of pieces of furniture are treated (chap. 25), attention turns to the tabernacle itself. §† tn: This is for the adverbial accusative explaining how the dwelling place is to be made. §§† sn: S. R. Driver suggests that the curtains were made with threads dyed with these colors (Exodus, 280). Perhaps the colored threads were used for embroidering the cherubim in the curtains. §§† tn: The construction is difficult in this line because of the word order. "Cherubim" is an adverbial accusative explaining how they were to make the curtains. וְעָשָׂה חֹשֶׁב וְעָשָׂה חֹשֶׁב

<sup>18</sup> tn: Heb "twenty-eight cubits" long and "four cubits" wide. <sup>19</sup> tn: This is the active participle, not the passive. It would normally be rendered "joining together." The Bible uses the active because it has the result of the sewing in mind, namely, that every curtain accompanies another (U. Cassuto, Exodus, 348). <sup>20</sup> tn: Heb "a woman to her sister," this form of using nouns to express "one to another" is selected because "curtains" is a feminine noun (see GKC 448 §139. e). <sup>21</sup> tn: The phrase "the other" has been supplied. <sup>22</sup> tn: Here "loops" has been supplied. <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb "a woman to her sister." <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "one"; KJV "it shall be one tabernacle"; NRSV "that the tabernacle may be one whole"; NLT "a single unit." <sup>25</sup> sn: This chapter will show that there were two sets of curtains and two sets of coverings that went over the wood building to make the tabernacle or dwelling place. The curtains of fine linen described above could be seen only by the priests from inside. Above that was the curtain of goats' hair. Then over that were the coverings, an inner covering of rams' skins dyed red and an outer covering of hides of fine leather. The movement is from the inside to the outside because it is God's dwelling place; the approach of the worshiper would be the opposite. The pure linen represented the righteousness of God, guarded by the embroidered cherubim; the curtain of goats' hair was a reminder of sin through the daily sin offering of a goat; the covering of rams' skins dyed red was a reminder of the sacrifice and the priestly ministry set apart by blood, and the outer covering marked the separation between God and the world. These are the interpretations set forth by Kaiser; others vary, but not greatly (see W. C. Kaiser, Jr., "Exodus," EBC 2:459). <sup>26</sup> sn: This curtain will serve "for a tent over the tabernacle," as a dwelling place. <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb "you will make them" <sup>28</sup> tn: Heb "one" <sup>29</sup> sn: The text seems to describe this part as being in front of the tabernacle, hanging down to form a valence at the entrance (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 284). <sup>30</sup> tn: Heb "one" <sup>31</sup> sn: U. Cassuto (Exodus, 353) cites b. Shabbat 98b which says, "What did the tabernacle resemble? A woman walking on the street with her train trailing behind her." In the expression "the half of the curtain that remains," the verb agrees in gender with the genitive near it.

<sup>19</sup> tn: The verb is the third masculine singular form, but no subject is expressed. It could be translated "one will make" or as a passive. The verb means "to make," but probably has the sense of embroidering both here and in v. 1. <sup>20</sup> tn: Heb "put it." <sup>21</sup> tn: This clause simply says "and their hooks gold," but is taken as a circumstantial clause telling how the veil will be hung. <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb "on four silver bases." <sup>23</sup> tn: The traditional expression is "within the veil," literally "into the house (or area) of the (special) curtain." <sup>24</sup> tn: Or "the Holy of Holies." <sup>25</sup> sn: This was another curtain, serving as a screen in the entrance way. Since it was far away from the special curtain screening the Most Holy Place, it was less elaborate. It was not the work of the master designer, but of the "embroiderer," and it did not have the cherubim on it. <sup>26</sup> tn: The word <sup>זָהָב</sup>

point could be said this way: The dwelling place of Yahweh must be prepared in accordance with, and by the power of, his divine word. If God was to fellowship with his people, then the center of worship had to be made to his specifications, which were in harmony with his nature. Everything was functional for the approach to God through the ritual by divine provisions. But everything also reflected the nature of God, the symmetry, the order, the pure wood, the gold overlay, or (closer to God) the solid gold. And the symbolism of the light, the table, the veil, the cherubim – all of it was revelatory. All of it reflected the reality in heaven. Churches today do not retain the pattern and furnishings of the old tabernacle. However, they would do well to learn what God was requiring of Israel, so that their structures are planned in accordance with the theology of worship and the theology of access to God. Function is a big part, but symbolism and revelation instruct the planning of everything to be used. Christians live in the light of the fulfillment of Christ, and so they know the realities that the old foreshadowed. While a building is not necessary for worship (just as Israel worshiped in places other than the sanctuary), it is practical, and if there is going to be one, then the most should be made of it in the teaching and worshiping of the assembly. This chapter, then, provides an inspiration for believers on preparing a functional, symbolical, ordered place of worship that is in harmony with the word of God. And there is much to be said for making it as beautiful and uplifting as is possible – as a gift of freewill offering to God. Of course, the most important part of preparing a place of worship is the preparing of the heart. Worship, to be acceptable to God, must be in Christ. He said that when the temple was destroyed he would raise it up in three days. While he referred to his own body, he also alluded to the temple by the figure. When they put Jesus to death, they were destroying the temple; at his resurrection he would indeed begin a new form of worship. He is the tent, the curtain, the atonement, that the sanctuary foreshadowed. And then, believers also (when they receive Christ) become the temple of the Lord. So the NT will take the imagery and teaching of this chapter in a number of useful ways that call for more study. This does not, however, involve allegorization of the individual tabernacle parts. † tn: The article on this word identifies this as the altar, meaning the main high altar on which the sacrifices would be made. †† tn: The dimensions are five cubits by five cubits by three cubits high. ‡ tn: Heb "four"; this refers to four sides. S. R. Driver says this is an archaism that means there were four equal sides (Exodus, 291). ‡† tn: Heb "and three cubits its height." ‡‡ sn: The horns of the altar were indispensable – they were the most sacred part. Blood was put on them; fugitives could cling to them, and the priests would grab the horns of the little altar when making intercessory prayer. They signified power, as horns on an animal did in the wild (and so the word was used for kings as well). The horns may also represent the sacrificial animals killed on the altar. ‡‡† sn: The text, as before, uses the prepositional phrase "from it" or "part of it" to say that the horns will be part of the altar – of the same piece as the altar. They were not to be made separately and then attached, but made at the end of the boards used to build the altar (U. Cassuto, Exodus, 363). ‡‡‡ sn: The word is literally "its fat," but sometimes it describes "fatty ashes" (TEV "the greasy ashes"). The fat would run down and mix with the ashes, and this had to be collected and removed. § sn: This was the larger bowl used in tossing the blood at the side of the altar. §† tn: The text has "to all its vessels." This is the lamed ( ʾ grating§†† for it, a network of bronze, and you are to make on the network four bronze rings on its four corners. <sup>5</sup> You are to put it under the ledge of the altar below, so that the network will come§† halfway up the altar. <sup>§††6</sup> You are to make poles for the altar, poles of acacia wood, and you are to overlay them with bronze. <sup>7</sup> The poles are to be put§† into the rings so that the poles will be on two sides of the altar when carrying it. <sup>§†8</sup> You are to make the altar hollow, out of boards. Just as it was shown you§§† on the mountain, so they must make it. §§†

The Courtyard

§†† tn: The noun מַקְבֵּר

§‡ tn: The verb is the verb "to be," here the perfect tense with vav ( ו )

§†† tn: Heb "to the half of the altar." §† tn: The verb is a Hophal perfect with vav consecutive: וְהוּבֵא

§‡ tn: The construction is the infinitive construct with bet ( ב )

§§† tn: The verb is used impersonally; it reads "just as he showed you." This form then can be made a passive in the translation. §§‡ tn: Heb "thus they will make." Here too it could be given a passive translation since the subject is not expressed. But "they" would normally refer to the people who will be making this and so can be retained in the translation. sn: Nothing is said about the top of the altar. Some commentators suggest, in view of the previous instruction for making an altar out of earth and stone, that when this one was to be used it would be filled up with dirt clods and the animal burnt on the top of that. If the animal was burnt inside it, the wood would quickly burn. A number of recent scholars think this was simply an imagined plan to make a portable altar after the pattern of Solomon's – but that is an unsatisfactory suggestion. This construction must simply represent a portable frame for the altar in the courtyard, an improvement over the field altar. The purpose and function of the altar are not in question. Here worshipers would make their sacrifices to God in order to find forgiveness and atonement, and in order to celebrate in worship with him. No one could worship God apart from this; no one could approach God apart from this. So too the truths that this altar communicated form the basis and center of all Christian worship. One could word an applicable lesson this way: Believers must ensure that the foundation and center of their worship is the altar, i.e., the sacrificial atonement. §§§ tn: Or "enclosure" (TEV). <sup>18</sup> tn: Heb "south side southward." <sup>19</sup> tn: Or "curtains." <sup>20</sup> sn: The entire courtyard of 150 feet by 75 feet was to be enclosed by a curtain wall held up with posts in bases. All these hangings were kept in place by a cord and tent pegs. <sup>21</sup> tn: Heb "and." <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb "and thus." <sup>23</sup> tn: Here the phrase "there will be" has been supplied. <sup>24</sup> sn: These bands have been thought by some to refer to connecting rods join-

The width of the court on the west side is to be seventy-five feet with hangings, with their ten posts and their ten bases.<sup>13</sup> The width of the court on the east side, toward the sunrise, is to be seventy-five feet.<sup>14</sup> The hangings on one side† of the gate are to be†† twenty-two and a half feet long, with their three posts and their three bases.<sup>15</sup> On the second side‡ there are to be‡‡ hangings twenty-two and a half feet long, with their three posts and their three bases.<sup>16</sup> For the gate of the courtyard there is to be a curtain of thirty feet, of blue, purple, and scarlet yarn and fine twined linen, the work of an embroiderer, with four posts and their four bases.<sup>17</sup> All the posts around the courtyard are to have silver bands; ‡‡ their hooks are to be‡‡‡ silver, and their bases bronze.<sup>18</sup> The length of the courtyard is to be one hundred fifty feet‡‡‡ and the width seventy-five feet,§ and the height of the fine twisted linen hangings§† is to be §†† seven and a half feet, with their bronze bases.<sup>19</sup> All§‡ the utensils of the tabernacle used§‡‡ in all its service, all its tent pegs, and all the tent pegs of the courtyard are to be made of bronze.§†

But it is more likely that they are bands or bind rings surrounding the posts at the base of the capitals (see 38:17). † tn: The word literally means “shoulder.” The next words, “of the gate,” have been supplied here and in v. 15. The east end would contain the courtyard’s entry with a wall of curtains on each side of the entry (see v. 16). †† tn: Here “will be” has been supplied. ‡ tn: Heb “shoulder.” ‡‡ tn: Here the phrase “there will be” has been supplied. ‡‡‡ tn: The text uses the passive participle here: they are to “be filleted with silver” or “bound round” with silver. ‡‡† tn: Here the phrase “are to be” has been supplied. ‡‡‡ tn: Heb “a hundred cubits.” § tn: Heb “fifty.” The text has “and the width fifty [cubits] with fifty.” This means that it is fifty cubits wide on the western end and fifty cubits wide on the eastern end. §† tn: Here “hangings” has been supplied. §†† tn: Here the phrase “is to be” has been supplied. §‡ tn: Heb “to all”; for use of the preposition lamed ( ל )

§‡† tn: Here “used” has been supplied. §† sn: The tabernacle is an important aspect of OT theology. The writer’s pattern so far has been: ark, table, lamp, and then their container (the tabernacle); then the altar and its container (the courtyard). The courtyard is the place of worship where the people could gather – they entered God’s courts. Though the courtyard may not seem of much interest to current readers, it did interest the Israelites. Here the sacrifices were made, the choirs sang, the believers offered their praises, they had their sins forgiven, they came to pray, they appeared on the holy days, and they heard from God. It was sacred because God met them there; they left the “world” (figuratively speaking) and came into the very presence of God. §‡ tn: The form is the imperfect tense with the vav showing a sequence with the first verb: “you will command...that they take.” The verb “take, receive” is used here as before for receiving an offering and bringing it to the sanctuary. §§† tn: Heb “lamp,” which must be a collective singular here. §§‡ tn: The verb is unusual; it is the Hiphil infinitive construct of עלה

<sup>18</sup> tn: The LXX has mistakenly rendered this name “the tent of the testimony.” <sup>19</sup> sn: The lamps were to be removed in the morning so that the wicks could be trimmed and the oil replenished ( 30:7) and then lit every evening to burn through the night. <sup>20</sup> sn: This is the first of several sections of priestly duties. The point is a simple one here: those who lead the worship use the offerings of the people to ensure that access to God is illumined regularly. The NT will make much of the symbolism of light. <sup>21</sup> sn: Some modern scholars find this and the next chapter too elaborate for the wilderness experience. To most of them this reflects the later Zadokite priesthood of the writer’s (P’s) day that was referred to Mosaic legislation for authentication. But there is no compelling reason why this should be late; it is put late because it is assumed to be P, and that is assumed to be late. But both assumptions are unwarranted. This lengthy chapter could be divided this way: instructions for preparing the garments (1-5), details of the apparel (6-39), and a warning against deviating from these (40-43). The subject matter of the first part is that God requires that his chosen ministers reflect his holy nature; the point of the second part is that God requires his ministers to be prepared to fulfill the tasks of the ministry, and the subject matter of the third part is that God warns all his ministers to safeguard the holiness of their service. <sup>22</sup> tn: The verb is the Hiphil imperative of the root קָרַב

<sup>28</sup> sn: There is no necessity to take this as a reference to the Holy Spirit who produces wisdom in these people, although that is not totally impossible. A number of English versions (e.g.,

Cassuto has "to all the artisans skilled in the making of stately robes, in the heart [i.e., mind] of each of whom I have implanted sagacity in his craft so that he may do his craft successfully" ( Exodus, 371). † tn: The form is the perfect tense with the vav ( ו )

The expression could be taken to mean "for his consecration" (NIV) since the investiture is part of his being set apart for service. ‡ sn: The breastpiece seems to have been a pouch of sorts or to have had a pocket, since it was folded in some way ( 28:16; 39:9) and contained the Urim and Thummim ( Exod 28:30; Lev 8:8). ‡† sn: The word "ephod" is taken over directly from Hebrew, because no one knows how to translate it, nor is there agreement about its design. It refers here to a garment worn by the priests, but the word can also refer to some kind of image for a god ( Judg 8:27). ‡‡ tn: The word עֲשֵׂהְךָ

It further defines how the names were to be engraved – six on one and the other six on the other.

So the priest, when making atonement, was to wear the precious gems that were there and symbolized the garden of Eden when man was free from sin. <sup>23</sup> tn: For clarity the words "the number of" have been supplied. <sup>24</sup> tn: The phrase translated "the engravings of a seal" is an adverbial accusative of manner here. <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb "give, put." <sup>26</sup> tn: Here "upper" has been supplied. <sup>27</sup> tn: Here "the other" has been supplied.

† tn: Here "them" has been supplied. †† tn: Here "other" has been supplied. ‡ tn: Here "more" has been supplied. ‡‡ sn: So Aaron will have the names of the tribes on his shoulders (v. 12) which bear the weight and symbol of office (see Isa 9:6; 22:22), and over his heart (implying that they have a constant place in his thoughts [ Deut 6:6]). Thus he was to enter the presence of God as the nation's representative, ever mindful of the nation's interests, and ever bringing the remembrance of it before God (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 306). ‡‡‡ sn: The Urim and the Thummim were two objects intended for determining the divine will. There is no clear evidence of their size or shape or the material of which they were made, but they seem to have been familiar items to Moses and the people. The best example of their use comes from 1 Sam 14:36-42. Some have suggested from the etymologies that they were light and dark objects respectively, perhaps stones or sticks or some other object. They seem to have fallen out of use after the Davidic period when the prophetic oracles became popular. It may be that the title "breastpiece of judgment" indicates that these objects were used for making "decisions" (J. P. Hyatt, Exodus [NCBC], 283-84). U. Cassuto has the most thorough treatment of the subject ( Exodus, 378-82); he lists several very clear rules for their uses gathered from their instances in the Bible, including that they were a form of sacred lot, that priests or leaders of the people only could use them, and that they were used for discovering the divine will in areas that were beyond human knowledge. ‡‡‡ tn: Or "judgment" (KJV, ASV, NASB, NRSV). §†† tn: The verb is the Niphal imperfect, here given the nuance of potential imperfect. Here it serves in a final clause (purpose/result), introduced only by the negative (see GKC 503-4 §165. a). §† sn: This must mean round balls of yarn that looked like pomegranates. The fruit was very common in the land, but there is no indication of the reason for its choice here. Pomegranates are found in decorative schemes in Ugarit, probably as signs of fertility. It may be that here they represent the blessing of God on Israel in the land. The bells that are between them possibly have the intent of drawing God's attention as the priest moves and the bells jingle (anthropomorphic, to be sure), or that the people would know that the priest was still alive and moving inside. Some have suggested that the pomegranate may have recalled the forbidden fruit eaten in the garden (the gems already have referred to the garden), the reason for the priest entering for atonement, and the bells would divert the eye (of God) to remind him of the need. This is possible but far from supportable, since nothing is said of the reason, nor is the fruit in the garden identified. §† tn: The text repeats the idea: "you will make for its hem...all around its hem." §§† tn: The words "the pattern is to be" are not in the Hebrew text, but are supplied in the translation for clarity and for stylistic reasons. §§‡ tn: Heb "it"; the referent (the robe) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §§§ tn: The form is a Piel infinitive construct with the lamed ( ך

23 tn: Heb "it will be," an instruction imperfect. † tn: The construction "the iniquity of the holy things" is difficult. "Holy things" is explained in the passage by all the gifts the people bring and consecrate to Yahweh. But there will inevitably be iniquity involved. U. Cassuto explains that Aaron "will atone for all the transgressions committed in connection with the order of the service, the purity of the consecrated things, or the use of the holy gifts, for the declaration engraved on the plate will prove that everything was intended to be holy to the Lord, and if aught was done irregularly, the intention at least was good" (Exodus, 385). †† tn: The clause reads: "according to/by all the gifts of their holiness." The genitive is an attributive genitive, the suffix on it referring to the whole bound construction – "their holy gifts." The idea of the line is that the people will consecrate as holy things gifts they bring to the sanctuary. ‡ tn: This clause is the infinitive construct with the lamed preposition, followed by the prepositional phrase: "for acceptance for them." This infinitive provides the purpose or result of the act of wearing the dedicatory frontlet – that they will be acceptable. ‡† tn: It is difficult to know how to translate תַּכְּבֹּדוּ

‡‡ sn: This refers to a band of linen wrapped around the head, forming something like a brimless convex cap, resembling something like a half egg. It refers to the headgear of ordinary priests only (see S. R. Driver, Exodus, 310-11). ‡‡† sn: The instructions in this verse anticipate chap. 29, as well as the ordination ceremony described in Lev 8 and 9. The anointing of Aaron is specifically required in the Law, for he is to be the High Priest. The expression "ordain them" might also be translated as "install them" or "consecrate them"; it literally reads "and fill their hands," an expression for the consecration offering for priesthood in Lev 8:33. The final instruction to sanctify them will involve the ritual of the atoning sacrifices to make the priests acceptable in the sanctuary. ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "fill their hand." As a result of this installation ceremony they will be officially designated for the work. It seems likely that the concept derives from the notion of putting the priestly responsibilities under their control (i.e., "filling their hands" with work). See note on the phrase "ordained seven days" in Lev 8:33. § tn: Traditionally "sanctify them" (KJV, ASV). §† tn: Heb "naked flesh" (so NAB, NRSV); KJV "nakedness." §†† tn: Heb "be." §‡ tn: The construction for this temporal clause is

§‡ tn: Heb "seed." §‡† sn: So the priests were to make intercession for the people, give decisions from God's revealed will, enter his presence in purity, and represent holiness to Yahweh. The clothing of the priests provided for these functions, but in a way that brought honor and dignity. A priest was, therefore, to serve in purity, holiness, and fear (Malachi). There is much that can be derived from this chapter to form principles of spiritual leadership, but the overall point can be worded this way: Those whom God selects to minister to the congregation through intercessory prayer, divine counsel, and sacrificial worship, must always represent the holiness of Yahweh in their activities and demeanor. §‡‡ sn: Chap. 29 is a rather long, involved discussion of the consecration of Aaron the priest. It is similar to the ordination service in Lev 8. In fact, the execution of what is instructed here is narrated there. But these instructions must have been formulated after or in conjunction with Lev 1-7, for they presuppose a knowledge of the sacrifices. The bulk of the chapter is the consecration of the priests: 1-35. It has the preparation (1-3), washing (4), investiture and anointing (5-9), sin offering (10-14), burnt offering (15-18), installation peace offering (19-26, 31-34), other offerings' rulings (27-30), and the duration of the ritual (35). Then there is the consecration of the altar (36-37), and the oblations (38-46). There are many possibilities for the study and exposition of this material. The whole chapter is the consecration of tabernacle, altar, people, and most of all the priests. God was beginning the holy operations with sacrificial ritual. So the overall message would be: Everyone who ministers, everyone who worships, and everything they use in the presence of Yahweh, must be set apart to God by the cleansing, enabling, and sanctifying work of God. §§§ tn: Heb "the thing." <sup>18</sup> tn: Literally: "take one bull, a 'son' of the herd." <sup>19</sup> tn: The word תְּבִיאֵם

† tn: The "fine flour" is here an adverbial accusative, explaining the material from which these items were made. The flour is to be finely sifted, and from the wheat, not the barley, which was often the material used by the poor. Fine flour, no leaven, and perfect animals, without blemishes, were to be gathered for this service. †† tn: The verb כָּבַד

†† tn: Here too the verb is Hiphil (now imperfect) meaning "bring near" the altar. The choice of this verb indicates that they were not merely being brought near, but that they were being formally presented to Yahweh as the offerings were. ‡† sn: This is the washing referred to in Lev 8:6. This is a complete washing, not just of the hands and feet that would follow in the course of service. It had to serve as a symbolic ritual cleansing or purifying as the initial stage in the consecration. The imagery of washing will be used in the NT for regeneration ( Titus 3:5). ‡†† tn: The Hiphil of כָּבַד

‡‡† tn: The verb used in this last clause is a denominative verb from the word for ephod. And so "ephod the ephod on him" means "fasten as an ephod the ephod on him" (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 316). § sn: This term does not appear in chap. 28, but it can only refer to the plate with the inscription on it that was tied to the turban. Here it is called a "holy diadem," a diadem that is distinctly set apart for this service. All the clothing was described as "holy garments," and so they were all meant to mark the separation of the priests to this holy service. The items of clothing were each intended for different aspects of ministry, and so this step in the consecration was designed to symbolize being set apart for those duties, or, prepared (gifted) to perform the ministry. §† sn: The act of anointing was meant to set him apart for this holy service within the house of Yahweh. The psalms indicate that no oil was spared in this ritual, for it ran down his beard and to the hem of his garment. Oil of anointing was used for all major offices (giving the label with the passive adjective "mashiah" (or "messiah") to anyone anointed. In the further revelation of Scripture, the oil came to signify the enablement as well as the setting apart, and often the Holy Spirit came on the person at the anointing with oil. The olive oil was a symbol of the Spirit in the OT as well ( Zech 4:4-6). And in the NT "anointing" signifies empowerment by the Holy Spirit for service. §†† tc: Hebrew has both the objective pronoun "them" and the names "Aaron and his sons." Neither the LXX nor Leviticus 8:13 has "Aaron and his sons," suggesting that this may have been a later gloss in the text. §† tn: Heb "and you will fill the hand" and so "consecrate" or "ordain." The verb draws together the individual acts of the process.

hands on the head§†† of the bull. 11 You are to kill the bull before the LORD at the entrance to the tent of meeting<sup>12</sup> and take some of the blood of the bull and put it on the horns of the altar§† with your finger, all the rest of§† the blood you are to pour out at the base of the altar. 13 You are to take all the fat that covers the entrails, and the lobe§§† that is above the liver, and the two kidneys and the fat that is on them, and burn them§§† on the altar. 14 But the meat of the bull, its skin, and its dung you are to burn up§§§ outside the camp. 18 It is the purification offering. 19

15¶ You are to take one ram, and Aaron and his sons are to lay their hands on the ram's head, 16 and you are to kill the ram and take its blood and splash it all around on the altar. 17 Then you are to cut the ram into pieces and wash the entrails and its legs and put them on its pieces and on its head<sup>18</sup> and burn<sup>20</sup> the whole ram on the altar. It is a burnt offering<sup>21</sup> to the LORD, a soothing aroma; it is an offering made by fire<sup>22</sup> to the LORD. 23

§†† tn: The verb is singular, agreeing with the first of the compound subject – Aaron. §† sn: The details of these offerings have to be determined from a careful study of Leviticus. There is a good deal of debate over the meaning of laying hands on the animals. At the very least it identifies the animal formally as their sacrifice. But it may very well indicate that the animal is a substitute for them as well, given the nature and the effect of the sacrifices. §† sn: This act seems to have signified the efficacious nature of the blood, since the horns represented power. This is part of the ritual of the sin offering for laity, because before the priests become priests they are treated as laity. The offering is better described as a purification offering rather than a sin offering, because it was offered, according to Leviticus, for both sins and impurities. Moreover, it was offered primarily to purify the sanctuary so that the once-defiled or sinful person could enter (see J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB]). §§† tn: The phrase "rest of" has been supplied in the translation for clarification. §§† tn: S. R. Driver suggests that this is the appendix or an appendix, both here and in v. 22 ( Exodus, 320). "The surplus, the appendage of liver, found with cow, sheep, or goat, but not with humans: Lobus caudatus" ( HALOT 453 s.v. יִבְרָתָה §§§ tn: Heb "turn [them] into sweet smoke" since the word is used for burning incense. sn: The giving of the visceral organs and the fat has received various explanations. The fat represented the best, and the best was to go to God. If the animal is a substitute, then the visceral organs represent the will of the worshiper in an act of surrender to God. 18 tn: Heb "burn with fire." 19 sn: This is to be done because there is no priesthood yet. Once they are installed, then the sin/purification offering is to be eaten by the officiating priests as a sign that the offering was received. But priests could not consume their own sin offering. 20 sn: There were two kinds of "purification offering," those made with confession for sin and those made without. The title needs to cover both of them, and if it is called in the traditional way "the sin offering," that will convey that when people offered it for skin diseases, menstruation, or having babies, they had sinned. That was not the case. Moreover, it is usual to translate the names of the sacrifices by what they do more than what they cover – so peace offering, reparation offering, and purification offering. 21 tn: Heb "turn to sweet smoke." 22 sn: According to Lev 1 the burnt offering (often called whole burnt offering, except that the skins were usually given to the priests for income) was an atoning sacrifice. By consuming the entire animal, God was indicating that he had completely accepted the worshiper, and as it was a sweet smelling fire sacrifice, he was indicating that he was pleased to accept it. By offering the entire animal, the worshiper was indicating on his part a complete surrender to God. 23 tn: The word נִשְׁחַח

† sn: These sections show that the priest had to be purified or cleansed from defilement of sin and also be atoned for and accepted by the LORD

†† sn: By this ritual the priests were set apart completely to the service of God. The ear represented the organ of hearing (as in "ears you have dug" in Ps 40 or "awakens my ear" in Isa 50), and this had to be set apart to God so that they could hear the Word of God. The thumb and the hand represented the instrument to be used for all ministry, and so everything that they "put their hand to" had to be dedicated to God and appropriate for his service. The toe set the foot apart to God, meaning that the walk of the priest had to be consecrated – where he went, how he conducted himself, what life he lived, all belonged to God now. ‡ tn: Here "it" has been supplied. ‡† tn: The verb in this instance is Qal and not Piel, "to be holy" rather than "sanctify." The result of all this ritual is that Aaron and his sons will be set aside and distinct in their life and their service. ‡‡ tn: S. R. Driver suggests that this is the appendix or an appendix, both here and in v. 13 (Exodus, 320). It is to be a contribution from the Israelites from their peace offerings, their contribution to the LORD.

§‡ tn: "them" has been supplied. §†† sn: These are the two special priestly offerings: the wave offering (from the verb "to wave") and the "presentation offering" (older English: heave offering; from a verb "to be high," in Hiphil meaning "to lift up," an item separated from the offering, a contribution). The two are then clarified with two corresponding relative clauses containing two Hophals: "which was waved and which was presented." In making sacrifices, the breast and the thigh belong to the priests. † tn: The construction is an infinitive construct with a lamed ( ִ )

§§† tn: Heb "after him"; NCV, NLT "after Aaron." §§‡ tn: The text just has the relative pronoun and the imperfect tense. It could be translated "who comes/enters." But the context seems to indicate that this would be when he first comes to the tent to begin his tenure as High Priest, and so a temporal clause makes this clear. "First" has been supplied. §§§ tn: "Seven days" is an adverbial accusative of time. The ritual of ordination is to be repeated for seven days, and so they are to remain there in the court in full dress. <sup>18</sup> tn: Or "boil" (see Lev 8:31). <sup>19</sup> sn: The "holy place" must be in the courtyard of the sanctuary. Lev 8:31 says it is to be cooked at the entrance of the tent of meeting. Here it says it will be eaten there as well. This, then, becomes a communion sacrifice, a peace offering which was a shared meal. Eating a communal meal in a holy place was meant to signify that the worshipers and the priests were at peace with God. <sup>20</sup> tn: The clause is a relative clause modifying "those things," the direct object of the verb "eat." The relative clause has a resumptive pronoun: "which atonement was made by them" becomes "by which atonement was made." The verb is a Pual perfect of כָּפַר

† tn: The verb is a Niphal imperfect negated. It expresses the prohibition against eating this, but in the passive voice: "it will not be eaten," or stronger, "it must not be eaten." †† tn: Heb "you will fill their hand." ‡ tn: The "seven days" is the adverbial accusative explaining that the ritual of the filling should continue daily for a week. Leviticus makes it clear that they are not to leave the sanctuary. ‡† tn: The construction uses a genitive: "a bull of the sin offering," which means, a bull that is designated for a sin (or better, purification) offering. ‡‡ sn: It is difficult to understand how this verse is to be harmonized with the other passages. The ceremony in the earlier passages deals with atonement made for the priests, for people. But here it is the altar that is being sanctified. The "sin [purification] offering" seems to be for purification of the sanctuary and altar to receive people in their worship. ‡‡† tn: The verb is תאמרו

‡‡‡ tn: The construction is a Piel infinitive construct in an adverbial clause. The preposition bet ( ב )

§ tn: Once again this is an adverbial accusative of time. Each day for seven days the ritual at the altar is to be followed. §† tn: The construction is the superlative genitive: "holy of holies," or "most holy." §†† sn: This line states an unusual principle, meant to preserve the sanctity of the altar. S. R. Driver explains it this way ( Exodus, 325): If anything comes in contact with the altar, it becomes holy and must remain in the sanctuary for Yahweh's use. If a person touches the altar, he likewise becomes holy and cannot return to the profane regions. He will be given over to God to be dealt with as God pleases. Anyone who was not qualified to touch the altar did not dare approach it, for contact would have meant that he was no longer free to leave but was God's holy possession – and might pay for it with his life (see Exod 30:29; Lev 6:18b, 27; and Ezek 46:20). §‡ tn: The verb is "you will do," "you will make." It clearly refers to offering the animals on the altar, but may emphasize all the preparation that was involved in the process. §†† tn: Heb "between the two evenings" or "between the two settings" ( בין הערבים )

§† tn: The phrase "of an ephah" has been supplied for clarity (cf. Num 28:5). The ephah was a commonly used dry measure whose capacity is now uncertain: "Quotations given for the ephah vary from ca. 45 to 20 liters" (C. Houtman, Exodus, 2:340-41). §‡ tn: "Hin" is a transliterated Hebrew word that seems to have an Egyptian derivation. The amount of liquid measured by a hin is uncertain: "Its presumed capacity varies from about 3,5 liters to 7,5 liters" (C. Houtman, Exodus, 3:550). §§† tn: The translation has "regular" instead of "continually," because they will be preparing this twice a day. §§‡ tn: The relative clause identifies the place in front of the Tent as the place that Yahweh would meet Moses. The reference here is to when Yahweh enters the sanctuary in all his glory (see Exod 40:34f.). 19 tn: This verse affirms the same point as the last, but now with an active verb: "I will set apart as holy" (or "I will sanctify"). This verse, then, probably introduces the conclusion of the chapter: "So I will...." 20 tn: The verb has the root יאמרו

The widespread contemporary view that it was composed later does not answer the question, it merely moves the issue to the work of an editor rather than the author. N. M. Sarana notes concerning the items in chapter 30 that "all the materials for these final items were anticipated in the list of invited donations in 25:3-6" and that they were not needed for installing Aaron and his

The Ransom Money <sup>st†</sup>

§‡ tn: The word "atonements" (plural in Hebrew) is a genitive showing the result or product of the sacrifice made. §§† sn: This ruling presupposes that the instruction for the Day of Atonement has been given, or at the very least, is to be given shortly. That is the one day of the year that all sin and all ritual impurity would be removed. §§‡ sn: The phrase "most holy to the LORD

§§§ sn: This brief section has been interpreted a number of ways by biblical scholars (for a good survey and discussion, see B. Jacob, Exodus, 829-35). In this context the danger of erecting and caring for a sanctuary may have been in view. A census would be taken to count the losses and to cover the danger of coming into such proximity with the holy place; payment was made to ransom the lives of the people numbered so that they would not die. The money collected would then be used for the care of the sanctuary. The principle was fairly straightforward: Those numbered among the redeemed of the LORD

The Bronze Laver §†

† sn: It appears that some standard is in view for the amount of a shekel weight. The sanctuary shekel is sometimes considered to be twice the value of the ordinary shekel. The "gerah," also of uncertain meaning, was mentioned as a reference point for the ancient reader to understand the value of the required payment. It may also be that the expression meant "a sacred shekel" and looked at the purpose more – a shekel for sanctuary dues. This would mean that the standard of the shekel weight was set because it was the traditional amount of sacred dues (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 333). "Though there is no certainty, the shekel is said to weigh about 11,5 grams...Whether an official standard is meant [by 'sanctuary shekel'] or whether the sanctuary shekel had a different weight than the 'ordinary' shekel is not known" (C. Houtman, Exodus, 3:181). †† tn: Or "contribution" (תְּרוּמָה) ‡ tn: Or "pay more." ‡† tn: The form is לָתַת

This infinitive construct ( לְכַפֵּר )

‡†† tn: Heb "the silver of the atonements." The genitive here is the result (as in "sheep of slaughter") telling what the money will be used for (see R. J. Williams, Hebrew Syntax, 11, §44). ‡‡† sn: The idea of "service" is maintenance and care of the sanctuary and its service, meaning the morning and evening sacrifices and the other elements to be used. § sn: S. R. Driver says this is "to keep Jehovah in continual remembrance of the ransom which had been paid for their lives" (Exodus, 334). §† tn: The infinitive could be taken in a couple of ways here. It could be an expegetical infinitive: "making atonement." Or it could be the infinitive expressing result: "so that atonement will be made for your lives." §†† sn: Another piece of furniture is now introduced, the laver, or washing basin. It was a round (the root means to be round) basin for holding water, but it had to be up on a pedestal or base to let water run out (through taps of some kind) for the priests to wash – they could not simply dip dirty hands into the basin. This was for the priests primarily to wash their hands and feet before entering the tent. It stood in the courtyard between the altar and the tent. No dimensions are given. The passage can be divided into three sections: the instructions (17-18), the rules for washing (19-20), and the reminder that this is a perpetual statute. §† tn: Heb "and Yahweh spoke to Moses, saying." §†† sn: The metal for this object was obtained from the women from their mirrors (see Exod 38:8). §† tn: Heb "and its stand bronze." §† tn: The form is the adverb "there" with the directive qamets-he ( הָ ) §†† tn: That is, from water from it. §§† tn: The form is an infinitive construct when they approach<sup>18</sup> the altar to minister by burning incense<sup>19</sup> as an offering made by fire<sup>20</sup> to the LORD, <sup>21</sup> they must wash<sup>21</sup> their hands and their feet so that they do not die. And this<sup>22</sup> will be a perpetual ordinance for them and for their descendants<sup>23</sup> throughout their generations." <sup>24</sup>

<sup>20</sup> tn: The text uses two infinitives construct: "to minister to burn incense"; the first is the general term and expresses the purpose of the drawing near, and the second infinitive is expegetical, explaining the first infinitive. <sup>21</sup> tn: The translation "as an offering made by fire" is a standard rendering of the one word in the text that appears to refer to "fire." Milgrom and others contend that it simply means a "gift" ( Leviticus 1-16, 161). <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb "and [then] they will wash." <sup>23</sup> tn: The verb is "it will be." <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "for his seed." <sup>25</sup> tn: Or "for generations to come"; it literally is "to their generations." sn: The symbolic meaning of washing has been taught throughout the ages. This was a practical matter of cleaning hands and feet, but it was also symbolic of purification before Yahweh. It was an outward sign of inner spiritual cleansing, or forgiveness. Jesus washed the disciples feet ( Jn 13) to show this same teaching; he asked the disciples if they knew what he had done (so it was more than washing feet). In this passage the theological points for the outline would be these: I. God provides the means of cleansing; II. Cleansing is a prerequisite for participating in the worship, and III. (Believers) priests must regularly appropriate God's provision of cleansing. <sup>26</sup> sn: The chapter ends with these two sections. The oil (22-33) is the mark of consecration, and the incense (34-38) is a mark of pleasing service, especially in prayer. So the essence of the message of the chapter is that the servants of God must be set apart by the Spirit for ministry and must be pleasing to God in the ministry. <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb "and Yahweh spoke to Moses, saying." <sup>28</sup> tn: The construction uses the imperative "take," but before it is the independent pronoun to add emphasis to it. After the imperative is the ethical dative (lit. "to you") to stress the task to Moses as a personal responsibility: "and you, take to yourself." <sup>29</sup> tn: Heb "spices head." This must mean the chief spices, or perhaps the top spice, meaning fine spices or choice spices. See Song 4:14; Ezek 27:22. <sup>30</sup> tn: Or "500 shekels." Verse 24 specifies that the sanctuary shekel was the unit for weighing the spices. The total of 1500 shekels for the four spices is estimated at between 77 and 100 pounds, or 17 to 22 kilograms, depending on how much a shekel weighed (C. Houtman, Exodus, 3:576). <sup>31</sup> sn: Myrrh is an aromatic substance that flows from the bark of certain trees in Arabia and Africa and then hardens. "The hardened globules of the gum appear also to have been ground into a powder that

beat some of it very fine and put some of it before the ark of the testimony in the tent of meeting where I will meet with you; it is to be most holy to you. <sup>37</sup> And the incense that you are to make, you must not make for yourselves using the same recipe; it is to be most holy to you, belonging to the LORD. <sup>38</sup> Whoever makes anything like it, to use as perfume, <sup>20</sup> will be cut off from his people." <sup>21</sup>

<sup>21</sup> tn: Or to smell it, to use for the maker's own pleasure. <sup>22</sup> sn: The next unit describes the preparation of skilled workers to build all that has been listed now for several chapters. This chapter would have been the bridge to the building of the sanctuary (35-39) if it were not for the idolatrous interlude. God called individuals and prepared them by his Spirit to be skilled to do the work for the tabernacle. If this were the substance of an exposition, it would clearly be a message on gifted people doing the work – close to the spiritual lesson of Ephesians 4. There would be two levels of meaning: the physical, which looks at the skilled artisans providing for a place to worship Yahweh, and the spiritual, which would bring in the Spirit-filled servants of God participating in building up his kingdom. <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb "and Yahweh spoke to Moses, saying." <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "called by name." This expression means that the person was specifically chosen for some important task (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 342). See the expression with Cyrus in Isa 45:3-4. <sup>25</sup> sn: The expression in the Bible means that the individual was given special, supernatural enablement to do what God wanted done. It usually is said of someone with exceptional power or ability. The image of "filling" usually means under the control of the Spirit, so that the Spirit is the dominant force in the life. <sup>26</sup> sn: The following qualities are the ways in which the Spirit's enablement will be displayed. "Skill" is the ability to produce something valuable to God and the community, "understanding" is the ability to distinguish between things, to perceive the best way to follow, and "knowledge" is the experiential awareness of how things are done. <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb "and in all work"; "all" means "all kinds of" here. <sup>28</sup> tn: The expression is מְחַמֵּם מְחַמֵּם

<sup>29</sup> tn: The expression uses the independent personal pronoun ("and I") with the deictic particle ("behold") to enforce the subject of the verb – "and I, indeed I have given." <sup>30</sup> tn: Heb "and in the heart of all that are wise-hearted I have put wisdom." sn: The verse means that there were a good number of very skilled and trained artisans that could come to do the work that God wanted done. But God's Spirit further endowed them with additional wisdom and skill for the work that had to be done.

They will make all these things just as I have commanded you."

Sabbath Observance ††

<sup>12</sup> The LORD said to Moses, <sup>†13</sup> " Tell the Israelites, 'Surely you must keep my Sabbaths, †† for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations, that you may know that I am the LORD who sanctifies you. ††<sup>14</sup> So you must keep the Sabbath, for it is holy for you. †† tn: Heb "all the vessels of the tent." † sn: There are some questions about the arrangement of the book. The placement of this section here, however, should come as no surprise. After the instructions and preparation for work, a Sabbath day when work could not be done had to be legislated. In all that they were going to do, they must not violate the Sabbath, †† tn: Heb "and Yahweh said ( וַיֹּאמֶר ) †† sn: The instruction for the Sabbath at this point seems rather abrupt, but it follows logically the extended plans of building the sanctuary. B. Jacob, following some of the earlier treatments, suggests that these are specific rules given for the duration of the building of the sanctuary ( Exodus, 844). The Sabbath day is a day of complete cessation; no labor or work could be done. The point here is that God's covenant people must faithfully keep the sign of the covenant as a living commemoration of the finished work of Yahweh, and as an active part in their sanctification. §§† tn: The expression again forms an adverbial accusative of time. §§† sn: The word "rest" essentially means "to cease, stop." So describing God as "resting" on the seventh day does not indicate that he was tired - he simply finished creation and then ceased or stopped. But in this verse is a very bold anthropomorphism in the form of the verb שָׁבֻט

§§§ sn: The expression "the finger of God" has come up before in the book, in the plagues ( Exod 8:15) to express that it was a demonstration of the power and authority of God. So here too the commandments given to Moses on stone tablets came from God. It too is a bold anthropomorphism; to attribute such a material action to Yahweh would have been thought provoking to say the least. But by using "God" and by stating it in an obviously figurative way, balance is maintained. Since no one writes with one finger, the expression simply says that the Law came directly from God. 18 sn: This narrative is an unhappy interlude in the flow of the argument of the book. After the giving of the Law and the instructions for the tabernacle, the people get into idolatry. So this section tells what the people were doing when Moses was on the mountain. Here is an instant violation of the covenant that they had just agreed to uphold. But through it all Moses shines as the great intercessor for the people. So the subject matter is the sin of idolatry, its effects and its remedy. Because of the similarities to Jeroboam's setting up the calves in Dan and Bethel, modern critics have often said this passage was written at that time. U. Cassuto shows how the language of this chapter would not fit an Iron Age setting in Dan. Rather, he argues, this story was well enough known for Jeroboam to imitate the practice ( Exodus, 407-10). This chapter can be divided into four parts for an easier exposition: idolatry ( 32:1-6), intercession ( 32:7-14), judgment ( 32:15-29), intercession again ( 32:30-33:6). Of course, these sections are far more complex than this, but this gives an overview. Four summary statements for expository points might be: I. Impatience often leads to foolish violations of the faith, II. Violations of the covenant require intercession to escape condemnation, III. Those spared of divine wrath must purge evil from their midst, and IV. Those who purge evil from their midst will find reinstatement through intercession. Several important studies are available for this. See, among others, D. R. Davis, "Rebellion, Presence, and Covenant: A Study in Exodus 32-34," WTJ 44 (1982): 71-87; M. Greenberg, "Moses' Intercessory Prayer," Ecumenical Institute for Advanced Theological Studies (1978): 21-35; R. A. Hamer, "The New Covenant of Moses," Judaism 27 (1978): 345-50; R. L. But it might also have the force of prompting him to get busy. ‡ tn: The plural translation is required here (although the form itself could be singular in meaning) because the verb that follows in the relative clause is a plural verb – that they go before us). ‡† tn: The text has "this Moses." But this instance may find the demonstrative used in an earlier deictic sense, especially since there is no article with it. ‡‡ tn: The interrogative is used in an indirect question (see GKC 443-44 §137. c). ‡‡† sn: B. Jacob (Exodus, 937-38) argues that Aaron simply did not have the resolution that Moses did, and wanting to keep peace he gave in to the crowd. He also tries to explain that Aaron was wanting to show their folly through the deed. U. Cassuto also says that Aaron's request for the gold was a form of procrastination, but that the people quickly did it and so he had no alternative but to go through with it (Exodus, 412). These may be right, since Aaron fully understood what was wrong with this, and what the program was all about. The text gives no strong indication to support these ideas, but there are enough hints from the way Aaron does things to warrant such a conclusion. ‡‡‡ tn: This "all" is a natural hyperbole in the narrative, for it means the large majority of the people. § tn: Here "the gold" has been supplied. §† tn: Heb "from their hand." §†† tn: The verb looks similar to יַצַּר

§† sn: The word means a "young bull" and need not be translated as "calf" (although "calf" has become the traditional rendering in English). The word could describe an animal three years old. Aaron probably made an inner structure of wood and then, after melting down the gold, plated it. The verb "molten" does not need to imply that the image was solid gold; the word is used in Isa 30:22 for gold plating. So it was a young bull calf that was overlaid with gold, and the gold was fashioned with the stylus. §†† tn: The word could be singular here and earlier; here it would then be "this is your god, O Israel." However, the use of "these" indicates more than one god was meant by the image. But their statement and their statue, although they do not use the holy name, violate the first two commandments. §† tn: The preterite with the vav ( ו

<sup>20</sup> tn: The two imperatives could also express one idea: "get down there." In other words, "Make haste to get down." <sup>21</sup> sn: By giving the people to Moses in this way, God is saying that they have no longer any right to claim him as their God, since they have shared his honor with another. This is God's talionic response to their "These are your gods who brought you up." The use of these pronoun changes also would form an appeal to Moses to respond, since Moses knew that God had brought them up from Egypt. <sup>22</sup> tn: The verb is a perfect tense, reflecting the present perfect nuance: "they have turned aside" and are still disobedient. But the verb is modified with the adverb "quickly" (actually a Piel infinitive absolute). It has been only a matter of weeks since they heard the voice of God prohibiting this. <sup>23</sup> sn: This is a bold anthropomorphism; it is as if God has now had a chance to get to know these people and has discovered how rebellious they are. The point of the figure is that there has been discernible evidence of their nature. <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "and behold" or "and look." The expression directs attention in order to persuade the hearer. <sup>25</sup> sn: B. Jacob says the image is that of the people walking before God, and when he called to them the directions, they

‡ tn: The question is rhetorical; it really forms an affirmation that is used here as a reason for the request (see GKC 474 §150. e). ‡† tn: Heb "speak, saying." This is redundant in English and has been simplified in the translation. ‡‡ tn: The word "evil" means any kind of life-threatening or fatal calamity. "Evil" is that which hinders life, interrupts life, causes pain to life, or destroys it. The Egyptians would conclude that such a God would have no good intent in taking his people to the desert if now he destroyed them. ‡‡† tn: The form is a Piel infinitive construct from נָחַ

‡‡‡ tn: The verb "repent, relent" when used of God is certainly an anthropomorphism. It expresses the deep pain that one would have over a situation. Earlier God repented that he had made humans ( Gen 6:6). Here Moses is asking God to repent/relent over the judgment he was about to bring, meaning that he should be moved by such compassion that there would be no judgment like that. J. P. Hyatt observes that the Bible uses so many anthropomorphisms because the Israelites conceived of God as a dynamic and living person in a vital relationship with people, responding to their needs and attitudes and actions ( Exodus [NCBC], 307). See H. V. D. Parunak, "A Semantic Survey of NHM," Bib 56 (1975): 512-32. § tn: Heb "your seed." §† tn: "about" has been supplied. §†† tn: Heb "seed."

<sup>21</sup> Moses said to Aaron, "What did this people do to you, that you have brought on them so great a sin?" <sup>22</sup> Aaron said, "Do not let your anger burn hot, my lord; <sup>21</sup> you know these people, that they tend to evil. <sup>2223</sup> They said to me, 'Make us gods that will go before us, for as for this fellow Moses, the man who brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we do not know what has happened to him.' <sup>24</sup> So I said to them, 'Whoever has gold, break it off.' So they gave it<sup>23</sup> to me, and I threw it into the fire, and this calf came out." <sup>24</sup>

This text does not mention it, but Deut 9:20 tells how angry God was with Aaron. Only intercession saved his life. 26 tn: The word is difficult to interpret. There does not seem to be enough evidence to justify the KJV's translation "naked." It appears to mean something like "let loose" or "lack restraint" ( Prov 29:18). The idea seems to be that the people had broken loose, were undisciplined, and were completely given over to their desires. 27 tn: The last two words of the verse read literally "for a whispering among those who rose up against them." The foes would ered around him,<sup>27</sup> and he said to them, “Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, ‘Each man fasten† his sword on his side, and go back and forth†† from entrance to entrance throughout the camp, and each one kill his brother, his friend, and his neighbor.’”‡

<sup>31</sup> So Moses returned to the LORD and said, “Alas, this people has committed a very serious sin,§† and they have made for themselves gods of gold. <sup>‡2</sup> But now, if you will forgive their sin...‡‡† but if not, wipe me out§† from your book that you have written.” <sup>‡‡‡33</sup> The LORD said to Moses, “Whoever has sinned against me – that

To me!” (Exodus, 354). †† tn: Heb “put.” ‡ tn: The two imperatives form a verbal hendiadys: “pass over and return,” meaning, “go back and forth” throughout the camp. †† tn: The phrases have “and kill a man his brother, and a man his companion, and a man his neighbor.” The instructions were probably intended to mean that they should kill leaders they knew to be guilty because they had been seen or because they failed the water test – whoever they were. ‡‡ tn: Heb “did according to the word of Moses.” ‡‡† tn: Heb “fell.” ‡‡‡ tn: Heb “Your hand was filled.” The phrase “fill your hands” is a familiar expression having to do with commissioning and devotion to a task that is earlier used in 28:41; 29:9, 29, 33, 35. This has usually been explained as a Qal imperative. S. R. Driver explains it “Fill your hand today,” meaning, take a sacrifice to God and be installed in the priesthood (Exodus, 355). But it probably is a Piel perfect, meaning “they have filled your hands today,” or, “your hand was filled today.” This was an expression meant to say that they had been faithful to God even though it turned them against family and friends – but God would give them a blessing. § tn: The text simply has “and to give on you today a blessing.” Gesenius notes that the infinitive construct seems to be attached with a vav ( ו )

It is also possible to take this first clause as a desire and not a conditional clause, rendering it “Oh that you would forgive!” §‡ tn: The word “wipe” is a figure of speech indicating “remove me” (meaning he wants to die). The translation “blot” is traditional, but not very satisfactory, since it does not convey complete removal.

§§† sn: The book that is referred to here should not be interpreted as the NT “book of life” which is portrayed (figuratively) as a register of all the names of the saints who are redeemed and will inherit eternal life. Here it refers to the names of those who are living and serving in this life, whose names, it was imagined, were on the roster in the heavenly courts as belonging to the chosen. Moses would rather die than live if these people are not forgiven (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 356). §§‡ tn: Heb “behold, look.” Moses should take this fact into consideration. §§§ sn: The Law said that God would not clear the guilty. But here the punishment is postponed to some future date when he would revisit this matter. Others have taken the line to mean that whenever a reckoning was considered necessary, then this sin would be included (see B. Jacob, Exodus, 957). The repetition of the verb traditionally rendered “visit” in both clauses puts emphasis on the certainty – so “indeed.” <sup>18</sup> tn: The verse is difficult because of the double reference to the making of the calf. The NJPS’s translation tries to reconcile the two by reading “for what they did with the calf that Aaron had made.” B. S. Childs (Exodus [OTL], 557) explains in some detail why this is not a good translation based on syntactical grounds; he opts for the conclusion that the last three words are a clumsy secondary addition. It seems preferable to take the view that both are true, Aaron is singled out for his obvious lead in the sin, but the people sinned by instigating the whole thing. <sup>19</sup> sn: Most commentators have difficulty with this verse. W. C. Kaiser says the strict chronology is not always kept, and so the plague here may very well refer to the killing of the three thousand (“Exodus,” EBC 2:481). <sup>20</sup> tn: The two imperatives underscore the immediacy of the demand: “go, go up,” meaning “get going up” or “be on your way.” <sup>21</sup> tn: Or “the land which I swore.” <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb “seed.” <sup>23</sup> sn: This seems not to be the same as the Angel of the Presence introduced before. <sup>24</sup> sn: See T. Ishida, “The Structure and Historical Implications of Lists of Pre-Israelite Nations,” Bib (1979): 461-90. <sup>25</sup> tn: This verse seems to be a continuation of the command to “go up” since it begins with “to a land....” The intervening clauses are therefore parenthetical or relative. But the translation is made simpler by supplying the verb. <sup>26</sup> tn: This is a strong adversative here, “but.” <sup>27</sup> tn: The clause is “lest I consume you.” It would go with the decision not to accompany them: “I will not go up with you...lest I consume (destroy) you in the way.” The verse is saying that because of the people’s bent to rebellion, Yahweh would not remain in their midst as he had formerly said he would do. Their lives would be at risk if he did. <sup>28</sup> tn: Or “bad news” (NAB, NCV). <sup>29</sup> sn: The people would rather have risked divine discipline than to go without Yahweh in their midst. So they mourned, and they took off the ornaments. Such had been used in making the golden calf, and so because of their association with all of that they were to be removed as a sign of remorse. <sup>30</sup> tn: The verse sim-

LORD had said to Moses, "Tell the Israelites, 'You are a stiff-necked people. If I went up among you for a moment, † I might destroy you. Now take off your ornaments, †† that I may know‡ what I should do to you.'" ††6 So the Israelites stripped off their ornaments by Mount Horeb.

18 tn: Both verbs, "stand" and "speak," are perfect tenses with vav ( ׀ 19 tn: All the main verbs in this verse are perfect tenses continuing the customary sequence (see GKC 337 §112. kk). The idea is that the people would get up (rise) when the cloud was there and then worship, meaning in part bow down. When the cloud was not there, there was access to seek God. 20 tn: "Face to face" is circumstantial to the action of the verb, explaining how they spoke (see GKC 489-90 §156. c). The point of this note of friendly relationship with Moses is that Moses was "at home" in this tent speaking with God. Moses would derive courage from this when he interceded for the people (B. Jacob, Exodus, 966). 21 tn: The verb in this clause is a progressive imperfect. 22 tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Moses) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 23 sn: Moses did not live in the tent. But Joshua remained there most of the time to guard the tent, it seems, lest any of the people approach it out of curiosity. 24 tn: The Hiphil imperative is from the same verb that has been used before for bringing the people up from Egypt and leading them to Canaan. 25 tn: That is, "chosen you." 26 tn: The prayer uses the Hiphil imperative of the verb "to know." "Cause me to know" is "show me, reveal to me, teach or inform me." Moses wanted to know more of God's dealings with people, especially after all that has happened in the preceding chapter. 27 tn: The imperfect tense of the verb "to know" with the vav follows the imperative of this root, and so this indicates the purpose clause (final imperfect): "in order that I may know you." S. R. Driver summarizes it this way: that I may understand what your nature and character is, and shape my petitions accordingly, so that I may find grace in your sight, and my future prayers may be answered ( Exodus, 361).

† tn: The purpose clause simply uses the imperfect, "that I may find." But since he already has found favor in God's eyes, he is clearly praying that it be so in the future as well as now. †† tn: The verb "see" (an imperative) is a request for God to acknowledge Israel as his people by providing the divine leadership needed. ‡† sn: Heb "my face." This represents the presence of Yahweh going with the people (see 2 Sam 17:11 for an illustration). The "presence" probably refers to the angel of the presence or some similar manifestation of God's leading and caring for his people. ‡‡ tn: The phrase "with you" is not in the Hebrew text, but is implied. ‡†† sn: The expression certainly refers to the peace of mind and security of knowing that God was with them. But the expression came to mean "settle them in the land of promise" and give them rest and peace from their enemies. U. Cassuto (Exodus, 434) observes how in 32:10 God had told Moses, "Leave me alone" ("give me rest"), but now he promises to give them rest. The parallelism underscores the great transition through intercession. ‡††† tn: Heb "and he said"; the referent ( Moses §† tn: Heb "and he said"; the referent ( MOSES §† sn: Moses now wanted to see the glory of Yahweh, more than what he had already seen and experienced. He wanted to see God in all his majesty. The LXX chose to translate this without a word for "glory" or "honor"; instead they used the pronoun seautou, "yourself" - show me the real You. God tells him that he cannot see it fully, but in part. It will be enough for Moses to disclose to him the reality of the divine presence as well as God's moral nature. It would be impossible for Moses to comprehend all of the nature of God, for there is a boundary between God and man. But God would let him see his goodness, the sum of his nature, pass by in a flash. B. Jacob (Exodus, 972) says that the glory refers to God's majesty, might, and glory, as manifested in nature, in his providence, his laws, and his judgments. He adds that this glory should and would be made visible to man - that was its purpose in the world. §§† tn: Heb "and he

18 sn: God declares his mercy and grace in similar terms to his earlier self-revelation ("I am that I am"): "I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious." In other words, the grace and mercy of God are bound up in his own will. Obviously, in this passage the recipients of that favor are the penitent Israelites who were forgiven through Moses' intercession. The two words are at the heart of God's dealings with people. The first is יְהוָה

19 tn: In view of the use of the verb "can, be able to" in the first clause, this imperfect tense is given a potential nuance. 20 tn: Gesenius notes that sometimes a negative statement takes the place of a conditional clause; here it is equal to "if a man sees me he does not live" (GKC 498 §159. gg). The other passages that teach this are Gen 32:30; Deut 4:33, 5:24, 26; Judg 6:22, 13:22, and Isa 6:5. 21 tn: The deictic particle is used here simply to call attention to a place of God's knowing and choosing. 22 sn: Heb "and you will," or interpretively, "where you will." 23 tn: Note the use in Exod 40:3, "and you will screen the ark with the curtain." The glory is covered, veiled from being seen. 24 tn: The circumstantial clause is simply, "my hand [being] over you." This protecting hand of Yahweh represents a fairly common theme in the Bible. 25 tn: The construction has a preposition with an infinitive construct and a suffix: "while [or until] I pass by" ( Heb "in the passing by of me"). 26 tn: The plural "my backs" is according to Gesenius an extension plural (compare "face," a dual in Hebrew). The word denotes a locality in general, but that is composed of numerous parts (see GKC 397 §124. b). W. C. Kaiser says that since God is a spirit, the meaning of this word could just as easily be rendered "after effects" of his presence ("Exodus," EBC 2:484). As S. R. Driver says, though, while this may indicate just the "afterglow" that he leaves behind him, it was enough to suggest what the full brilliancy of his presence must be ( Exodus, 363; see also Job 26:14). 27 tn: The Niphal imperfect could simply be rendered "will not be seen," but given the emphasis of the preceding verses, it is more binding than that, and so a negated obligatory imperfect fits better: "it must not be seen." It would also be possible to render it with a potential imperfect tense: "it cannot be seen." 28 sn: The restoration of the faltering community continues in this chapter. First, Moses is instructed to make new tablets and take them to the mountain (1-4). Then, through the promised theophany God proclaims his moral character (5-8). Moses responds with the reiteration of the intercession (8), and God responds with the renewal of the covenant (10-28). To put these into expository form, as principles, the chapter would run as follows: I. God provides for spiritual renewal (1-4), II. God reminds people of his moral standard (5-9), III. God renews his covenant promises and stipulations (10-28). 29 tn: The imperative is followed by the preposition with a suffix expressing the ethical dative; it strengthens the instruction for Moses. Interestingly, the verb "cut out, chisel, hew," is the same verb from which the word for a "graven image" is derived - קטף † tn: The perfect tense with vav consecutive makes the value of this verb equal to an imperfect tense, probably a simple future here. sn: Nothing is said of how God was going to write on these stone tablets at this point, but in the end it is Moses who wrote the words. This is not considered a contradiction, since God is often credited with things he has people do in his place. There is great symbolism in this command - if ever a command said far more than it actually said, this is it. The instruction means that the covenant had been renewed, or was going to be renewed, and that the sanctuary with the tablets in the ark at its center would be built (see Deut 10:1). The first time Moses went up he was empty-handed; when he came down he smashed the tablets because of the Israelites' sin. Now the people would see him go up with empty tablets and be uncertain whether he would come back with the tablets inscribed again (B. Jacob, Exodus, 977-78). †† tn: The form is a Niphal participle that means "be prepared, be ready." This probably means that Moses was to do in preparation what the congregation had to do back in Exod 19:11-15. ‡ sn: The same word is used in Exod 33:21. It is as if Moses was to be at his post when Yahweh wanted to communicate to him. †† tn: Heb "he"; the referent has been specified here and the name "Moses," which occurs later in this verse, has been replaced with the pronoun ("he"), both for stylistic reasons. ††† sn: Deuteronomy says that Moses was also to make an ark of acacia wood before the tablets, apparently to put the tablets in until the sanctuary was built. But this ark may not have been the ark built later; or, it might be the wood box, but Bezalel still had to do all the golden work with it. ††† tn: The line reads "and Moses got up early in the morning and went up." These verbs likely form a verbal hendiadys, the first one with its prepositional phrase serving in an adverbial sense. ††† tn: Some commentaries wish to make Moses the subject of the second and the third verbs, the first because he was told to stand there and this verb suggests he did it, and the last because it sounds like he was worshipping Yahweh (cf. NASB). But it is clear from v. 6 that Yahweh was the subject of the last clause of v. 5 - v. 6 tells how he did it. So if Yahweh is the subject of the first and last clauses of v. 5, it seems simpler that he also be the subject of the second. Moses took his stand there, but God stood by him (B. Jacob, Exodus, 981; U. Cassuto, Exodus, 439). There is no reason to make Moses the subject in any of the verbs of v. 5.

§ tn: Here is one of the clearest examples of what it means "to call on the name of the Lord," as that clause has been translated traditionally ( וַיִּקְרָא בְשֵׁם יְהוָה )

§† sn: U. Cassuto ( Exodus, 439) suggests that these two names be written as a sentence: "Yahweh, He is Yahweh." In this manner it reflects "I am that I am." It is impossible to define his name in any other way than to make this affirmation and then show what it means. §†† tn: See Exod 33:19. §‡ sn: This is literally "long of anger." His anger prolongs itself, allowing for people to repent before punishment is inflicted. §†† sn: These two words ("loyal love" and "truth") are often found together, occasionally in a hendiadys construction. If that is the interpretation here, then it means "faithful covenant love." Even if they are left separate, they are dual elements of a single quality. The first word is God's faithful covenant love; the second word is God's reliability and faithfulness. §† tn: That is, "for thousands of generations." §‡ sn: As in the ten commandments ( 20:5-6), this expression shows that the iniquity and its punishment will continue in the family if left unchecked. This does not go on as long as the outcomes for good (thousands versus third or fourth generations), and it is limited to those who hate God. §§† tn: The first two verbs form a hendiadys: "he hurried...he bowed," meaning "he quickly bowed down." §§‡ tn: The Hebrew term translated "Lord" two times here is יְהוָה §§§ tn: Heb "it is." Hebrew uses the third person masculine singular pronoun here in agreement with the noun "people." <sup>18</sup> tn: Here again is a use of the futur instans participle; the deictic particle plus the pronoun precedes the participle, showing what is about to happen. <sup>19</sup> tn: The verb here is אָבַד

<sup>20</sup> sn: The idea is that God will be doing awesome things in dealing with them, i.e., to fulfill his program. <sup>21</sup> tn: The covenant duties begin with this command to "keep well" what is being commanded. It is the second use of this verb in the duties, now in the Niphal stem. To take heed to yourself means to watch yourself, be sure not to do something. Here, if they failed to do this, they would end up making entangling treaties. †† sn: A snare would be a trap, an allurement to ruin. See Exod 23:33. ‡ tn: Or "images of Asherah"; ASV, NASB "their Asherim"; NCV "their Asherah idols." sn: Asherah was a leading deity of the Canaanite pantheon, wife/sister of El and goddess of fertility. She was commonly worshiped at shrines in or near groves of evergreen trees, or, failing that, at places marked by wooden poles. These were to be burned or cut down ( Deut 12:3; 16:21; Judg 6:25, 28, 30; 2 Kgs 18:4). ‡† tn: Heb "bow down." ‡‡ sn: In Exod 20:3 it was "gods." ‡‡† sn: Here, too, the emphasis on God's being a jealous God is repeated (see Exod 20:5). In the literal form of the sentence, this clause tells what might happen if the people made a covenant with the inhabitants of the land: "Take heed...lest you make a covenant...and then they prostitute themselves...and sacrifice...and invite...and you eat." It is important to read this in its context first, holding off on the connection to Paul’s discussion in 2 Corinthians. There is a delicate balance here in Exodus. On the one hand Moses’ shining face served to authenticate the message, but on the other hand Moses prevented the people from seeing more than they could handle. The subject matter in the OT, then, is how to authenticate the message. The section again can be subdivided into three points that develop the whole idea: I. The one who spends time with God reflects his glory (29-30). It will not always be as Moses; rather, the glory of the LORD

Robinson, “The Idea of Rest in the Old Testament and the Search for the Basic Character of Sabbath,” ZAW 92 (1980): 32-43. <sup>24</sup> sn: Kindling a fire receives special attention here because the people thought that kindling a fire was not work, but only a preparation for some kind of work. The Law makes sure that this too was not done. But see also G. Robinson, “The Prohibition of Strange Fire in Ancient Israel: A Look at the Case of Gathering Wood and Kindling Fire on the Sabbath,” VT 28 (1978): 301-17. <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb “dwelling places”; KJV, ASV “habitations.” <sup>26</sup> sn: The presence of these three verses in this place has raised all kinds of questions. It may be that after the renewal of the covenant the people needed a reminder to obey God, and obeying the sign of the covenant was the starting point. But there is more to it than this; it is part of the narrative design of the book. It is the artistic design that puts the filling of the Spirit section (31:1-11) prior to the Sabbath laws (31:12-18) before the idolatry section, and then after the renewal there is the Sabbath reminder (35:1-3) before the filling of the Spirit material (35:4-36:7). <sup>27</sup> sn: The book now turns to record how all the work of the sanctuary was done. This next unit picks up on the ideas in Exod 31:1-11. But it adds several features. The first part is the instruction of God for all people to give willingly (35:4-19); the next section tells how the faithful brought an offering for the service of the tabernacle (35:20-29); the next section tells how God set some apart with special gifts (35:30-35), and finally, the narrative reports how the faithful people of God enthusiastically began the work (36:1-7). <sup>28</sup> tn: Heb “from with you.” <sup>29</sup> tn: “Heart” is a genitive of specification, clarifying in what way they might be “willing.” The heart refers to their will, their choices. <sup>30</sup> tn: The verb has a suffix that is the direct object, but the suffixed object is qualified by the second accusative: “let him bring it, an offering.”

LORD:† gold, silver, bronze, 6 blue, purple, and scarlet yarn, fine linen, goat's hair, 7 ram skins dyed red, fine leather, †† acacia wood, 8 olive oil for the light, spices for the anointing oil and for the fragrant incense, 9 onyx stones, and other gems‡ for mounting‡† on the ephod and the breastpiece. 10 Every skilled person‡ among you is to come and make all that the LORD has commanded: 11 the tabernacle with‡† its tent, its covering, its clasps, its frames, its crossbars, its posts, and its bases; 12 the ark, with its poles, the atonement lid, and the special curtain that conceals it; 13 the table with its poles and all its vessels, and the Bread of the Presence; 14 the lampstand for‡† the light and its accessories, its lamps, and oil for the light; 15 and the altar of incense with its poles, the anointing oil, and the fragrant incense; the hanging for the door at the entrance of the tabernacle; 16 the altar for the burnt offering with its bronze grating that is on it, its poles, and all its utensils; the large basin and its pedestal; 17 the hangings of the courtyard, its posts and its bases, and the curtain for the gateway to the courtyard; 18 tent pegs for the tabernacle and tent pegs for the courtyard and their ropes; 19 the woven garments for serving in the holy place, the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments for his sons to minister as priests."

20 So the whole community of the Israelites went out from the presence of Moses. 21 Everyone‡ whose heart stirred him to action‡† and everyone whose spirit was willing‡† came and brought the offering for the LORD for the work of the tent of meeting, for all its service, and for the holy garments. ‡†† They came, men and women alike,‡† all who had willing hearts. They brought brooches, earrings, rings and ornaments, all kinds of gold jewelry, ‡† and everyone came who waved‡† a wave offering of gold to the LORD.

† tn: The phrase is literally "the offering of Yahweh"; it could be a simple possessive, "Yahweh's offering," but a genitive that indicates the indirect object is more appropriate. †† tn: See the note on this phrase in Exod 25:5. ‡ tn: Heb "and stones." ‡† tn: Heb "filling." ‡†† tn: Heb "wise of heart"; here also "heart" would be a genitive of specification, showing that there were those who could make skillful decisions. ‡††† tn: In Hebrew style all these items are typically connected with a vav ( ו )

‡††† tn: "for" has been supplied. § tn: Heb "man." §† tn: The verb means "lift up, bear, carry." Here the subject is "heart" or will, and so the expression describes one moved within to act. §†† tn: Heb "his spirit made him willing." The verb is used in Scripture for the freewill offering that people brought ( Lev 7 ). §† tn: Literally "the garments of holiness," the genitive is the attributive genitive, marking out what type of garments these were. §†† tn: The expression in Hebrew is "men on/after the women," meaning men with women, to ensure that it was clear that the preceding verse did not mean only men. B. Jacob takes it further, saying that the men came after the women because the latter had taken the initiative ( Exodus, 1017 ). §†† tn: Heb "all gold utensils." §††† tn: The verb could be translated "offered," but it is cognate with the following noun that is the wave offering. This sentence

23 Everyone who had‡†† blue, purple, or‡†† scarlet yarn, fine linen, goats' hair, ram skins dyed red, or fine leather‡†† brought them. 1824 Everyone making an offering of silver or bronze brought it as<sup>19</sup> an offering to the LORD, and everyone who had acacia wood<sup>20</sup> for any work of the service brought it. 2125 Every woman who was skilled<sup>22</sup> spun with her hands and brought what she had spun, blue, purple, or scarlet yarn, or fine linen, 26 and all the women whose heart stirred them to action and who were skilled<sup>23</sup> spun goats' hair.

27 The leaders brought onyx stones and other gems to be mounted<sup>24</sup> for the ephod and the breastpiece, 28 and spices and olive oil for the light, for the anointing oil, and for the fragrant incense.

29 The Israelites brought a freewill offering to the LORD, every man and woman whose heart was willing to bring materials for all the work that the LORD through<sup>25</sup> Moses had commanded them<sup>26</sup> to do.

30 Moses said to the Israelites, "See, the LORD has chosen<sup>27</sup> Bezalel son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah. 31 He has filled him with the Spirit of God – with skill, with understanding, with knowledge, and in all kinds of work, 32 to design artistic designs, to work in gold, in silver, and in bronze, 33 and in cutting stones for their setting, 28 and in cutting wood, to do work in every artistic craft. 2934 And he has put it in his heart<sup>30</sup> to teach, he and Oholiab son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan. 35 He has filled them with skill<sup>31</sup> to do all kinds of work<sup>32</sup> as craftsmen, as designers, as em-underscores the freewill nature of the offerings people made. The word "came" is supplied from v. 21 and v. 22. §†† tn: The text uses a relative clause with a resumptive pronoun for this: "who was found with him," meaning "with whom was found." §††† tn: The conjunction in this verse is translated "or" because the sentence does not intend to say that each person had all these things. They brought what they had. §†††† tn: See the note on this phrase in Exod 25:5. 18 tn: Here "them" has been supplied. 19 tn: This translation takes "offering" as an adverbial accusative explaining the form or purpose of their bringing things. It could also be rendered as the direct object, but that would seem to repeat without much difference what had just been said. 20 sn: U. Cassuto notes that the expression "with whom was found" does not rule out the idea that these folks went out and cut down acacia trees ( Exodus, 458 ). It is unlikely that they had much wood in their tents. 21 tn: Here "it" has been supplied. 22 tn: Heb "wisdom of heart," which means that they were skilled and could make all the right choices about the work. 23 tn: The text simply uses a prepositional phrase, "with/in wisdom." It seems to be qualifying "the women" as the relative clause is. 24 tn: Heb "and stones of the filling." 25 tn: Heb "by the hand of." 26 tn: Here "them" has been supplied. 27 tn: Heb "called by name" (so KJV, ASV, NASB, NRSV). This expression means that the person was specifically chosen for some important task ( S. R. Driver, Exodus, 342 ). See the expression with Cyrus in Isa 45:3-4. 28 tn: Heb "to set." 29 tn: Heb "in every work of thought," meaning, every work that required the implementation of design or plan. 30 sn: The expression means that God has given them the ability and the desire to teach others how to do the work. The infinitive construct "to teach" is related to the word Torah, "instruction, guide, law." They will be able to direct others in the work. 31 tn: The expression "wisdom of heart," or "wisdom in heart," means artistic skill. The decisions and plans they make are skilled. The expression forms a second accusative after the verb of filling. 32 tn: The expression "all the work" means "all kinds of work."

† tn: Here “They are” has been supplied. †† tn: Heb “doers of all work.” ‡ tn: Heb “designers of designs.” ††† tn: Heb “wise of [in] heart.” †††† tn: Heb “wisdom.” ††††† tn: Heb “understanding, discernment.” †††††† tn: The relative clause includes this infinitive clause that expresses either the purpose or the result of God’s giving wisdom and understanding to these folk. § tn: This noun is usually given an interpretive translation. B. Jacob renders the bound relationship as “the holy task” or “the sacred task” (Exodus, 1019). The NIV makes it “constructing,” so read “the work of constructing the sanctuary.” §† tn: The first word of the verse is a perfect tense with vav (ו)

‡†† tn: The verb אָבַד is change: “in whose heart Yahweh had put skill.” §††† tn: Or “whose heart was willing.” §† sn: The verb means more than “approach” or “draw near”; קָרַב

§† tn: In the Hebrew text the infinitive “to do it” comes after “sanctuary”; it makes a smoother rendering in English to move it forward, rather than reading “brought for the work.” §§†† tn: Heb “in the morning, in the morning.” §§§†† tn: Heb “a man, a man from his work”; or “each one from his work.” §§§§†† tn: The construction uses the verbal hendiadys: מְרַבֵּים לְקַבֵּי

18 tn: Heb “for the service” (so KJV, ASV). 19 tn: The last clause is merely the infinitive with an object – “to do it.” It clearly means the skilled workers are to do it. 20 tn: The verse simply reads, “and Moses commanded and they caused [a voice] to cross over in the camp.” The second preterite with the vav may be subordinated to the first clause, giving the intent (purpose or result). 21 tn: Heb “voice.” 22 tn: The verse ends with the infinitive serving as the object of the preposition: “from bringing.” 23 tn: This part of the sentence comes from the final verb, the Hiphil infinitive – leave over, meaning, have more than enough (see BDB 451 s.v. 24 יָתַר tn: Heb

The Building of the Tabernacle

<sup>8</sup> All the skilled among those who were doing the work made the tabernacle with ten curtains of fine twisted linen and blue and purple and scarlet; they were made with cherubim that were the work of an artistic designer.<sup>9</sup> The length of one curtain was forty-two feet, and the width of one curtain was six feet – the same size for each of the curtains.<sup>10</sup> He joined<sup>25</sup> five of the curtains to one another, and the other<sup>26</sup> five curtains he joined to one another.<sup>11</sup> He made loops of blue material along the edge of the end curtain in the first set; he did the same along the edge of the end curtain in the second set.<sup>12</sup> He made fifty loops on the first curtain, and he made fifty loops on the end curtain that was in the second set, with the loops opposite one another.<sup>13</sup> He made fifty gold clasps and joined the curtains together to one another with the clasps, so that the tabernacle was a unit.<sup>27</sup>

<sup>14</sup> He made curtains of goats’ hair for a tent over the tabernacle; he made eleven curtains.<sup>2815</sup> The length of one curtain was forty-five feet, and the width of one curtain was six feet – one size for all eleven curtains.<sup>16</sup> He joined five curtains by themselves and six curtains by themselves.<sup>17</sup> He made fifty loops along the edge of the end curtain in the first set and fifty loops along the edge of the curtain that joined the second set.<sup>18</sup> He made fifty bronze clasps to join the tent together so that it might be a unit.<sup>2919</sup> He made a covering for the tent out of ram skins dyed red and over that a covering of fine leather.<sup>30</sup>

“for all the work, to do it.” sn: This lengthy section (35:1-36:7) forms one of the most remarkable sections in the book. Here there is a mixture of God’s preparation of people to do the work and their willingness to give and to serve. It not only provides insight into this renewed community of believers, but it also provides a timeless message for the church. The point is clear enough: In response to God’s commission, and inspired by God’s Spirit, the faithful and willing people rally to support and participate in the LORD 25 tn: The verb is singular since it probably is referring to Bezalel, but since he would not do all the work himself, it may be that the verbs could be given a plural subject: “they joined.” 26 tn: The words “the other” have been supplied. 27 tn: Heb “one.” 28 tn: Heb “eleven curtains he made them.” 29 tn: The construction uses the infinitive construct from the verb “to be” to express this purpose clause: “to be one,” or, “so that it might be a unit.” 30 tn: See the note on this phrase in Exod 25:5. 31 tn: There is debate whether the word הִקְבִּיִּים

the tabernacle in this way.<sup>23</sup> So he made frames for the tabernacle : twenty frames for the south side.<sup>24</sup> He made forty silver bases under the twenty frames – two bases under the first frame for its two projections, and likewise† two bases under the next frame for its two projections,<sup>25</sup> and for the second side of the tabernacle, the north side, he made twenty frames<sup>26</sup> and their forty silver bases, two bases under the first frame and two bases under the next†† frame.<sup>27</sup> And for the back of the tabernacle on the west he made six frames.<sup>28</sup> He made two frames for the corners of the tabernacle on the back.<sup>29</sup> At the two corners‡ they were doubled at the lower end and†† finished together at the top in one ring. So he did for both.<sup>30</sup> So there were eight frames and their silver bases, sixteen bases, two bases under each frame.

<sup>37</sup> He made a hanging for the entrance of the tent of blue, purple, and scarlet yarn and fine twisted linen, the work of an embroiderer,<sup>38</sup> and its five posts and their hooks. He overlaid their tops§ and their bands with gold, but their five bases were bronze. §†

35 tn: Heb “the one.” 36 tn: Heb “two hands to the one frame.” 37 tn: Heb “joined one to one.” † tn: The clause is repeated to show the distributive sense; it literally says, “and two bases under the one frame for its two projections.” †† tn: Heb “under the one frame” again. ‡ tn: This is the last phrase of the verse, moved forward for clarity. ‡† tn: This difficult verse uses the perfect tense at the beginning, and the second clause parallels it with וְהָיוּ!

‡‡ tn: Literally “houses”; i.e., places to hold the bars. ††† tn: The verb is simply “he made” but as in Exod 26:31 it probably means that the cherubim were worked into the curtain with the yarn, and so embroidered on the curtain. ††† tn: Heb “and their hooks gold.” § tn: The word is “their heads”; technically it would be “their capitals” (so ASV, NAB, NRSV). The bands were bands of metal surrounding these capitals just beneath them. These are not mentioned in Exod 26:37, and it sounds like the posts are to be covered with gold. But the gradation of metals is what is intended: the posts at the entrance to the Most Holy Place are all of gold; the posts at the entrance to the tent are overlaid with gold at the top; and the posts at the entrance to the courtyard are overlaid with silver at the top (S. R. Driver, Exodus, 387, citing Dillmann without reference). §† sn: For a good summary of the differences between

<sup>6</sup> He made§† an atonement lid of pure gold; its length was three feet nine inches, and its width was two feet three inches.<sup>7</sup> He made two cherubim of gold; he made them of hammered metal on the two ends of the atonement lid,<sup>8</sup> one cherub on one end§† and one cherub on the other end. §§† He made the cherubim from the atonement lid on its two ends.<sup>9</sup> The cherubim were spreading their wings§§‡ upward, overshadowing the atonement lid with their wings. The cherubim§§§ faced each other,<sup>18</sup> looking toward the atonement lid.<sup>19</sup>

The Making of the Table

<sup>10</sup> He made the table of acacia wood; its length was three feet, its width one foot six inches, and its height two feet three inches.<sup>11</sup> He overlaid it with pure gold, and he made a surrounding border of gold for it.<sup>12</sup> He made a surrounding frame for it about three inches wide, and he made a surrounding border of gold for its frame.<sup>13</sup> He cast four gold rings for it and attached the rings at the four corners where its four legs were.<sup>14</sup> The rings were close to the frame to provide places for the poles to carry the table.<sup>15</sup> He made the poles of acacia wood and overlaid them with gold, to carry the table.<sup>16</sup> He made the vessels which were on the table out of pure gold, its<sup>20</sup> plates, its ladles, its pitchers, and its bowls, to be used in pouring out offerings.

The Making of the Lampstand

<sup>17</sup> He made the lampstand of pure gold. He made the lampstand of hammered metal; its base and its shaft, its cups, its buds, and its blossoms were from the same piece.<sup>21</sup><sup>18</sup> Six branches were extending from its sides, three branches of the lampstand from one the instruction section and the completion section, and the reasons for the changes and the omissions, see B. Jacob, Exodus, 1022-23. §†† tn: Or “molding.” §‡ tn: “that he put” has been supplied. §†† tn: This is taken as a circumstantial clause; the clause begins with the conjunction vav. §† tn: Heb “and he made.” §‡ tn: Heb “from/at [the] end, from this.” §§† tn: The repetition of the expression indicates it has the distributive sense. §§‡ tn: The construction is a participle in construct followed by the genitive “wings” – “spreaders of wings.” §§§ tn: “The cherubim” has been placed here instead of in the second clause to produce a smoother translation. 18 tn: Heb “and their faces a man to his brother.” 19 tn: Heb “to the atonement lid were the faces of the cherubim.” 20 tn: The suffixes on these could also indicate the indirect object (see Exod 25:29). 21 tn: Heb “from it”; the referent (“the same piece” of wrought metal) has been specified in the translation for clarity.

The Making of the Altar of Incense

38 He made the altar for the burnt offering of acacia wood seven feet six inches long and seven feet six inches wide – it was square – and its height was four feet six inches. <sup>2</sup> He made its horns on its four corners; its horns were part of it,§† and he overlaid it with bronze. <sup>3</sup> He made all the utensils of the altar – the pots, the shovels, the tossing bowls, the meat hooks, and the fire pans – he made all its utensils of bronze. <sup>4</sup> He made a grating for the altar, a network of bronze under its ledge, halfway up from the bottom. <sup>5</sup> He cast four rings for the four corners of the bronze grating, to provide places for the poles. <sup>6</sup> He made the poles of acacia wood and overlaid them with bronze. <sup>7</sup> He put the poles into the rings on the sides of the altar, with which to carry it. He made the altar§† hollow, out of boards.

 †† tn: Heb “thus for six branches....” † tn: As in Exod 26:35, the translation of “first” and “next” and “third” is interpretive, because the text simply says “under two branches” in each of three places. †† tn: Heb “were from it.” ††† tn: Heb “it”; the referent (the lampstand) has been specified in the translation for clarity. †††† tn: Heb “from it were its horns,” meaning that they were made from the same piece. †††† tn: Heb “roof.” § tn: Heb “its walls around.” §† tn: Heb “and he made for it border gold around.” §†† tn: Heb “and he made.” §† sn: Since it was a small altar, it needed only two rings, one on either side, in order to be carried. The second mention of their location clarifies that they should be on the sides, the right and the left, as one approached the altar. §†† tn: Heb “for houses.” §†† tn: Heb “its horns were from it,” meaning from the same piece.

The Construction of the Courtyard

§† tn: Heb “it”; the referent (the altar) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §§† sn: The word for “serve” is not the ordinary one. It means “to serve in a host,” especially in a war. It appears that women were organized into bands and served at the tent of meeting. S. R. Driver thinks that this meant “no doubt” washing, cleaning, or repairing (Exodus, 391). But there is no hint of that (see 1 Sam 2:22; and see Ps 68:11 [12 Hebrew text]). They seem to have had more to do than what Driver said. §§† tn: Heb “south side southward.” §§§ tn: While this verse could be translated as an independent sentence, it is probably to be subordinated as a circumstantial clause in line with Exod 27:10-12, as well as v. 12 of this passage. 18 tn: Here the phrase “the hangings were” has been supplied. 19 tn: The phrase “there were” has been supplied. 20 tn: The text simply has “their posts ten and their bases ten”; this may be added here as a circumstantial clause with the main sentence in order to make sense out of the construction. 21 tn: The text simply says “seventy-five feet.” 22 tn: The word literally means “shoulder.” The next words, “of the gate,” have been supplied here. The east end contained the courtyard’s entry with a wall of curtains on each side of the entry (see v. 15). 23 tn: Heb “from this and from this” (cf. 17:12; 25:19; 26:13; 32:15; Josh 8:22, 33; 1 Kgs 10:19-20; Ezek 45:7). 24 tn: Heb “they were banded with silver.” 25 tn: This word is different from the word for hangings; it has more of the idea of a screen, shielding or securing the area.

The Materials of the Construction

†† tn: The same verb is used here, but now in the Pual perfect tense, third masculine singular. A translation “was numbered” or “was counted” works. The verb is singular because it refers to the tabernacle as a unit. This section will list what made up the tabernacle. ‡ tn: Heb “at/by the mouth of.” ‡† tn: The noun is “work” or “service.” S. R. Driver explains that the reckonings were not made for the Levites, but that they were the work of the Levites, done by them under the direction of Ithamar ( Exodus, 393). ‡‡ tn: Heb “by the hand of.” ‡‡† tn: These words form the casus pendens, or independent nominative absolute, followed by the apodosis beginning with the vav ( ו ). ‡‡‡ tn: Heb “and it was.” § sn: There were 3000 shekels in a talent, and so the total weight here in shekels would be 87,730 shekels of gold. If the sanctuary shekel was 224 grs., then this was about 40,940 oz. troy. This is estimated to be a little over a ton (cf. NCV “over 2,000 pounds”; TEV “a thousand kilogrammes”; CEV “two thousand two hundred nine pounds”; NLT “about 2,200 pounds”), although other widely diverging estimates are also given. §† sn: This would be a total of 301,775 shekels (about 140,828 oz), being a half shekel exacted per person from 605,550 male Israelites 20 years old or more ( Num 1:46). The amount is estimated to be around 3.75 tons. §†† sn: The weight would be about half an ounce. §‡ tn: Heb “upward.” §‡† tn: The phrase “in all” has been supplied.

the remaining 1,775 shekels§† he made hooks for the posts, overlaid their tops, and made bands for them.

39 From the blue, purple, and scarlet yarn they made woven garments for serving in the sanctuary; they made holy garments that were for Aaron, just as the LORD had commanded Moses.§§†

The Ephod

The Breastpiece of Decision

<sup>8</sup> He made the breastpiece, the work of an artistic designer, in the same fashion as the ephod, of gold, blue, purple, and scarlet, and fine twisted linen.<sup>9</sup> It was square – they made the breastpiece doubled, nine inches long and nine inches wide when doubled.<sup>10</sup> They set on it<sup>22</sup> four rows of stones : a row with a ruby, a topaz, and a beryl – the first row,<sup>11</sup> and the second row, a turquoise, a sapphire, and an emerald;<sup>12</sup> and the third row, a jacinth, an agate, and an amethyst;<sup>13</sup> and the fourth row, a chrysolite, an onyx, and a jasper.

§† tn: Here the word “shekels” is understood; about 45 pounds. §‡ sn: The total shekels would have been 212,400 shekels, which would be about 108,749 oz. This would make about 2.5 to 3 tons. §§† sn: The bronze altar is the altar for the burnt offering; the large bronze basin is not included here in the list. §§‡ sn: This chapter also will be almost identical to the instructions given earlier, with a few changes along the way. §§§ tn: The verb is the infinitive that means “to do, to work.” It could be given a literal rendering: “to work [them into] the blue....” Weaving or embroidering is probably what is intended. 18 tn: Heb “from it” or the same. 19 tn: Or “as seals are engraved.” 20 sn: The twelve names were those of Israel’s sons. The idea was not the remembrance of the twelve sons as such, but the twelve tribes that bore their names. 21 tn: Or “attached.” 22 tn: That is, they set in mountings.

They were enclosed in gold filigree settings.<sup>14</sup> The stones were for the names of the sons of Israel, twelve, corresponding to the number of† their names. Each name corresponding to one of the twelve tribes was like the engravings of a seal.

<sup>15</sup> They made for the breastpiece braided chains like cords of pure gold,<sup>16</sup> and they made two gold filigree settings and two gold rings, and they attached the two rings to the upper†† two ends of the breastpiece.<sup>17</sup> They attached the two gold chains to the two rings at the ends of the breastpiece;<sup>18</sup> the other‡ two ends of the two chains they attached to the two settings, and they attached them to the shoulder pieces of the ephod at the front of it.<sup>19</sup> They made two rings of gold and put them on the other†† two ends of the breastpiece on its edge, which is on the inner side of the ephod.‡‡‡ They made two more‡‡‡ gold rings and attached them to the bottom of the two shoulder pieces on the front of the ephod, close to the juncture above the waistband of the ephod.<sup>21</sup> They tied the breastpiece by its rings to the rings of the ephod by blue cord, so that it was above the waistband of the ephod, so that the breastpiece would not be loose from the ephod, just as the LORD had commanded Moses.

The Other Garments

<sup>27</sup> They made tunics of fine linen – the work of a weaver, for Aaron and for his sons –<sup>28</sup> and the turban of fine linen, the headbands of fine linen, and the undergarments of fine twisted linen.<sup>29</sup> The sash was of fine twisted linen and blue, purple, and scarlet yarn, the work of an embroiderer, just as the LORD had commanded Moses.<sup>30</sup> They made a plate, the holy diadem, of pure gold and wrote on it an inscription, as on the engravings of a seal, “Holiness to the LORD.”<sup>31</sup>

† tn: The phrase “the number of” has been supplied. †† tn: Here “upper” has been supplied. ‡ tn: Here “other” has been supplied. ‡† tn: Here “other” has been supplied. ‡‡ tn: Heb “homeward side.” ‡‡† tn: Here “more” has been supplied. ‡‡‡ tn: The word is simply “twined” or “twisted.” It may refer to the twisted linen that so frequently is found in these lists; or, it may refer to the yarn twisted. The LXX reads “fine twined linen.” This is not found in the text of Exod 28:33, except in Smr and LXX. § tn: The words “there was” are supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons. §† tn: The infinitive “to minister” is present; “to be used” is supplied from the context.

They attached to it a blue cord, to attach it to the turban above, just as the LORD had commanded Moses.

Moses Inspects the Sanctuary§††

<sup>32</sup> So all the work of the tabernacle, the tent of meeting, was completed, and the Israelites did according to all that the LORD had commanded Moses – they did it exactly so.<sup>33</sup> They brought the tabernacle to Moses, the tent and all its furnishings, clasps, frames, bars, posts, and bases;<sup>34</sup> and the coverings of ram skins dyed red, the covering of fine leather,§† and the protecting§†† curtain;<sup>35</sup> the ark of the testimony and its poles, and the atonement lid;<sup>36</sup> the table, all its utensils, and the Bread of the Presence;<sup>37</sup> the pure§† lampstand, its lamps, with the lamps set in order, and all its accessories, and oil for the light;<sup>38</sup> and the gold altar, and the anointing oil, and the fragrant incense; and the curtain for the entrance to the tent;<sup>39</sup> the bronze altar and its bronze grating, its poles, and all its utensils; the large basin with its pedestal;<sup>40</sup> the hangings of the courtyard, its posts and its bases, and the curtain for the gateway of the courtyard, its ropes and its tent pegs, and all the furnishings§† for the service of the tabernacle, for the tent of meeting;<sup>41</sup> the woven garments for serving§§† in the sanctuary, the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments for his sons to minister as priests.

40 Then the LORD spoke to Moses:<sup>192</sup> “On the first day of the first month you are to set up<sup>20</sup> the tabernacle, the tent of meeting.<sup>3</sup> You are to place the ark of the testimony in it and shield the ark with the special curtain.<sup>4</sup> You are to bring in the table and set

§†† sn: The last sections of the book bring several themes together to a full conclusion. Not only is it the completion of the tabernacle, it is the fulfillment of God’s plan revealed at the beginning of the book, i.e., to reside with his people. §† tn: See the note on this phrase in Exod 25:5. §†† tn: Or “shielding” (NIV); NASB “the screening veil.” §† tn: Possibly meaning “pure gold lampstand.” §‡ tn: Heb “utensils, vessels.” §§† tn: The form is the infinitive construct; it means the clothes to be used “to minister” in the holy place. §§‡ tn: Or “examined” (NASB, TEV); NCV “looked closely at.” §§§ tn: The deictic particle draws attention to what he saw in such a way as to give the reader Moses’ point of view and a sense of his pleasure: “and behold, they...”<sup>18</sup> sn: The situation and wording in Exod 39:43 are reminiscent of Gen 1:28 and 31, with the motifs of blessing people and inspecting what has been made.<sup>19</sup> sn: All of Exod 39:32-40:38 could be taken as a unit. The first section (39:32-43) shows that the Israelites had carefully and accurately completed the preparation and brought everything they had made to Moses: The work of the LORD

out the things that belong on it;† then you are to bring in the lampstand and set up its lamps.<sup>5</sup> You are to put†† the gold altar for incense in front of the ark of the testimony and put the curtain at the entrance to the tabernacle.<sup>6</sup> You are to put the altar for the burnt offering in front of the entrance to the tabernacle, the tent of meeting.<sup>7</sup> You are to put the large basin between the tent of meeting and the altar and put water in it.<sup>8</sup> You are to set up the courtyard around it and put the curtain at the gate of the courtyard.<sup>9</sup> And take‡ the anointing oil, and anoint‡‡ the tabernacle and all that is in it, and sanctify‡‡‡ it and all its furnishings, and it will be holy.<sup>10</sup> Then you are to anoint the altar for the burnt offering with‡‡‡ all its utensils; you are to sanctify the altar, and it will be the most holy altar.<sup>11</sup> You must also anoint the large basin and its pedestal, and you are to sanctify it.§

<sup>17</sup> So the tabernacle was set up on the first day of the first month, in the second year.<sup>18</sup> When Moses set up the tabernacle and put its bases in place, he set up its frames, attached its bars, and set up its posts.<sup>19</sup> Then he spread the tent over the tabernacle and put the covering of the tent over it, as the LORD had commanded Moses.<sup>20</sup> He took the testimony and put it in the ark, attached the poles to the ark, and then put the atonement lid on the ark.<sup>21</sup> And he brought the ark into the tabernacle, hung§† the protecting curtain, §†† and shielded the ark of the testimony from view, just as the LORD had commanded Moses.

† tn: Heb "you will raise," an imperfect of instruction. †† tn: Heb "and you will set in order its setting" or "arrange its arrangement." See 25:29-30 for items that belonged on the table. ‡ tn: Heb "give" (also four additional times in vv. 6-8). ‡† tn: Heb "there." ‡‡ tn: Heb "you will take" (perfect with vav, ı). ‡‡† tn: Heb "and you will anoint" (perfect with vav, ı). ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "and you will sanctify" (perfect with vav, ı). § tn: Heb "and." §† sn: U. Cassuto (Exodus, 480) notes that the items inside the tent did not need to be enumerated since they were already holy, but items in the courtyard needed special attention. People needed to know that items outside the tent were just as holy. §†† tn: The verb is "bring near," or "present," to Yahweh. §† tn: The verb is also "bring near" or "present." §†† tn: Heb "set up," if it includes more than the curtain.

<sup>28</sup> Then he put the curtain at the entrance to the tabernacle.<sup>29</sup> He also put the altar for the burnt offering by the entrance to the tabernacle, the tent of meeting, and offered on it the burnt offering and the meal offering, just as the LORD had commanded Moses.

<sup>34</sup> Then the cloud covered the tent of meeting, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle.<sup>35</sup> Moses was not able to enter the tent of meeting because the cloud settled on it and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle.<sup>36</sup> But when the cloud was lifted up<sup>18</sup> from the tabernacle, the Israelites would set out<sup>19</sup> on all their journeys;<sup>37</sup> but if the cloud was not lifted up, then they would not journey further until the day it was lifted up.<sup>20,38</sup> For the cloud of the LORD was on the tabernacle by day, but fire would be<sup>21</sup> on it at night, in plain view<sup>22</sup> of all the house of Israel, throughout all their journeys.<sup>23</sup>

First, the MT has “And you shall bring the grain offering,” but the LXX and Qumran have “he” rather than “you” (J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:185). Second, the MT has “which shall be made” (i.e., the 3rd person masculine Niphal passive verb which, in fact, does not agree with its feminine subject, מִנְחָה

Additional Grain Offering Regulations

<sup>11</sup> “No grain offering which you present to the LORD can be made with yeast, ‡ for you must not offer up in smoke any yeast or honey as a gift to the LORD. ‡†† You can present them to the LORD as an offering of first fruit, ‡‡ but they must not go up to the altar for a soothing aroma. <sup>13</sup> Moreover, you must season every one of your grain offerings with salt; you must not allow the salt of the covenant of your God to be missing from your grain offering‡‡ – on every one of your grain offerings you must present salt.

<sup>14</sup> “If you present a grain offering of first ripe grain to the LORD, you must present your grain offering of first ripe grain as soft kernels roasted in fire – crushed bits of fresh grain. <sup>§15</sup> And you must put olive oil on it and set frankincense on it – it is a grain offering. <sup>16</sup> Then the priest must offer its memorial portion up in smoke – some of its crushed bits, some of its olive oil, in addition to all of its frankincense – it is §† a gift to the LORD.

tn: The words "against one who fails to testify" are not in the Hebrew text, but have been supplied to make sense of the remark about the "curse" ("imprecation" or "oath"; cf. ASV "adjuration"; NIV "public charge") for the modern reader. For the interpretation of this verse reflected in the present translation see J. Milgrom, Leviticus (AB), 1:292-97. 20 tn: The words "what had happened" are not in the Hebrew text, but are implied. 21 tn: Heb "and hears a voice of curse, and he is a witness or he saw or he knew, if he does not declare." 22 tn: Heb "and he shall bear his iniquity." The rendering "bear the punishment (for the iniquity)" reflects the use of the word "iniquity" to refer to the punishment for iniquity (cf. NRSV, NLT "subject to punishment"). It is sometimes referred to as the consequential use of the term (cf. Lev 5:17; 7:18; 10:17; etc.). 23 tc: The insertion of the words "when there is" is a reflection of the few Hebrew MSS

ly" has been supplied in the translation to clarify that the uncleanness involved is ritual or ceremonial in nature. 25 tn: Heb "and it is hidden from him," meaning that the person who contracted the ceremonial uncleanness was not aware at the time what had happened, but later found out that he had become ceremonially unclean. This same phrase occurs again in both vv. 3 and 4. 26 sn: Lev 5:2-3 are parallel laws of uncleanness (contracted from animals and people, respectively), and both seem to assume that the contraction of uncleanness was originally unknown to the person (vv. 2 and 3) but became known to him or her at a later time (v. 3; i.e., "has come to know" in v. 3 is to be assumed for v. 2 as well). Uncleanness itself did not make a person "guilty" unless he or she failed to handle it according to the normal purification regulations (see, e.g., "wash his clothes and bathe with water, and he will be unclean till evening," Lev 15:5 NIV; cf. Lev 11:39-40; 15:5-12, 16-24; Num 19, etc.). The problem here in Lev 5:2-3 is that, because the person had not been aware of his or her uncleanness, he or she had incurred guilt for not carrying out these regular procedures, and it would now be too late for that. Thus, the unclean person needs to bring a with regard to anything by which he can become unclean, † even if he did not realize it, but he himself has later come to know it and is guilty; 4 or when a person swears an oath, speaking thoughtlessly†† with his lips, whether to do evil or to do good, with regard to anything which the individual might speak thoughtlessly in an oath, even if he did not realize it, but he himself has later come to know it and is guilty with regard to one of these oaths ‡ – 5 when an individual becomes guilty with regard to one of these things‡‡ he must confess how he has sinned, ‡‡‡ and he must bring his penalty for guilt‡‡‡ to the LORD for his sin that he has committed, a female from the flock, whether a female sheep or a female goat, for a sin offering. So the priest will make atonement‡‡‡ on his behalf for‡ his sin.

7 " If he cannot afford an animal from the flock, ‡‡ he must bring his penalty for guilt for his sin that he has committed, ‡‡‡ two turtledoves or two young pigeons, ‡‡ to the LORD , one for a sin offering and one for a burnt offering. 8 He must bring them to the priest and present first the one that is for a sin offering. NAB "rashly utters an oath." ‡ tn: Heb "and is guilty to one from these," probably referring here to any of "these" things about which one might swear a thoughtless oath (J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 45), with the word "oath" supplied in the translation for clarity. Another possibility is that "to one from these" is a dittography from v. 5 (cf. the note on v. 5a), and that v. 4 ends with "and is guilty" like vv. 2 and 3 (J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:300). ‡‡ tn: Heb "and it shall happen when he becomes guilty to one from these," referring to any of "these" possible transgressions in Lev 5:1-4. Tg. Onq., the original Greek translation, and the Latin Vulgate omit this clause, possibly due to homoioteleuton because of the repetition of "to one from these" from the end of v. 4 in v. 5a (cf. the note on v. 4b). sn: What all the transgressions in Lev 5:1-4 have in common is that the time is past for handling the original situation properly (i.e., testifying in court, following purity regulations, or fulfilling an oath), so now the person has become guilty and needs to follow corrective sacrificial procedures. ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "which he sinned on it"; cf. The translation offered here suggests that, instead of a ram, the guilt offering could be presented in the form of money (see, e.g., NRSV; J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:326-27). Others still maintain the view that it refers to the value of the ram that was offered (see, e.g., NIV "of the proper value in silver, according to the sanctuary shekel"; also NAB, NLT; J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 72-73, 81). sn: The sanctuary shekel was about 10 grams (= ca. two fifths of an ounce; J. E. Shepherd, NIDOTTE 4:237-38). ‡‡† tn: The word for "guilt offering" (sometimes translated "reparation offering") is the same as "guilt" earlier in the verse (rendered there "[penalty for] guilt"). One can tell which is intended only by the context. sn: The primary purpose of the guilt offering was to "atone" (see the note on Lev 1:4 above) for "trespassing" on the LORD

Unknown trespass

17 " If a person sins and violates any of the Lord's commandments which must not be violated‡‡ (although he did not know it at the time,‡‡† but later realizes he is guilty ), then he will bear his punishment for iniquity‡†18 and must bring a flawless ram from the flock, convertible into silver shekels, ‡‡ for a guilt offering to the priest. So the priest will make atonement‡‡† on his behalf for his error which he committed‡‡† (although he himself had not known it) and he will be forgiven. ‡‡‡19 It is a guilt offering; he was surely guilty before the LORD."

6 18 Then the LORD spoke to Moses: 192 " When a person sins and commits a trespass20 against the LORD by deceiving his fellow citizen21 in regard to something held in trust, or a pledge, or something stolen, or by extorting something from his fellow citizen, 223 or has found something lost and denies it and swears falsely23 concerning any one of the things that someone might do to sin24 – 4 when it happens that he sins and he is found guilty, 25 then he must return

This portion of v. 17 is especially difficult. The translation offered here suggests (as in many other English versions) that the offender did not originally know that he had violated the LORD

"then" introducing the next clause as the apodosis). In this case, "becomes guilty" (cf. NASB, NIV) probably refers to his legal status as one who has been convicted of a crime in court; thus the translation "he is found guilty." See R. E. Averbek, NIDOTTE 1:559-61.

Sacrificial Instructions for the Priests: The Burnt Offering

It must be eaten unleavened in a holy place; they are to eat it in the courtyard of the Meeting Tent.<sup>17</sup> It must not be baked with yeast.<sup>24</sup> I have given it as their portion from my gifts. It is most holy,<sup>25</sup> like the sin offering and the guilt offering.<sup>18</sup> Every male among the sons of Aaron may eat it. It is a perpetual allotted portion<sup>26</sup> throughout your generations<sup>27</sup> from the gifts of the LORD. Anyone who touches these gifts<sup>28</sup> must be holy."<sup>29</sup>

The verb is a Hiphil infinitive absolute, which is used here in place of the finite verb as either a jussive (GKC 346 §113. cc, "let the sons of Aaron offer") or more likely an injunctive in light of the verbs that follow (Joüon 2:430 §123. v, "the sons of Aaron shall/must offer"). <sup>19</sup> tn: Heb "and he"; the referent has been specified in the translation for clarity. The "he" refers to the officiating priest. A similar shift between singular and plural occurs in Lev 1:7-9, but see the note on Lev 1:7 and J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 89 for the possibility of textual corruption. <sup>20</sup> tn: Heb "shall take up from it with his hand some of the choice wheat flour of the grain offering." <sup>21</sup> sn: See the note on Lev 2:2. <sup>22</sup> tc: Smr reading, which includes the locative n

The noun "leaven" is traditional in English versions (cf. KJV, ASV, NASB, NRSV), but "yeast" is more commonly used today. <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb "holiness of holinesses [or holy of holies] it is"; cf. NAB "most sacred." <sup>26</sup> tn: Or "a perpetual regulation"; cf. NASB "a permanent ordinance"; NRSV "as their perpetual due." <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb "for your generations"; cf. In this context "them" must refer to the "gifts" of the LORD <sup>29</sup> tn: Or "anyone/anything that touches them shall become holy" (J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:443-56). The question is whether this refers to the contagious nature of holy objects (cf. NAB, NASB, NIV, NRSV, NLT) or whether it simply sets forth a demand that anyone who touches the holy gifts of the LORD

It is a perpetual statute; it must be offered up in smoke as a whole offering to the LORD. <sup>23</sup> Every grain offering of a priest must be a whole offering; it must not be eaten."

The Sin Offering

<sup>24</sup> Then the LORD spoke to Moses: <sup>‡‡25</sup> " Tell Aaron and his sons, 'This is the law of the sin offering. In the place where the burnt offering is slaughtered the sin offering must be slaughtered before the LORD . It is most holy. <sup>‡‡26</sup> The priest who offers it for sin is to eat it. This could also be supported from the verbs in the following verse, and it requires only a repointing of the Hebrew text with no change in consonants. See the remarks in J. E. <sup>37</sup> This is the law‡‡‡ for the burnt offering, the grain offering, § the sin offering, the guilt offering, the ordination offering,§† and the peace offering sacrifice, <sup>38</sup> which the LORD commanded Moses on Mount Sinai on the day he commanded the Israelites to present their offerings to the LORD in the wilderness of Sinai.

Clothing Aaron

Anointing the Tabernacle and Aaron, and Clothing Aaron's Sons

<sup>10</sup> Then Moses took the anointing oil and anointed the tabernacle and everything in it, and so consecrated them. <sup>11</sup> Next he sprinkled some of it on the altar seven times and so anointed the altar, all its vessels, and the wash basin and its stand to consecrate them. <sup>12</sup> He then poured some of the anointing oil on the head of Aaron and anointed him to consecrate him. <sup>13</sup> Moses also brought forward Aaron's sons, clothed them with tunics, wrapped sashes around them,† and wrapped headbands on them‡ just as the LORD had commanded Moses.

Consecration Offerings

† sn: The expression "and consecrated it" refers to the effect of the anointing earlier in the verse (cf. "to consecrate them/him" in vv. 11 and 12). "To consecrate" means "to make holy" or "make sacred"; i.e., put something into the category of holy/sacred as opposed to common/profane (see Lev 10:10 below). Thus, the person or thing consecrated is put into the realm of God's holy things. †† tc: The MT has here "sash" (singular), but the context is clearly plural and Smr has it in the plural. tn: Heb "girded them with sashes" (so NAB, NASB); NRSV "fastened sashes around them." ‡ tn: Heb "wrapped headaddresses to them"; cf. KJV "bonnets"; NASB, TEV "caps"; NIV, NCV "headbands"; NAB, NLT "turbans." sn: Notice that the priestly garments of Aaron's sons are quite limited compared to those of Aaron himself, the high priest (cf. vv. 7-9 above). The terms for "tunic" and "sash" are the same but not the headgear (cf. Exod 28:40; 29:8-9; 39:27-29). †† sn: See Lev 4:3-12 above for the sin offering of the priests. In this case, however, the blood manipulation is different because Moses, not Aaron (and his sons), is functioning as the priest. On the one hand, Aaron and his sons are, in a sense, treated as if they were commoners so that the blood manipulation took place at the burnt offering altar in the court of the tabernacle (see v. 15 below), not at the incense altar inside the tabernacle tent itself (contrast Lev 4:5-7 and compare 4:30). On the other hand, since it was a sin offering for the priests, therefore, the priests themselves could not eat its flesh ( Lev 4:11-12; 6:30 [23 HT]), which was the normal priestly practice for sin offerings of commoners ( Lev 6:26[19], 29[22]). ‡‡ sn: Contrary to some English versions (e.g., NAB, NASB, NIV, NLT), Aaron ( not Moses) most likely slaughtered the bull, possibly with the help of his sons, although the verb is singular, not plural. Moses then performed the ritual procedures that involved direct contact with the altar. Compare the pattern in Lev 1:5-9, where the offerer does the slaughtering and the priests perform the procedures that involve direct contact with the altar. In Lev 8 Moses is functioning as the priest in order to consecrate the priesthood. The explicit reintroduction of the name of Moses as the subject of the next verb seems to reinforce this understanding of the passage (cf. also vv. 19 and 23 below). ‡‡‡ tn: The verb is the Piel of נָדַד

<sup>30</sup> Then Moses took some of the anointing oil and some of the blood which was on the altar and sprinkled it on Aaron and his garments, and on his sons and his sons' garments with him. So he consecrated Aaron, his garments, and his sons and his sons' garments with him. <sup>31</sup> Then Moses said to Aaron and his sons, "Boil the meat at the entrance of the Meeting Tent, and there you are to eat it and the bread which is in the ordination offering basket, just as I have commanded, †† saying, 'Aaron and his sons are to eat it,' <sup>32</sup> but the remainder of the meat and the bread‡‡ you must burn with fire. <sup>33</sup> And you must not go out from the entrance of the Meeting Tent for seven days, until the day when your days of ordination are completed, because you must be ordained over a seven-day period. <sup>†††34</sup> What has been done‡‡‡ on this day the LORD has commanded to be done§ to make atonement for you. <sup>35</sup> You must reside at the entrance of the Meeting Tent day and night for seven days and keep the charge of the LORD so that you will not die, for this is what I have been commanded." <sup>36</sup> So Aaron and his sons did all the things the LORD had commanded through§† Moses.

† tn: Heb "and he waved." The subject of the verb "he waved" is Aaron, but Aaron's sons also performed the action (see "Aaron and his sons" just previously). See the similar shifts from Moses to Aaron as the subject of the action above (vv. 15, 16, 19, 20, 23), and esp. the note on Lev 8:15. In the present translation this is rendered as an adjectival clause ("who waved") to indicate that the referent is not Moses but Aaron and his sons. Cf. CEV "who lifted it up"; NAB "whom he had wave" (with "he" referring to Moses here). †† sn: See Lev 7:30-31, 34. ‡ tn: Heb "toward the altar" (see the note on Lev 1:9). †† tn: Several major ancient versions have the passive form of the verb (see BHS v. 31 note c; cf. ‡‡‡ sn: The phrase "like the first one" at the end of the verse refers back to the sin offering for the priests described in vv. 8-11 above. The blood of the sin offering of the common people was applied to the burnt offering altar just like that of the priests. § tn: The term "standard regulation" ( טָבַח )

§† sn: The latter part of the verse ("in addition to the morning burnt offering") refers to the complex of morning (and evening) burnt and grain offerings that was the daily regulation for the tabernacle from the time of its erection ( Exod 40:29). The regulations for it were appended to the end of the section of priestly consecration regulations in Exod 29 (see Exod 29:38-40) precisely because they were to be maintained throughout the priestly consecration period and beyond ( Lev 8:33-36). Thus, the morning burnt and grain offerings would already have been placed on the altar before the inaugural burnt and grain offerings referred to here. §†† tn: See the note on Lev 9:12. §‡ tn: Heb "And the fat from the ox and from the ram." §‡† tn: The text here has only the participle "the cover" or

Your brothers, all the house of Israel, are to mourn the burning which the LORD has caused, ††7 but you must not go out from the entrance of the Meeting Tent lest you die, for the Lord's anointing oil is on you." So they acted according to the word of Moses.

Perpetual Statutes the Lord Spoke to Aaron

8 Then the LORD spoke to Aaron, 9 "Do not drink wine or strong drink, you and your sons with you, when you enter into the Meeting Tent, so that you do not die, which is a perpetual statute throughout your generations, ††10 as well as††† to distinguish between the holy and the common, and between the unclean and the clean, †††11 and to teach the Israelites all the

The Hebrew grammar here suggests that the last portion of v. 9 functions as both a conclusion to v. 9 and an introduction to vv. 10-11. It is a pivot clause, as it were. Thus, it was a "perpetual statute" to not drink alcoholic beverages when ministering in the tabernacle, but it was also a "perpetual statute" to distinguish between holy and profane and unclean and clean (v. 10) as well as to teach the children of Israel all such statutes (v. 11). †††† tn: Heb "and," but regarding the translation "as well as," see the note at the end of v. 9. †††† sn: The two pairs of categories in this verse refer to: (1) the status of a person, place, thing, or time – "holy" ( קָדֵשׁ חַל ) טָהוֹר טָמֵא

12 Then Moses spoke to Aaron and to Eleazar and Ithamar, his remaining sons, "Take the grain offering which remains from the gifts of the LORD and eat it unleavened beside the altar, for it is most holy. 13 You must eat it in a holy place because it is your allotted portion§† and the allotted portion of your sons from the gifts§†† of the LORD, for this is what I have been commanded. ††14 Also, the breast of the wave offering and the thigh of the contribution offering you must eat in a ceremonially§†† clean place, you and your sons and daughters with you, for they have been given as your allotted portion and the allotted portion of your sons from the peace offering sacrifices of the Israelites. ††15 The thigh of the contribution offering and the breast of the wave offering they must bring in addition to the gifts of the fat parts to wave them as a wave offering before the LORD, and it will belong to you and your sons with you for a perpetual statute just as the LORD has commanded."

The Problem with the Inaugural Sin Offering

16 Later Moses sought diligently for the sin offering male goat, †† but it had actually been burnt. ††† So he became angry at Eleazar and Ithamar, Aaron's remaining sons, saying, 17 "Why did you not eat the sin offering in the sanctuary? For it is most holy and he gave it to you to bear the iniquity of the congregation, ††† to

A more likely interpretation is reflected in this interpretive rendering: "he gave it to you [as payment] for [your work of] bearing the iniquity of the congregation." The previous section of the chapter deals with the prebends that the priests received for performing the ministry of the tabernacle ( Lev 10:12-15). Even her husband would become impure for seven days if he had sexual intercourse with her during this time ( Lev 15:24; cf. 18:19). The next thirty-three days were either "days of purification, purifying" or "days of purity," depending on how one understands the abstract noun טְהוֹרָה

that of a woman's menstrual period, would call for a longer period of impurity than the normal seven days of the menstrual period impurity (compare Lev 15:19 with 15:25-30). Third, this suggests that the fourteen day impurity period for the female child would have been more appropriate, and the impurity period for the birth of a male child had to be shortened. Fourth, not only the principle of multiples of seven but also multiples of forty applies to this reckoning. Since the woman's blood discharge after bearing a child continues for more than seven days, her discharge keeps her from contact with sacred things for a longer period of time in order to avoid contaminating the tabernacle (note Lev 15:31). This ended up totaling forty days for the birth of a male child (seven plus thirty-three) and a corresponding doubling of the second set of days for the woman (fourteen plus sixty-six). See R. E. Averbeck, NIDOTTE 2:368-70. The fact that the offerings were the same for either a male or a female infant (vv. 6-8) suggests that the other differences in the regulations are not due to the notion that a male child had greater intrinsic value than a female child (J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 169). ‡† tn: Heb "And when" (so KJV, NASB). Many recent English versions leave the conjunction untranslated. ‡†† tn: Heb "a lamb the son of his year"; KJV "a lamb of the first year" (NRSV "in its first year"); NAB "a yearling lamb." ‡‡ sn: See the note on Lev 1:3 regarding the "burnt offering." ‡‡† sn: See the note on Lev 4:3 regarding the term "sin offering." ‡† tn: Heb "and he" (i.e., the priest mentioned at the end of v. 6). The referent has been specified in the translation for clarity. ‡‡ sn: See the note on Lev 1:4 "make atonement." The purpose of sin offering "atonement," in particular, was to purge impurities from the tabernacle (see Lev 15:31 and 16:5-19, 29-34), whether they were caused by physical uncleanness or by sins and iniquities. In this case, the woman has not "sinned" morally by having a child. Even Mary brought such offerings for giving birth to Jesus ( Luke 2:22-24), though she certainly did not "sin" in giving birth to him. Note that the result of bringing this "sin offering" was "she will be clean," not "she will be forgiven" (cf. Lev 4:20, 26, 31, 35; 5:10, 13). The impurity of the blood flow has caused the need for this "sin offering," not some moral or relational infringement of the law (contrast Lev 4:2, "When a person sins by straying unintentionally from any of the commandments of the LORD ‡‡† tn: Or "she will be[come] pure." ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "from her source [i.e., spring] of blood," possibly referring to the female genital area, not just the "flow of blood" itself (as suggested by J. 22 tn: The exact identification of this disease is unknown. Cf. KJV "dry scall"; NASB "a scale"; NIV, NCV, NRSV "an itch"; NLT "a contagious skin disease." For a discussion of "scall" disease in the hair, which is a crusty scabby disease of the skin under the hair that also affects the hair itself, see J. E. Hartley, Leviticus (WBC), 192-93, and J. Milgrom, Leviticus (AB), 1:793-94. The Hebrew word rendered "scall" (קַדַּח)

the priest examines the scall infection and it does not appear to be deeper than the skin, <sup>24</sup> and there is no black hair in it, then the priest is to quarantine the person with the scall infection for seven days. <sup>2532</sup> The priest must then examine the infection on the seventh day, and if<sup>26</sup> the scall has not spread, there is no reddish yellow hair in it, and the scall does not appear to be deeper than the skin, <sup>2733</sup> then the individual is to shave himself,<sup>28</sup> but he must not shave the area affected by the scall, <sup>29</sup> and the priest is to quarantine the person with the scall for another seven days. <sup>3034</sup> The priest must then examine the scall on the seventh day, and if<sup>31</sup> the scall has not spread on the skin and it does not appear to be deeper than the skin, <sup>32</sup> then the priest is to pronounce him clean. <sup>33</sup> So he is to wash his clothes and be clean. <sup>35</sup> If, however, the scall spreads further<sup>34</sup> on the skin after his purification, <sup>36</sup> then the priest is to examine it, and if<sup>35</sup> the scall has spread on the skin the priest is not to search further for reddish yellow hair. <sup>36</sup> The person<sup>37</sup> is unclean. <sup>37</sup> If, as far as the priest can see, the scall has stayed the same<sup>38</sup> and black hair has sprouted in it, the scall has been healed; the person is clean. So the priest is to pronounce him clean. <sup>39</sup>

Bright White Spots on the Skin

<sup>40</sup> tn: Heb "and the priest shall see." <sup>41</sup> tn: Heb "and behold" (so KJV, ASV). <sup>42</sup> tn: Heb "he," but the regulation applies to a man or a woman (v. 38a). In the translation "the person" is used to specify the referent more clearly.

Baldness on the Head

The Life of the Person with Skin Disease

Infections in Garments, Cloth, or Leather

† tn: Heb "And a man, when his head is rubbed bare, he is bald-headed." The translation offered here, referring to the back of the head (i.e., the area from the top of the head sloping backwards), is based on the contrast between this condition and that of the following verse. See also B. A. Levine, Leviticus (JPSTC), 82. †† tn: Heb "And if from the front edge of his face, his head is rubbed bare." See the note on v. 40 above. ‡ tn: The rendering "balding in front" corresponds to the location of the bareness at the beginning of the verse. ‡† tn: Heb "and the priest shall see it" (cf. KJV). The MT has "him/it" which some take to refer to the person as a whole (i.e., "him"; see, e.g., J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:770; NIV, NRSV, etc.), while others take it as a reference to the "infection" ( עגג

ment or leather or warp or woof or any article of leather is yellowish green or reddish, it is a diseased infection and it must be shown to the priest. <sup>50</sup> The priest is to examine and then quarantine the article with the infection for seven days. <sup>§§†51</sup> He must then examine the infection on the seventh day. If the infection has spread in the garment, or in the warp, or in the woof, or in the leather – whatever the article into which the leather was made§§§ – the infection is a malignant disease. It is unclean. <sup>52</sup> He must burn the garment or the warp or the woof, whether wool or linen, or any article of leather which has the infection in it. Because it is a malignant disease it must be burned up in the fire. <sup>53</sup> But if the priest examines it and<sup>18</sup> the infection has not spread in the garment or in the warp or in the woof or in any article of leather, <sup>54</sup> the priest is to command that they wash whatever has the infection and quarantine it for another seven days. <sup>1955</sup> The priest must then examine it after the infection has been washed out, and if<sup>20</sup> the infection has not changed its appearance<sup>21</sup> even though the infection has not spread, it is unclean. You must burn it up in the fire. It is a fungus, whether on the back side or front side of the article. <sup>2256</sup> But if the priest has examined it and<sup>23</sup> the infection has faded after it has been washed, he is to tear it out of<sup>24</sup> the garment or the leather or the warp or the woof. <sup>57</sup> Then if<sup>25</sup> it still appears again in the garment or the warp or the woof, or in any article of leather, it is an outbreak. Whatever has the infection in it you must burn up in the fire. <sup>58</sup> But the garment or the warp or the woof or any article of leather which you wash and infection disappears from it<sup>26</sup> is to be washed a second time and it will be clean."

Summary of Infection Regulations

handiwork of skin" (cf. KJV, ASV, NRSV); most other modern English versions have "leather." §§† tn: Heb "and the infection is." This clause is conditional in force, and is translated as such by almost all English versions. §§‡ tn: Heb "And the priest shall see the infection and he shall shut up the infection seven days." §§§ tn: Heb "to all which the leather was made into a handiwork." <sup>18</sup> tn: Heb "And if the priest sees and behold"; NASB "and indeed." <sup>19</sup> tn: Heb "a second seven days." <sup>20</sup> tn: Heb "and behold" (so KJV, ASV). <sup>21</sup> tn: Heb "the infection has not changed its eye." Smr has "its/his eyes," as in vv. 5 and 37, but here it refers to the appearance of the article of cloth or leather, unlike vv. 5 and 37 where there is a preposition attached and it refers to the eyes of the priest. <sup>22</sup> tn: The terms "back side" and "front side" are the same as those used in v. 42 for the "back or front bald area" of a man's head. The exact meaning of these terms when applied to articles of cloth or leather is uncertain. It could refer, for example, to the inside versus the outside of a garment, or the back versus the front side of an article of cloth or leather. See J. Milgrom, Leviticus (AB), 1:814, for various possibilities. <sup>23</sup> tn: Heb "And if the priest saw and behold...." <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb "and he shall tear it from." <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb "And if"; NIV, NCV "But if"; NAB "If, however." <sup>26</sup> tn: Heb "and the infection turns aside from them." <sup>27</sup> sn: The Hebrew term translated "law" ( תּוֹרָה )

article of leather, for pronouncing it clean or unclean. †

14 The LORD spoke to Moses: <sup>2</sup>“ This is the law of the diseased person on the day of his purification, when†† he is brought to the priest. <sup>3</sup> The priest is to go outside the camp and examine the infection. <sup>4</sup> If the infection of the diseased person has been healed, <sup>4a</sup> then the priest will command that two live clean birds, a piece of cedar wood, a scrap of crimson fabric, <sup>4b</sup> and some twigs of hyssop‡‡‡ be taken up§ for the one being cleansed. <sup>5†5</sup> The priest will then command that one bird be slaughtered§†† into a clay vessel over fresh water. <sup>5‡6</sup> Then§†† he is to take the live bird along with the piece of cedar wood, the scrap of crimson fabric, and the twigs of hyssop, and he is to dip them and the live bird in the blood of the bird slaughtered over the fresh water, <sup>7</sup> and sprinkle it seven times on the one being cleansed§† from the disease, pronounce him clean, §† and send the live bird away over the open countryside. §§†

 ‡ tn: The alternative rendering, “when it is reported to the priest” may be better in light of the fact that the priest had to go outside the camp. Since he or she had been declared “unclean” by a priest ( Lev 13:3) and was, therefore, required to remain outside the camp ( Lev 13:46), the formerly diseased person could not reenter the camp until he or she had been declared “clean” by a priest (cf. Lev 13:6 for “declaring clean.”). See especially J. Milgrom, Leviticus (AB), 1:831, who supports this rendering both here and in Lev 13:2 and 9. B. A. Levine, however, prefers the rendering in the text ( Leviticus [JPSTC], 76 and 85). It is the most natural meaning of the verb (i.e., “to be brought” from בָּאוּ

§ tn: The MT reads literally, “And the priest shall command and he shall take.” Clearly, the second verb (“and he shall take”) contains the thrust of the priest’s command, which suggests the translation “that he take” (cf. also v. 5a). Since the priest issues the command here, he cannot be the subject of the second verb because he cannot be commanding himself to “take” up these ritual materials. Moreover, since the ritual is being performed “for the one being cleansed,” the antecedent of the pronoun “he” cannot refer to him. The LXX, Smr, and Syriac versions have the third person plural here and in v. 5a, which corresponds to other combinations with the verb יָצַו

‡† tn: Heb “and he shall be brought to the priest and the priest shall go out to from outside to the camp and the priest shall see [it].” The understood “it” refers to the skin infection itself (see the note on 13:3 above). The referent has been specified in the translation for clarity. ‡† tn: Heb “And behold, the diseased infection has been healed from the diseased person.” The expression “diseased infection” has been translated as simply “infection” to avoid redundancy here in terms of English style. ‡†† tn: The term rendered here “crimson fabric” consists of two Hebrew words and means literally, “crimson of worm” (in this order only in Lev 14:4, 6, 49, 51, 52 and Num 19:6; for the more common reverse order, “worm of crimson,” see, e.g., the colored fabrics used in making the tabernacle, Exod 25:4, etc.). This particular “worm” is an insect that lives on the leaves of palm trees, the eggs of which are the source for a “crimson” dye used to color various kinds of cloth (B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 86). That a kind of dyed “fabric” is intended, not just the dye substance itself, is made certain by the dipping of it along with the other ritual materials listed here into the blood and water mixture for sprinkling on the person being cleansed ( Lev 14:6; cf. also the burning of it in the fire of the red heifer in Num 19:6). Both the reddish color of cedar wood and the crimson colored fabric seem to correspond to the color of blood and may, therefore, symbolize either “life,” which is in the blood, or the use of blood to “make atonement” (see, e.g., Gen 9:4 and Lev 17:11). See further the note on v. 7 below. ‡††† sn: Twigs of hyssop (probably one or several species of marjoram thymus), a spice and herb plant that grows out of walls in Palestine (see 1 Kgs 4:33 [ 5:13 HT], HALOT 27 s.v. אֲזֵרוֹב

 §‡ tn: Heb “into a vessel of clay over living water.” The expression “living [i.e., ‘fresh’] water” (cf. Lev 14:50; 15:13; Num 19:17) refers to water that flows. It includes such water sources as artesian wells ( Gen 26:19; Song of Songs 4:15), springs ( Jer 2:13, as opposed to cisterns; cf. 17:13), and flowing streams ( Zech 14:8). In other words, this is water that has not stood stagnant as, for example, in a sealed-off cistern. sn: Although there are those who argue that the water and the blood rites are separate (e.g., E. S. Gerstenberger, Leviticus [OTL], 175-76), it is usually agreed that v. 5b refers to the slaughtering of the bird in such a way that its blood runs into the bowl, which contained fresh water (see, e.g., N. H. Snaith, Leviticus and Numbers [NCBC], 74; G. J. Wenham, Leviticus [NICOT], 208; J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:836-38; cf. esp. Lev 14:51b, “and dip them in the blood of the slaughtered bird and in the fresh water”). This mixture of blood and water was then to be sprinkled on the person being cleansed from the disease. §†† tc: Heb “the live bird he [i.e., the priest] shall take it.” Although the MT has no

This contrasts with the fear of death associated with the serious skin diseases in view here (see, e.g., Aaron’s description of Miriam’s skin disease in Num 12:12, “Do not let her be like the dead one when it goes out from its mother’s womb and its flesh half

eaten away"). Since the slaughtered bird here is not sacrificed at the altar and is not designated as an expiatory "sin offering," this ritual procedure probably symbolizes the renewed life of the diseased person and displays it publicly for all to see. It is preparatory to the expiatory rituals that will follow (vv. 10-20, esp. vv. 18-20), but is not itself expiatory. Thus, although there are important similarities between the bird ritual here, the scapegoat on the Day of Atonement ( Lev 16:20-22), and the red heifer for cleansing from corpse contamination ( Num 19), this bird ritual is different in that the latter two constitute "sin offerings" ( Lev 16:5, 8-10; Num 19:9, 17). Neither of the birds in Lev 14:4-7 is designated or treated as a "sin offering." Nevertheless, the very nature of the live bird ritual itself and its obvious similarity to the scapegoat ritual suggests that the patient's disease has been removed far away so that he or she is free from its effects both personally and communally. † tn: Heb "the one cleansing himself" (i.e., Hitpael participle of טָהַר

†† tn: Heb "and he shall be clean" (so ASV). The end result of the ritual procedures in vv. 4-7 and the washing and shaving in v. 8a is that the formerly diseased person has now officially become clean in the sense that he can reenter the community (see v. 8b; contrast living outside the community as an unclean diseased person, Lev 13:46). There are, however, further cleansing rituals and pronouncements for him to undergo in the tabernacle as outlined in vv. 10-20 (see Qal "be[come] clean" in vv. 9 and 20, Piel "pronounce clean" in v. 11, and Hitpael "the one being cleansed" in vv. 11, 14, 17, 18, and 19). Obviously, in order to enter the tabernacle he must already "be clean" in the sense of having access to the community.

Smr and LXX make the second verb "to slaughter" plural rather than singular, which suggests that it is to be taken as an impersonal passive (see J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:852). §§§ tn: Heb "the guilt offering, it [is] to the LORD

The Eighth Day Atonement Rituals for the Poor Person

† tn: Heb "And the priest...shall pour on the left hand of the priest." As the Rabbis observe, the repetition of "priest" as the expressed subject of both verbs in this verse may suggest that two priests were involved in this ritual (see m. Nega'im 14:8, referred to by J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:852), but the seemingly unnecessary repetition of "priest" in several verses throughout the chapter argues against this (see esp. vv. 3, 14, 18, 20, 24, and 26). Moreover, in this case, "priest" may be repeated to avoid confusing the priest's hand with that of the one being cleansed (cf. v. 14). †† tn: Heb "his right finger from the oil." ‡ tn: Heb "on his hand." ‡†† tn: Heb "and the remainder in the oil." ‡‡ tn: Heb "do [or "make"] the sin offering." ‡††† tn: Heb "And after[ward] he [i.e., the offerer] shall slaughter." The LXX adds "the priest" as the subject of the verb (as do several English versions, e.g., NAB, NIV, NCV, NLT), but the offerer is normally the one who does the actually slaughtering of the sacrificial animal (cf. the notes on Lev 1:5a, 6a, and 9a). ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "cause to go up." § tn: Heb "and his hand does not reach"; NAB, NRSV "and cannot afford so much (afford these NIV)." §† tn: See the notes on v. 10 above. §†† tn: Heb "from the sons of the pigeon," referring either to "young pigeons" or "various species of pigeon" (contrast J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:168 with J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 14; cf. Lev 1:14 and esp. 5:7-10). §‡ tn: Heb "which his hand reaches"; NRSV "such as (which NIV) he can afford." §††† tn: Heb "and one shall be a sin offering and the one a burnt offering." The versions struggle with whether or not "one" should or should not have the definite article in its two occurrences in this verse (KJV, ASV, NAB, NASB all have the English definite article with both). The MT has the first without and the second with the article. §†††† tn: Heb "to the doorway of"; KJV, ASV "unto the door of."

Purification of Disease-Infected Houses

The repetition of virtually the same expression at the beginning of v. 31 in the MT is probably due to dittography (cf. the LXX and Syriac). However, the MT may be retained if it is understood as "one of the turtledoves or young pigeons that are within his means - whichever he can afford" (see J. Milgrom's translation in Leviticus [AB], 1:828, contra his commentary, 862; cf. REB). 24 tn: Heb "and the one a burnt offering on the grain offering." 25 tn: Heb "This is the law of who in him [is] a diseased infection." 26 tn: Heb "who his hand does not reach in his purification"; NASB "whose means are limited for his cleansing"; NIV "who cannot afford the regular offerings for his cleansing." 27 tn: Heb "which I am giving" (so NAB, NIV). 28 tn: Heb "give." 29 tn: Heb "in the house of the land of your possession" (KJV and ASV both similar). 30 tn: Heb "who to him the house." 31 tn: Heb "And the priest shall command and they

The second verb ("and they shall clear") states the thrust of the priest's command, which suggests the translation "that they clear" (cf. also vv. 4a and 5a above), and for the impersonal passive rendering of the active verb ("that the house be cleared") see the note on v. 4 above. † tn: Heb "to see the infection"; KJV "to see the plague"; NASB "to look at the mark (mildew NCV)." †† tn: Heb "all which [is] in the house." ‡ sn: Once the priest pronounced the house "unclean" everything in it was also officially unclean. Therefore, if they emptied the house of its furniture, etc. before the official pronouncement by the priest those possessions would thereby remain officially "clean" and avoid destruction or purification procedures. ‡† tn: Heb "and after thus." ‡†† tn: Heb "and behold" (so KJV, ASV). ‡††† tn: For "yellowish green and reddish" see Lev 13:49. ### Summary of Purification Regulations for Infections

† tn: Heb "and for the scall"; NASB "a scale"; NIV "any infectious skin disease." Cf. Lev 13:29-37. †† sn: Cf. Lev 13:47-59. ‡ sn: Cf. Lev 14:33-53. ‡† sn: Cf. Lev 13:9-28, 43. ‡‡ sn: Cf. Lev 13:2. ‡‡† sn: Cf. Lev 13:4, 18-28, 38-39. For explanations of all these terms for disease in Lev 14:56 see 13:2. ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "to teach in the day of the unclean and in the day of the clean."§ tn: Heb "This is the law of the disease." Some English versions specify this as "skin disease" (e.g., NIV, NLT), but then have to add "and (+ infectious NLT) mildew" (so NIV) because a house would not be infected with a skin disease. sn: For an explanation of the term "disease" see Lev 13:2. §† tn: Heb "Man man." The reduplication is a way of saying "any man" (cf. Lev 17:3; 22:18, etc.; see the distributive repetition of the noun in GKC 395-96 §123. c). §†† tn: The term "discharge" actually means "to flow," whether referring to a full flow as at a spring of water (Ps 78:20 and parallels) or in reference to the promised land as "a land flowing with milk and honey" (Exod 3:8 and parallels). §‡ tn: Heb "man, man when there is a discharge from his flesh." The repetition of the word "man" is distributive, meaning "any [or "every"] man" (GKC 395-96 §123. c). It is well-recognized that the term "flesh" (i.e., "body") in this chapter refers regularly and euphemistically to the male and female genital members or areas of the body (HALOT 164 s.v. בָּשָׂר).

§†† tn: The LXX has "this the law of his uncleanness..." (cf. v. 32 and compare, e.g., 13:59; 14:2, 56). §† tc: Smr, LXX, and the Paleo-Hebrew Leviticus Scroll from Qumran (11QpaleoLev; Fragment G contains Lev 14:52-15:5 and 16:2-4, and agrees with the LXX of Lev 15:3b) are in essential (although not complete) agreement against the MT in Lev 15:3b and are to be preferred in this case. The shorter MT text has probably arisen due to a lengthy haplography. See K. A. Mathews, "The Leviticus Scroll (11QpaleoLev) and the Text of the Hebrew Bible," CBQ 48 (1986): 177-78, 198; D. N. Freedman, "Variant Readings in the Leviticus Scroll from Qumran Cave 11," CBQ 36 (1974): 528-29; D. N. Freedman and K. A. Mathews, The Paleo-Hebrew Leviticus Scroll, 32. The MT of Lev 15:3 reads: "Now this is his uncleanness in [regard to] his discharge – whether his body secretes his discharge or blocks his discharge, this is his uncleanness." Smr adds after MT's "blocks his discharge" the following: "he is unclean; all the days that his body has a discharge or his body blocks his discharge, this is his uncleanness." In other words, whether his discharge flows from his penis or is blocked in it, he is still unclean and must proceed according to the following regulations (vv. 4ff). §§† tn: Heb "All the bed which the man with a discharge sits on it shall be unclean"; cf. NLT "Any bedding." §§‡ tn: Heb "and all the vessel which he sits on it shall be unclean"; NASB "everything on which he sits." §§§ tn: Heb "And a man who touches in his bed"; NLT "touch the man's bedding." 18 tn: Heb "he shall wash his clothes and bathe in water and be unclean until the evening" (cf. also vv. 6-8, 10-11, etc.). 19 tn: Heb "And the one who touches in the flesh." In this instance, "flesh" (or "body") probably refers literally to any part of the body, not the genitals specifically (see the discussion in J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:914). 20 tn: Heb "And if the man with a discharge spits in the clean one." 21 tn: The Hebrew term for "means of riding" is a cognate noun from the verb "ride" later in this verse. It refers to anything on which one may ride without the feet touching the ground including, for example, a saddle, a (saddle) blanket, or a seat on a chariot (see, e.g., J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:916). 22 tn: Heb "which shall be under him." The verb is perhaps a future perfect, "which shall have been." 23 tn: Heb "them"; the referent (the previously mentioned items which were under the unclean person) has been specified in the translation for clarity. 24 tn: Heb "And all who the man with the discharge touches in him and his hands he has not rinsed in water." 25 tn: The Hebrew term 'לך

The Sin Offering Sacrificial Procedures

11 “ Aaron is to present the sin offering bull which is for himself, and he is to make atonement on behalf of himself and his household. He is to slaughter the sin offering bull which is for himself, 12 and take a censer full of coals of fire from the altar before the LORD†† and a full double handful of finely ground fragrant incense, ‡ and bring them inside the veil-canopy. ††13 He must then put the incense on the fire before the LORD , and the cloud of incense will cover the atonement plate which is above the ark of the testimony, †† so that he will not die. ††14 Then he is to take some of the blood of the bull and sprinkle it with his finger on the eastern face of the atonement plate, ††† and in front of the atonement plate he is to sprinkle some of the blood seven times with his finger. §

15 “ He must then slaughter the sin offering goat which is for the people. He is to bring its blood inside the veil-canopy, §† and he is to do with its blood just as he did to the blood of the bull : He is to sprinkle it on the atonement plate and in front of the atonement plate. 16 So§†† he is to make atonement for the holy place from the impurities of the Israelites and from their transgressions with regard to all their sins, §† and thus he is to do for the Meeting Tent which resides with them in the midst of their impurities. 17 Nobody is to be in the Meeting Tent§†† when he enters to make Lev 16:2). The term “testimony” in this expression refers to the ark as the container of the two stone tablets with the Ten Commandments written on them (see Exod 25:16 with Deut 10:1, 5, etc.). ††† tn: Heb “and he will not die,” but it is clear that the purpose for the incense cloud was to protect the priest from death in the presence of the LORD †††† tn: Heb “on the faces of the atonement plate toward the east.” Some have taken this to mean that the ark was stationed just behind the veil-canopy on the eastern side of the most holy place. Thus, the high priest would need to enter and walk toward the west end of the most holy place and then turn eastward in order to face the ark and sprinkle the blood in an eastward direction. The rendering here, however, requires that the ark was stationed on the western end, or perhaps in the middle of the area, so that as the priest entered he was already facing the ark and would sprinkle the blood on the eastern face of the atonement plate, in a westward direction (see, e.g., J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 239 versus J. Milgrom, Leviticus [AB], 1:1032). § sn: Presumably in this case the blood was sprinkled seven times on the ground in front of the ark on which the atonement plate was mounted. §† tn: Heb “and he shall bring its blood into from house to the veil-canopy.”§†† tn: Heb “And.” The Hebrew conjunction ׀ 18 “ Then§† he is to go out to the altar which is before the LORD and make atonement for it. He is to take§† some of the blood of the bull and some of the blood of the goat, and put it all around on the horns of the altar. 19 Then he is to sprinkle on it some of the blood with his finger seven times, and cleanse and consecrate it§§† from the impurities of the Israelites.

The Live Goat Ritual Procedures

20 “ When he has finished purifying the holy place,§§† the Meeting Tent, and the altar, he is to present the live goat. 21 Aaron is to lay his two hands on the head of the live goat and confess over it all the iniquities of the Israelites and all their transgressions in regard to all their sins, §§§ and thus he is to put them18 on the head of the goat and send it away into the wilderness by the hand of a man standing ready. 1922 The goat is to bear on itself all their iniquities into an inaccessible land, 20 so he is to send the goat away21 in the wilderness.

The Concluding Rituals

23 “ Aaron must then enter22 the Meeting Tent and take off the linen garments which he had put on when he entered the sanctuary, and leave them there. 24 Then he must bathe his body in water in a holy place, put on his clothes, and go out and make his burnt offering and the people’s burnt offering. So he is to make atonement23 on behalf of himself and the people. 24

Laws of Sexual Relations

6 “No man is to approach any close relative§‡† to have sexual intercourse with her.§‡† I am the LORD . §‡‡‡‡‡ You must not18 expose your father’s nakedness by having sexual intercourse with your mother. 19 She is your mother, you must not have intercourse with her. 8 You must not have sexual intercourse with your father’s wife; she is your father’s nakedness. 209 You must not have sexual intercourse with your sister, whether she is your father’s daughter or your mother’s daughter, 21 whether she is born in the same household or born outside it;22 you must not have sexual intercourse with either of them. 2310 You must not expose the naked-

§‡† tn: Heb “to uncover [her] nakedness” (cf. KJV, ASV, NASB, NRSV), which is clearly euphemistic for sexual intercourse (see J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 282, and B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 119). This expression occurs a number of times in the following context and is generally translated “have sexual intercourse with [someone],” although in the case of the father mentioned in the following verse the expression may be connected to the shame or disgrace that would belong to the father whose wife’s sexuality is violated by his son. See the note on the word “mother” in v. 7. §‡‡‡‡ sn: The general statement prohibiting sexual intercourse between close relatives serves as an opening summary statement for the following section, which gives details concerning which degrees of relationship are specifically forbidden. 18 tn: The verbal negative here is the same as that used in the Ten Commandments (Exod 20:4-5, 7, 13-17). It suggests permanent prohibition rather than a simple negative command and could, therefore, be rendered “must not” here and throughout the following section as it is in vv. 3-4 above. 19 tn: Heb “The nakedness of your father and [i.e., even] the nakedness of your mother you shall not uncover.” sn: Commentators suggest that the point of referring to the father’s nakedness is that the mother’s sexuality belongs to the father and is forbidden to the son on that account (see B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 120, and J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 294). The expression may, however, derive from the shame of nakedness when exposed. If one exposes his mother’s nakedness to himself it is like openly exposing the father’s nakedness (cf. Gen 9:22-23 with the background of Gen 2:25 and 3:7, 21). The same essential construction is used in v. 10 where the latter explanation makes more sense than the former. 20 tn: Heb “the nakedness of your father she is.” See the note on v. 7 above. This law refers to another wife of the man’s father, who is not that man’s mother. The laws in the Pentateuch sometimes assume the possibility that a man may have more than one wife (cf., e.g., Deut 21:15-17). 21 tn: Heb “the daughter of your father or the daughter of your mother.” 22 tn: Heb “born of house or born of outside.” CEV interprets as “whether you grew up together or not” (cf. also TEV, NLT). 23 tc: Several medieval Hebrew MSS

The LXX and Syriac have "their nakedness," referring to the nakedness of the woman's granddaughters, rather than the nakedness of the woman herself. § tc: Heb "they are her flesh." The LXX reads "your" here (followed by NRSV). If the LXX reading were followed by the present translation, the result would be "They are closely related to you." §† tn: The term rendered "lewdness" almost always carries a connotation of cunning, evil device, and divisiveness (cf. † tn: Heb "You shall not stand on the blood of your neighbor." This part of the verse is also difficult to interpret. The rendering here suggests that one will not allow a neighbor to be victimized, whether in court (cf. v. 15) or in any other situation (see the discussion in B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 129). †† tn: Heb "and you will not lift up on him sin." The meaning of the line is somewhat obscure. It means either (1) that one should rebuke one's neighbor when he sins lest one also becomes guilty, which is the way it is rendered here (see NIV, NRSV, NEB, JB; see also B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 129-30, and J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 303, and the discussion on pp. 316-17), or (2) one may rebuke one's neighbor without incurring sin just as long as he does not hate him in his heart (see the first part of the verse; cf. NASB, NAB). ‡ tn: Heb "and you shall not retain [anger?]." This line seems to refer to the retaining or maintaining of some vengeful feelings toward someone. Compare the combination of the same terms for taking vengeance and maintaining wrath against enemies in Nahum 1:2 (see J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 305). ‡† sn: Some scholars make a distinction between the verb בָּרָא

Since the fruit is uncircumcised it is forbidden (see J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 306, and esp. B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 131-32). §§‡ tn: Heb "it shall be to you uncircumcised."§§§ tn: See B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 132, where the translation reads "set aside for jubilation"; a special celebration before the LORD <sup>18</sup> tn: Heb "to add to you its produce." The rendering here assumes that the point of this clause is simply that finally being allowed to eat the fruit in the fifth year adds the fruit of the tree to their harvest. Some take the verb to be from בָּרָא

NAB "he has forfeited his life"; TEV "is responsible for his own death." sn: The rendering "blood guilt" refers to the fact that the shedding of blood brings guilt on those who shed it illegitimately (even the blood of animals shed illegitimately, Lev 17:4; cf. the background of Gen 4:10-11). If the community performs a legitimate execution, however, the blood guilt rests on the person who has been legitimately executed (see the remarks and literature cited in J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 328). <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb "And a man who." The Hebrew verb "to take" in this context means "to engage in sexual intercourse." ‡ tn: Regarding "lewdness," see the note on Lev 18:17 above. ‡† tn: Heb "in fire they shall burn him and them." The active plural verb sometimes requires a passive translation (GKC 460 §144. f, g), esp. when no active plural subject has been expressed in the context. The present translation specifies "burned to death" because the traditional rendering "burnt with fire" (KJV, ASV; NASB "burned with fire") could be understood to mean "branded" or otherwise burned, but not fatally. ‡‡ tn: See the note on Lev 18:20 above. ‡‡† tn: Heb "to copulate with it" (cf. Lev 20:16). ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "takes." The verb "to take" in this context means "to engage in sexual intercourse," though some English versions translate it as "marry" (e.g., NIV, NCV, TEV, CEV). § tn: Regarding the "cut off" penalty, see the note on Lev 7:20. §† tn: See the note on Lev 17:16 above. §†† tn: Heb "and the two of them." §‡ tn: Heb "his flesh." §†† tn: See the note on Lev 17:16 above. §† tn: Heb "takes." The verb "to take" in this context means "to engage in sexual intercourse." §‡ sn: See the note on Lev 18:7 above. §§† tn: Heb "And you shall keep all my statutes and all my regulations and you shall do them." This appears to be a kind of verbal hendiadys, where the first verb is a modifier of the action of the sec-

to bring you to take up residence there does not vomit you out. <sup>23</sup> You must not walk in the statutes of the nation §§§ which I am about to drive out before you, because they have done all these things and I am filled with disgust against them. <sup>24</sup> So I have said to you: You yourselves will possess their land and I myself will give it to you for a possession, a land flowing with milk and honey. I am the LORD your God who has set you apart from the other peoples. <sup>1825</sup> Therefore you must distinguish <sup>19</sup> between the clean animal and the unclean, and between the unclean bird and the clean, and you must not make yourselves detestable by means of an animal or bird or anything that creeps on the ground – creatures <sup>20</sup> I have distinguished for you as unclean. <sup>2126</sup> You must be holy to me because I, the LORD, am holy, and I have set you apart from the other peoples to be mine.

Prohibition against Spiritists and Mediums

The verb is the same as "set apart" at the end of the previous verse. The fact that God had "set them apart" from the other peoples roundabout them called for them to "distinguish between" the clean and the unclean, etc. <sup>20</sup> tn: The word "creatures" has been supplied in the translation to make it clear that the following relative clause modifies the animal, bird, or creeping thing mentioned earlier, and not the ground itself. <sup>21</sup> tc: The MT has "to defile," but Smr, LXX, and Syriac have "to uncleanness." <sup>22</sup> tc: Smr, LXX, Syriac, and some Targum mss

Smr and LXX have "you [plural] shall pelt them with stones." <sup>sn</sup>: At first glance Lev 20:27 appears to be out of place but, on closer examination, one could argue that it constitutes the back side of an envelope around the case laws in 20:9-21, with Lev 20:6 forming the front of the envelope (note also that execution of mediums and spiritists by stoning in v. 27 is not explicitly stated in v. 6). This creates a chiasmic structure: prohibition against mediums and spiritists (vv. 6 and 27), variations of the holiness formula (vv. 7 and 25-26), and exhortations to obey the LORD

(note the introductory formula, "say to the priests, the sons of Aaron"). † tc: The MT has "in his peoples," but Smr, LXX, Syriac, Targum, and Tg. Ps.-J. have "in his people," referring to the Israelites as a whole. †† tn: Heb "except for his flesh, the one near to him." ‡ tn: Cf. v. 2a. †† tn: Heb "He shall not defile himself a husband in his peoples, to profane himself." The meaning of the line is disputed, but it appears to prohibit a priest from burying any relative by marriage (as opposed to the blood relatives of vv. 2-3), including his wife (compare B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 142-43 with J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 343, 348). ‡‡ tn: Heb "they"; the referent (priests, see the beginning of v. 1) has been specified in the translation for clarity. ‡†† tn: Heb "and in their body they shall not [cut] slash[es]" (cf. Lev 19:28). The context connects these sorts of mutilations with mourning rites (cf. Lev 19:27-28 above). ‡†† sn: Regarding "profane," see the note on Lev 10:10 above. § sn: Regarding the Hebrew term for "gifts," see the note on Lev 1:9 above (cf. also 3:11 and 16 in combination with the word for "food" that follows in the next phrase here). §† tc: Smr and all early versions have the plural adjective "holy" rather than the MT singular noun "holiness." §†† tn: Heb "A wife harlot and profaned they shall not take." The structure of the verse (e.g., "wife" at the beginning of the two main clauses) suggests that "harlot and profaned" constitutes a hendiadys, meaning "a wife defiled by harlotry" (see the explanation in B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 143, as opposed to that in J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 343, 348; cf. v. 14 below). Cf. NASB "a woman who is profaned by harlotry." §† sn: For a helpful discussion of divorce in general and as it relates to this passage see B. A. Levine, Leviticus (JPSTC), 143-44. §†† tn: Heb "he"; the referent (the priest) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §† tn: The pronoun "he" in this clause refers to the priest, not the former husband of the divorced woman. §† tn: The three previous second person references in this verse are all singular, but this reference is plural. By adding "all" this grammatical distinction is preserved in the translation. §§† tn: See the note on "burned to death" in 20:14. §§† tn: The adjective "high" has been supplied in the translation for clarity, as in many English versions. §§§ tn: Heb "and he has filled his hand." Rules for the Priesthood

<sup>18</sup> tn: Regarding these signs of mourning see the note on Lev 10:6. His head had been anointed (v. 10a) so it must not be unkempt (v. 10b), and his garments were special priestly garments (v. 10a) so he must not tear them (v. 10b). In the translation "garments" has been employed rather than "clothes" to suggest that the special priestly garments are referred to here; cf. NRSV "nor tear his vestments." <sup>19</sup> tc: Although the MT has "persons" (plural), the LXX and Syriac have the singular "person" corresponding to the singular adjectival participle "dead" (cf. also Num 6:6). <sup>20</sup> sn: Regarding "profane," see the note on Lev 10:10 above. <sup>21</sup> tn: Heb "And he, a wife in her virginity he shall take." <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb "take." In context this means "take as wife," i.e., "marry." <sup>23</sup> tc: The MT has literally, "from his peoples," but Smr, LXX, Syriac, Targum, and Tg. Ps.-J. have "from his people," referring to the Israelites as a whole. <sup>24</sup> tc: The MT has literally, "in his peoples," but Smr, LXX, Syriac, Targum, and Tg. KJV, ASV "any blemish"; NASB, NIV "a defect." The rendering "physical flaw" is used to refer to any birth defect or physical injury of the kind described in the following verses (cf. the same Hebrew word also in Lev 24:19-20). The same term is used for "flawed" animals, which must not be offered to the LORD

<sup>31</sup> tn: The term rendered "spot" derives from a root meaning "mixed" or "confused" (cf. NAB "walleyed"). It apparently refers to any kind of marked flaw in the eye that can be seen by others. Smr, Syriac, Tg. Onq., and Tg. Ps.-J. have plural "his eyes."<sup>32</sup> tn: The exact meaning and medical reference of the terms rendered "festering eruption" and "feverish rash" is unknown, but see the translations and remarks in B. The priests were responsible to see that the portions of the offerings that were to be consumed by the priests as prebends did not become accessible to the people. Although many modern English versions render "with its mother" (e.g., NAB, NASB, NIV, NRSV, NLT), the literal phrase "under its mother" refers to the young animal nursing from its mother. Cf. KJV, ASV "it shall be seven days under the dam," which would probably be misunderstood. 27 tn: Heb "for an offering of a gift."

The Presentation of First Fruits

This is a perpetual statute throughout your generations<sup>24</sup> in all the places where you live.

The Festival of Weeks

15 "You must count for yourselves seven weeks from the day after the Sabbath, from the day you bring the wave offering sheaf; they must be complete weeks. 25<sup>16</sup> You must count fifty days – until the day after the seventh Sabbath – and then<sup>26</sup> you must present a new grain offering to the LORD. 17 From the places where you live you must bring two loaves of<sup>27</sup> bread for a wave offering; they must be made from two tenths of an ephah of fine wheat flour, baked with yeast, 28 as first fruits to the LORD. 18 Along with the loaves of bread, 29 you must also present seven flawless yearling lambs, 30 one young bull, 31 and two rams. 32 They are to be a burnt offering to the LORD along with their

A pre-exilic hin is about 3.6 liters (= ca. 1 quart), so one fourth of a hin would be about one cup. 23 tn: Heb "until the bone of this day." 24 tn: Heb "for your generations." 25 tn: Heb "seven Sabbaths, they shall be complete." The disjunctive accent under "Sabbaths" precludes the translation "seven complete Sabbaths" (as NASB, NIV; cf. NAB, NRSV, NLT). The text is somewhat awkward, which may explain why the LXX tradition is confused here, either adding "you shall count" again at the end of the verse, or leaving out "they shall be," or keeping "they shall be" and adding "to you." 26 tn: Heb "and." In the translation "then" is supplied to clarify the sequence. 27 tc: Smr, LXX, Syriac, Tg. Onq., and Tg. Ps.-J. insert the word קֶלֶח

The Festival of Horn Blasts

The Day of Atonement

The object of the verb (two lambs) is far removed from the verb itself (shall wave) in the MT, and the preposition וְ

‡‡‡ tn: Heb “And you shall proclaim [an assembly] in the bone of this day; a holy assembly it shall be to you” (see the remarks in B. A. J. Budd, Leviticus [NCBC], 325), the “blast” of the shofar (a trumpet made from a ram’s “horn”) is most likely what is intended. On this occasion, the loud blasts on the horn announced the coming of the new year on the first day of the seventh month (see the explanations in J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 387, and B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 160). §†† tn: Heb “and.” The Hebrew conjunction וְ

The Festival of Booths

<sup>37</sup> “These are the appointed times of the LORD that you must proclaim as holy assemblies to present a gift to the LORD – burnt offering, grain offering, sacrifice, and drink offerings,<sup>28</sup> each day according to its regulation,<sup>2938</sup> besides<sup>30</sup> the Sabbaths of the LORD and all your gifts, votive offerings, and freewill offerings which you must give to the LORD.

39 "On† the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when you gather in the produce of the land, you must celebrate a pilgrim festival of the LORD for seven days. On the first day is a complete rest and on the eighth day is complete rest. 40 On the first day you must take for yourselves branches from majestic trees†† – palm branches, branches of leafy trees, and willows of the brook – and you must rejoice before the LORD your God for seven days. 41 You must celebrate it as a pilgrim festival to the LORD for seven days in the year. This is a perpetual statute throughout your generations; ‡ you must celebrate it in the seventh month. 42 You must live in temporary shelters‡† for seven days; every native citizen in Israel must live in temporary shelters, 43 so that your future generations may know that I made the Israelites live in temporary shelters when I brought them out from the land of Egypt. I am the LORD your God."

44 So Moses spoke to the Israelites about the appointed times of the LORD. ‡

24 The LORD spoke to Moses: 2 "Command the Israelites to bring‡† to you pure oil of beaten olives for the light, to make a lamp burn continually. ‡†3 Outside the veil-canopy‡ of the congregation in the Meeting Tent Aaron‡† must arrange it from evening until morning before the LORD continually. This is a perpetual statute throughout your generations. ‡†4

For extensive remarks on the celebration of this festival in history and tradition see B. A. Levine, Leviticus (JPSTC), 163; J. E. Hartley, Leviticus (WBC), 389-90; and P. J. Budd, Leviticus (NCBC), 328-29. ‡ tn: Heb "for your generations." ‡† tn: Heb "in the huts" (again at the end of this verse and in v. 43), perhaps referring to temporary shelters (i.e., huts) made of the foliage referred to in v. 40 (J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 389). ‡† sn: E. S. Gerstenberger (Leviticus [OTL], 352) takes v. 44 to be an introduction to another set of festival regulations, perhaps something like those found in Exod 23:14-17. For others this verse reemphasizes the Mosaic authority of the preceding festival regulations (e.g., J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 390). ‡†† tn: Heb "and let them take." The simple vav ( ו )

A Case of Blaspheming the Name

10 Now<sup>24</sup> an Israelite woman's son whose father was an Egyptian went out among the Israelites, and the Israelite woman's son and an Israelite man<sup>25</sup> had a fight in the camp. 11 The Israelite woman's son misused the Name and cursed, <sup>26</sup> so they brought him to Moses.

‡† tn: Alternatively, "pure [gold] lampstand," based on Exod 25:31, etc., where the term for "gold" actually appears (see NAB, NASB, NIV, NRSV, NLT, and the remarks in J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 395, etc.). However, in Lev 24:4 the adjective "pure" is feminine, corresponding to "lampstand," not an assumed noun "gold" (contrast Exod 25:31), and the "table" in v. 6 was overlaid with gold, but was not made of pure gold. Therefore, it is probably better to translate "[ceremonially] pure lampstand" (v. 4) and "[ceremonially] pure table" (v. 6); see NEB; cf. KJV, ASV; B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 164-65; and G. J. Wenham, Leviticus [NICOT], 307. ‡†† sn: See the note on Lev 2:1. ‡† tn: Heb "and bake it twelve loaves"; KJV, NAB, NASB "cakes." ‡† tn: The words "of flour" are supplied in the translation for clarity. sn: See the note on Lev 5:11. ‡†† tn: Heb "six of the row." ‡†† tn: This is not just any "incense" ( אֲזֵכָה )

The expression "a Sabbath of complete rest" is superlative, emphasizing the full and all inclusive rest of the seventh year of the sabbatical cycle. Cf. That year will be your jubilee; † each one of you must return†† to his property and each one of you must return to his clan. <sup>11</sup> That fiftieth year will be your jubilee; you must not sow the land, harvest its aftergrowth, or pick the grapes of its unpruned vines. <sup>12</sup> Because that year is a jubilee, it will be holy to you – you may eat its produce ‡ from the field.

This was not to be done with land in ancient Israel (contrast the final full sale of houses in v. 30; see the evidence cited in B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 174). <sup>24</sup> tn: That is, the Israelites were strangers and residents who were attached to the LORD

A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 176), the combination of terms in Hebrew corresponds to the portion of v. 27 that refers specifically to refunding the money (cf. v. 27; see NIV and G. J. Wenham, Leviticus [NICOT], 315). <sup>33</sup> tn: Heb “his sale.” <sup>34</sup> tn: Heb “will be in the hand of.” This refers to the temporary control of the one who purchased its produce until the next year of jubilee, at which time it would revert to the original owner. <sup>35</sup> tn: Heb “it shall go out” (so KJV, ASV; see B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 176). <sup>36</sup> tn: Heb “he”; the referent (the original owner of the land) has been specified in the translation for clarity. <sup>37</sup> tn: Heb “a house of a residence of a walled city.” <sup>38</sup> tn: Heb “shall be.” <sup>39</sup> tn: Heb “of its sale.”

There are five main views. (1) The first clause of the verse actually attaches to the previous verse, and refers to the fact that their houses retain a perpetual right of redemption (v. 32b), “which any of the Levites may exercise” (v. 33a; J. E. Hartley, Leviticus [WBC], 418, 421). (2) It refers to property that one Levite sells to another Levite, which is then redeemed by still another Levite (v. 33a). In such cases, the property reverts to the original Levite owner in the jubilee year (v. 33b; G. J. Wenham, Leviticus [NICOT], 321). (3) It refers to houses in a city that had come to be declared as a Levitical city but had original non-Levitical owners. Once the city was declared to belong to the Levites, however, an owner could only sell his house to a Levite, and he could only redeem it back from a Levite up until the time of the first jubilee after the city was declared to be a Levitical city. In this case the first part of the verse would be translated, “Such property as may be redeemed from the Levites” (NRSV, NJPS). At the first jubilee, however, all such houses became the property of the Levites (v. 33b; P. J. Budd, Leviticus [NCBC], 353). (4) It refers to property “which is appropriated from the Levites” (not “redeemed from the Levites,” v. 33a) by those who have bought it or taken it as security for debts owed to them by Levites who had fallen on bad times. Again, such property reverts back to the original Levite owners at the jubilee (B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 177). (5) It simply refers to the fact that a Levite has the option of redeeming his house (i.e., the prefix form of the verb is taken to be subjunctive, “may or might redeem”), which he had to sell because he had fallen into debt or perhaps even become destitute. Even if he never gained the resources to do so, however, it would still revert to him in the jubilee year. The present translation is intended to reflect this latter view. §†† tn: Heb “And.” §‡ sn: This refers to the region of fields just outside and surrounding the city where cattle were kept and garden crops were grown (B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 177). §†† tn: It is not clear to whom this refers. It is probably broader than “sibling” (cf. NRSV “any of your kin”; NLT “any of your Israelite relatives”) but live§§† with you like a foreign resident.<sup>§§‡36</sup> Do not take interest or profit from him,§§§ but you must fear your God and your brother must live<sup>18</sup> with you.<sup>37</sup> You must not lend him your money at interest and you must not sell him food for profit.<sup>1938</sup> I am the LORD your God who brought you out from the land of Egypt to give you the land of Canaan – to be your God.<sup>20</sup>

<sup>3</sup> "If you walk in my statutes and are sure to obey my commandments, <sup>214</sup> I will give you your rains in their time so that<sup>22</sup> the land will give its yield and the trees of the field will produce their fruit. <sup>235</sup> Threshing season will extend for you until the season for harvesting grapes, <sup>24</sup> and the season for harvesting grapes will extend until sowing season, so<sup>25</sup> you will eat your bread until you are satisfied, <sup>26</sup> and you will live securely in your land. <sup>6</sup> I will grant peace in the land so that<sup>27</sup> you will lie down to sleep without anyone terrifying you. <sup>28</sup> I will remove harmful animals<sup>29</sup> from the land, and no sword of war<sup>30</sup> will pass through your land. <sup>7</sup> You will pursue your enemies and they will fall before you by the sword. <sup>318</sup> Five of you will pursue a hundred, and a hundred of you will pursue ten thousand, and your enemies will fall before you by the sword. <sup>9</sup> I will turn to you, make you fruitful, multiply you, and maintain<sup>32</sup> my covenant with you. <sup>10</sup> You will still be eating stored produce from the previous year<sup>33</sup> and will have to clean out what is stored from the previous year to make room for new. <sup>34</sup>

The Consequences of Disobedience

14 "If, however,† you do not obey me and keep†† all these commandments – 15 if you reject my statutes and abhor my regulations so that you do not keep‡ all my commandments and you break my covenant – 16 I for my part‡‡ will do this to you: I will inflict horror on you, consumption and fever, which diminish eyesight and drain away the vitality of life. § You will sow your seed in vain because§§ your enemies will eat it. ¶¶ I will set my face against you. You will be struck down before your enemies, those who hate you will rule over you, and you will flee when there is no one pursuing you.

Many English versions take this to be a conditional clause ("if...") though there is no conditional particle (see, e.g., NASB, NIV, NRSV; but see the very different rendering in B. A. Levine, Leviticus [JPSTC], 190). The temporal translation offered here ("when") takes into account the particle וְ

On the verb "make up for" see the note on v. 34 above. §†† tn: Heb "my covenant with Abraham I will remember." The phrase "I will remember" has not been repeated in the translation for stylistic reasons. §‡ tn: Heb "from them." The preposition "from" refers here to the agent of the action (J. E. Summary Colophon

Redemption of Vowed Animals

According to the assessed conversion value of the priest, thus it will be.<sup>13</sup> If, however, the person who made the vow redeems the animal,‡ he must add one fifth to†† its conversion value.

Redemption of Vowed Houses

<sup>14</sup> "If a man consecrates his house as holy to the LORD, the priest will establish its conversion value, whether good or bad. Just as the priest establishes its conversion value, thus it will stand.<sup>††15</sup> If the one who consecrates it redeems his house, he must add to it one fifth of its conversion value in silver, and it will belong to him.††

Redemption of Vowed Fields

Organizing the Census of the Israelites †

† sn: The book of Numbers is the fourth book of the Pentateuch, traditionally called the Law of Moses. It provides a record of the experience of the Israelites during the wilderness wanderings, and records the laws for the camp as they traveled from place to place. The book focuses on the difficulties of the Israelites due to their lack of faith, rebellion, and apostasy. It also records God's protection of his people from opposition from without. The book makes a fitting contribution to the collection of holy writings as it shows the spiritual and physical progression of the company of the redeemed toward the promised land. The book has to be studied in conjunction with the other books of the Pentateuch. It builds on the promises made to Abraham in Genesis and the redemption from bondage in Exodus; it completes the cultic instructions for Israel that were laid down in Leviticus, and it concerns the worship in and the movement of the tabernacle that was built in Exodus. But the information here, both legal and historical, was not the major concern in those books. The book gets its title in English (following the Greek tradition) from the two censuses taken of the people, one at the beginning of the wanderings and the other at the end (although the Hebrew title is taken from the beginning of the book, בְּמִדְבָּר)

‡‡ sn: The English word "wilderness" is workable for the Hebrew term, because it describes land that is wild. The term "desert" works if one thinks of land deserted by people. But to many modern readers "desert" suggests the idea of an arid land without growth. The word must not be pressed to mean only sand dunes; it describes land that has rocks, canyons, oases, shrubs and trees occasionally, some animal life, and of course sand. ‡‡† sn: The exact location of Mount Sinai has been debated for some time. The traditional view from very early times is that it is located in the south, Jebel Musa, south of the monastery of St. Catherine. The other plausible suggestion is Ras es-Safsafah, which is on the other end of the valley near the monastery. The mountain is also called Horeb in the Bible. The wilderness of Sinai would refer to the large plain that is at the base of the mountain. See further G. E. Wright, IDB 4:376-78; and G. I. Davies, The Way of the Wilderness. ‡‡‡ tn: The construction uses the infinitive construct of אָצַל referent (the Israelites) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §† sn: This means that the Israelites had spent nine months at Sinai, because they had arrived there in the third month following the exodus. This account does not follow a strict chronology (see Num 9:1). The difference of one month in the narrative is not a critical difference, but a literary general reference. Here begins a new section of major importance to the future of the nation – the numbering for war and for settlement. † tn: Heb "saying." A new sentence was started here in the English translation for stylistic reasons. †† tn: The construction is literally "lift up the head[s]," ( †אָרָאשׁ אֶת־רֹאשׁ

<sup>29</sup> tn: The verb is supplied. The Hebrew text simply has "in/with the number of names of those who are twenty years old and higher according to their skulls."

The descendants of Reuben, the firstborn son of Israel : According to the records of their clans and families, all the males twenty years old or older who could serve in the army were listed by name individually.<sup>21</sup> Those of them who were numbered† from the tribe of Reuben were 46,500.††

† tn: Heb "those numbered of them." The form is מִן־הַמִּנְיָן.

†† sn: There has been much discussion about the numbers in the Israelite wilderness experience. The immediate difficulty for even the casual reader is the enormous number of the population. If indeed there were 603,550 men twenty years of age and older who could fight, the total population of the exodus community counting women and children would have been well over a million, or even two million as calculated by some. This is not a figure that the Bible ever gives, but given the sizes of families the estimate would not be far off. This is a staggering number to have cross the Sea, drink from the oases, or assemble in the plain by Sinai. It is not a question of whether or not God could provide for such a number; it is rather a problem of logistics for a population of that size in that period of time. The problem is not with the text itself, but with the interpretation of the word מִן־הַמִּנְיָן.

<sup>22</sup> From the descendants of Simeon : According to the records of their clans and families, all the males numbered of them‡ twenty years old or older who could serve in the army were listed by name individually.<sup>23</sup> Those of them who were numbered from the tribe of Simeon were 59,300.<sup>24</sup> ††

From the descendants of Gad : According to the records of their clans and families, all the males twenty years old or older who could serve in the army were listed by name.<sup>25</sup> Those of them who were numbered from the tribe of Gad were 45,650.

<sup>26</sup> From the descendants of Judah : According to the records of their clans and families, all the males twenty years old or older who could serve in the army were listed by name.<sup>27</sup> Those of them who were numbered from the tribe of Judah were 74,600.

<sup>28</sup> From the descendants of Issachar : According to the records of their clans and families, all the males twenty years old or older who could serve in the army were listed by name.<sup>29</sup> Those of them who were numbered from the tribe of Issachar were 54,400.

<sup>30</sup> From the descendants of Zebulun : According to the records of their clans and families, all the males twenty years old or older who could serve in the army were listed by name.<sup>31</sup> Those of them who were numbered from the tribe of Zebulun were 57,400.

<sup>36</sup> From the descendants of Benjamin : According to the records of their clans and families, all the males twenty years old or older who could serve in the army were listed by name. <sup>37</sup> Those of them who were numbered from the tribe of Benjamin were 35,400.

<sup>38</sup> From the descendants of Dan : According to the records of their clans and families, all the males twenty years old or older who could serve in the army were listed by name. <sup>39</sup> Those of them who were numbered from the tribe of Dan were 62,700.

<sup>40</sup> From the descendants of Asher : According to the records of their clans and families, all the males twenty years old or older who could serve in the army were listed by name. <sup>41</sup> Those of them who were numbered from the tribe of Asher were 41,500.

<sup>42</sup> From† the descendants of Naphtali : According to the records of their clans and families, all the males twenty years old or older who could serve in the army were listed by name. <sup>43</sup> Those of them who were numbered from the tribe of Naphtali were 53,400.

‡‡† tn: The construction is unexpected, for Levites would be from the tribe of Levi. The note seems more likely to express that all these people were organized by tribal lineage, and so too the Levites, according to the tribe of their fathers – individual families of Levites. ‡‡‡ tc: The form in the text is הַקְּדוּמִים הַקְּדוּמִים

But they probably did not have shapes of animals in view of the prohibition in the Decalogue. The standards may have been smaller for the families than the ones for the tribes. See further K. A. Summary

But they were also appointed to be gate-keepers ( 2 Kgs 22:4; 1 Chr 9:19) in order to safeguard the purity of the place and the activities that went on there. Their offices seem to have then become hereditary in time ( 1 Sam 1:3); they even took on more priestly functions, such as pronouncing the benediction ( Deut 10:8). ### The Summary of Families

The Numbering of the Gershonites

<sup>21</sup> From Gershon came the family of the Libnites and the family of the Shimeites; these were the families of the Gershonites. <sup>22</sup> Those of them who were numbered, counting every male from a month old and upward, were 7,500. <sup>23</sup> The families of the Gershonites were to camp behind the tabernacle toward the west. <sup>24</sup> Now the leader§§† of the clan§§§ of the Gershonites was Eliasaph son of Lael.

The Numbering of the Kohathites

<sup>27</sup> From Kohath came the family of the Amramites, the family of the Izharites, the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Uzzielites; these were the blood of the Lamb and so belonged to God, but then God chose the Levites to serve in the place of the firstborn. The ritual of consecrating the firstborn son to the LORD

They were responsible for the care†† of the sanctuary.<sup>29</sup> The families of the Kohathites were to camp on the south side of the tabernacle.<sup>30</sup> Now the leader of the clan of the families of the Kohathites was Elizaphan son of Uzziel.

The Numbering of Merari

† tn: Heb "for all the service of it [them]." †† sn: Both Moses and Aaron came from this line ( 6:16-20). During the Hebrew monarchy this branch of the line of Levi was exemplary in music ( 1 Chr 6:33-48). They were also helpful to Hezekiah in his reforms ( 1 Chr 29:12-14). ‡ tn: The construction here is a little different. The Hebrew text uses the participle in construct plural: שְׁמֵרִי

§ tn: The Hebrew text has "these they the families of Merari." The independent personal pronoun has an anaphoric use, somewhat equivalent to the copula "and" (see R. J. Williams, Hebrew Syntax, 23, §115). §† tn: Heb "and all their service." This could possibly be a hendiadys: "and all their working tools." However, the parallel with v. 26 suggests this is a separate phrase.

for the needs§†† of the sanctuary and for the needs of the Israelites, but the unauthorized person who approached was to be put to death.<sup>39</sup> All who were numbered of the Levites, whom Moses and Aaron numbered by the word§† of the LORD, according to their families, every male from a month old and upward, were 22,000.§††

The Substitution for the Firstborn

<sup>44</sup> Then the LORD spoke to Moses:<sup>45</sup> "Take the Levites instead of all the firstborn males among the Israelites, and the livestock of the Levites instead of their livestock. And the Levites will be mine. I am the LORD.<sup>46</sup> And for the redemption of the 273 firstborn males of the Israelites who exceed the number of the Levites,<sup>47</sup> collect†§† five shekels for each§§† one individually; you are to collect<sup>†§§§</sup> this amount<sup>†18</sup> in the currency of the sanctuary shekel (this shekel is twenty gerahs).<sup>1948</sup> And give the money for the redemption of the excess number of them to Aaron and his sons."

The Service of the Gershonites

tn: Heb “and.”‡ sn: One would assume that he would prepare and wrap these items, but that the Kohathites would carry them to the next place. ‡† sn: The verb is simply the Qal, “do not cut off.” The context calls for a permissive nuance – “do not let them be cut off.” It was a difficult task to be handling the holy things correctly; Moses and Aaron were to see to it that they did it right and did not handle the objects, that is, Moses and Aaron were to safeguard their lives by making certain that proper procedures were followed.

‡‡‡ tn: The distributive sense is obtained by the repetition, “a man” and “a man.”§ tn: In the Hebrew text the verse has as the subject “they,” but to avoid confusion the antecedent has been clarified in the translation. §† tn: The two forms are the infinitive construct and then the noun: “to serve and for the burden.” They are to serve and they are to take the responsibility. The infinitive is explaining the verb. §†† tc: This whole clause is not in the Greek text; it is likely missing due to homoioteleuton. §‡ tn: The work of these people would have been very demanding, since the size and weight of the various curtains and courtyard hangings would have been great. For a detailed discussion of these, see the notes in the book of Exodus on the construction of the items. §†† tn: The term “whether” is supplied to introduce the enumerated parts of the explanatory phrase. §† tn: Here again is the use of the noun “burden” in the sense of the loads they were to carry (see the use of carts in Num 7:7). §‡ tn: The expression is literally “upon/at the vice of the families of the Gershonites concerning the tent of meeting. Their responsibilities will be under the authority§§† of Ithamar son of Aaron the priest. §§‡

The Service of the Merarites

Summary

<sup>34</sup> So Moses and Aaron and the leaders of the community numbered the Kohathites by their families and by clans, <sup>35</sup> from thirty years old and upward to fifty years old, everyone who entered the company for the work in the tent of meeting; <sup>36</sup> and those of them numbered by their families were 2,750. <sup>37</sup> These were those numbered from the families of the Kohathites, everyone who served in the tent of meeting, whom Moses and Aaron numbered according to the word of the LORD by the authority of Moses.

<sup>38</sup> Those numbered from the Gershonites, by their families and by their clans, <sup>39</sup> from thirty years old and upward to fifty years old, everyone who entered the company for the work in the tent of meeting – <sup>40</sup> those of them numbered by their families, by their clans, were 2,630. <sup>41</sup> These were those numbered from the families of the Gershonites, everyone who served in the tent of meeting, whom Moses and Aaron numbered according to the word of the LORD.

Or “burden.”§§‡ tn: Or “the direction” (NASB, TEV); Heb “under/ by the hand of.” The word “hand” is often used idiomatically for “power” or “authority.” So also in vv. 33, 37, 45, 48. §§§ sn: The material here suggests that Eleazar had heavier responsibilities than Ithamar, Aaron’s fourth and youngest son. It is the first indication that the Zadokite Levites would take precedence over the Ithamar Levites (see 1 Chr 24:3-6). <sup>18</sup> sn: More recent studies have concluded that these “boards” were made of two long uprights joined by cross-bars (like a ladder). They were frames rather than boards, meaning that the structure under the tent was not a solid building. It also meant that the “boards” would have been lighter to carry.

ing – <sup>44</sup> those of them numbered by their families were 3,200. <sup>45</sup> These are those numbered from the families of the Merarites, whom Moses and Aaron numbered according to the word of the LORD by the authority of Moses.

<sup>46</sup> All who were numbered of the Levites, whom Moses, Aaron, and the leaders of Israel numbered by their families and by their clans, <sup>47</sup> from thirty years old and upward to fifty years old, everyone who entered to do the work of service and the work of carrying† relating to the tent of meeting – <sup>48</sup> those of them numbered were 8,580. <sup>49</sup> According to the word of the LORD they were numbered, †† by the authority of Moses, each according to his service and according to what he was to carry. ‡ Thus were they numbered by him,†† as the LORD had commanded Moses. ‡‡

† tn: Heb "you shall assign by names the vessels of the responsibility of their burden." †† tn: The text multiplies the vocabulary of service here in the summary. In the Hebrew text the line reads literally: "everyone who came to serve the service of serving, and the service of burden." The Levites came into service in the shrine, and that involved working in the sanctuary as well as carrying it from one place to the next. ‡ tn: The verb is the simple perfect tense – "he numbered them." There is no expressed subject; therefore, the verb can be rendered as a passive. †† tn: Or "his burden." ‡‡ tn: The passive form simply reads "those numbered by him." Because of the cryptic nature of the word, some suggest reading a preterite, "and they were numbered." This is supported by the Greek, Syriac, Targum, and Vulgate. It would follow in the emendation that the relative pronoun be changed to "just as" (בְּאִשְׁמֹרֶת)

‡‡† sn: The fifth chapter falls into four main parts: separation of the unclean (vv. 1-4), restitution for sin (vv. 5-10), the jealousy ordeal (vv. 11-28), and the summary (vv. 29-31). There is a good deal of literature on the biblical theme of holiness (for which see the notes on Leviticus primarily). But with regard to this chapter, see (with caution), Mary Douglas, Purity and Danger; J. Neusner, The Idea of Purity in Ancient Judaism; and K. Milgrom, "Two Kinds of הֵאֵתֵא, אֵת," VT 26 (1976): 333-37. ‡‡‡ tn: The construction uses the Piel imperative followed by this Piel imperfect/jussive form; it is here subordinated to the preceding volitive, providing the content of the command. As the LORD had spoken§† to Moses, so the Israelites did.

verb is the Hiphil of the word "to stand." It could be rendered "station her," but that sounds too unnatural. This is a meeting between an accused person and the Judge of the whole earth. <sup>20</sup> tn: This is probably water taken from the large bronze basin in the courtyard. It is water set apart for sacred service. "Clean water" (so NEB) does not capture the sense very well, but it does have the support of the Greek that has "pure running water." That pure water would no doubt be from the bronze basin anyway. <sup>21</sup> tn: Heb "from." The preposition is used here with a partitive sense. <sup>22</sup> sn: The dust may have come from the sanctuary floor, but it is still dust, and therefore would have all the pollutants in it. <sup>23</sup> tn: The expression has been challenged. The first part, "bitter water," has been thought to mean "water of contention" (so NEB), but this is not convincing. It has some support in the versions which read "contention" and "testing," no doubt trying to fit the passage better. N. H. Snaith (Leviticus and Numbers [NCB], 129) suggests from an Arabic word that it was designed to cause an abortion – but that would raise an entirely different question, one of who the father of a child was. And that has not been introduced here. The water was "bitter" in view of the consequences it held for her if she was proven to be guilty. That is then enforced by the wordplay with the last word, the Piel participle הַמְצַרֵּים sexual relations with you, and if you have not gone astray and become defiled while under your husband's authority, may you be free from this bitter water that brings a curse.<sup>120</sup> But if you†† have gone astray while under your husband's authority, and if you have defiled yourself and some man other than your husband has had sexual relations with you...."<sup>‡21</sup> Then the priest will put the woman under the oath of the curse†† and will say‡‡ to the her, "The LORD make you an attested curse‡‡‡ among your people, ‡‡‡ if the LORD makes§ your thigh fall away§† and your abdomen swell,<sup>§†‡22</sup> and this water that causes the curse will go§† into your stomach, and make your abdomen swell and your thigh rot."§†† Then the woman must say, "Amen, amen."§† <sup>23</sup> "Then the priest will write these curses on a scroll and then scrape them off into the bitter water.<sup>§†24</sup> He will make the woman drink the bitter water that brings a curse, and the water that brings a curse will enter her to produce bitterness.<sup>25</sup> The priest will take the grain offering of suspicion from the woman's hand, wave the grain offering before the LORD, and bring it to the altar.<sup>26</sup> Then the priest will take a handful of the grain offering as its memorial portion, burn it on the altar, and afterward make the woman drink the water.<sup>27</sup> When he has made her drink the water, then, if she has defiled herself and behaved unfaithfully toward her husband, the water that brings a curse will enter her to produce bitterness – her abdomen will swell, her thigh will fall away, and the woman will become a curse among her people.<sup>28</sup> But if the woman has not defiled herself, and is clean, then she will be free of ill effects§§† and will be able to bear children.

Heb "fall away." §†† tn: The word "amen" carries the idea of "so be it," or "truly." The woman who submits to this test is willing to have the test demonstrate the examination of God. §§† sn: The words written on the scroll were written with a combination of ingredients mixed into an ink. The idea is probably that they would have been washed or flaked off into the water, so that she drank the words of the curse – it became a part of her being. §§† tn: Heb "will be free"; the words "of ill effects" have been supplied as a clarification. §§§ tn: Heb "law of jealousies."<sup>18</sup> sn: The text does not say what the consequences are. Presumably the punishment would come from God, and not from those administering the test. <sup>19</sup> tn: The word "iniquity" can also mean the guilt for the iniquity as well as the punishment of consequences for the iniquity. These categories of meanings grew up through figurative usage (metonymies). Here the idea is that if she is guilty then she must "bear the consequences."<sup>20</sup> sn: This chapter can be divided into five sections: The vow is described in vv. 1-8, then the contingencies for defilement are enumerated in vv. 9-12, then there is a discussion of discharging the vows in vv. 13-20, and then a summary in v. 21; after this is the high priestly blessing (vv. 22-27). For information on the vow, see G. B. Gray, "The Nazirite," JTS 1 (1899-1900): 201-11; Z. Weisman, "The Biblical Nazirite, Its Types and Roots," Tarbiz 36 (1967): 207-20; and W. Eichrodt, Theology of the Old Testament (OTL), 1:303-6. <sup>21</sup> tn: The formula is used here again: "a man or a woman – when he takes." The vow is open to both men and women. <sup>22</sup> tn: The vow is considered special in view of the use of the verb אָוַן "vow".

† tn: The word "other" is implied, since the woman would not be guilty of having sexual relations with her own husband. †† sn: Although there would be stress involved, a woman who was innocent would have nothing to hide, and would be confident. The wording of the priest's oath is actually designed to enable the potion to keep her from harm and not produce the physical effects it was designed to do. ‡ tn: The pronoun is emphatic – "but you, if you have gone astray." ‡† tn: This is an example of the rhetorical device known as aposiopesis, or "sudden silence." The sentence is broken off due to the intensity or emphasis of the moment. The reader is left to conclude what the sentence would have said. ‡‡ sn: For information on such curses, see M. R. Lehmann, "Biblical Oaths," ZAW 81 (1969): 74-92; A. C. Thiselton, "The Supposed Power of Words in the Biblical Writings," JTS 25 (1974): 283-99; and F. C. The idea of the abdomen swelling has been reinterpreted by NEB to mean "fall away." If this interpretation stands, then the idea is that the woman has become pregnant, and that has aroused the suspicion of the husband for some reason. R. K. Harrison (Numbers [WEC], 111-13) discusses a variety of other explanations for diseases and conditions that might be described by these terms. He translates it with "miscarriage," but leaves open what the description might actually be. Cf. NRSV "makes your uterus drop, your womb discharge."

The word seems linked to the verb "to be clear," and so may mean the thin skin of the grape. The reason for the strictness with these two words in this verse is uncertain. We know the actual meanings of the words, and the combination must form a merism here, meaning no part of the grape could be eaten. Abstaining from these common elements of food was to be a mark of commitment to the LORD

§†† tc: The parallel expression in v. 8 ("all the days of his separation") lacks the word "vow." This word is also absent in v. 5 in a few medieval Hebrew manuscripts. The presence of the word in v. 5 may be due to dittography. §† sn: There is an interesting parallel between this prohibition and the planting of trees. ### Fulfilling the Vows view of the nature of this case – the prescribed ritual without confession – the idea is more that he failed to keep the vow's stipulations in this strange circumstance than that he committed intentional sin. † tn: The verb simply means "to consecrate," but because it refers to a vow that was interrupted, it must here mean to "reconsecrate." †† tn: The same idea is to be found now in the use of the word גָּרַד

‡ tn: The necessity of bringing the reparation offering was due to the reinstatement into the vow that had been interrupted. ‡† tn: Heb "will fall"; KJV "shall be lost"; ASV, NASB, NRSV "shall be void." ‡‡ tc: The similar expression in v. 9 includes the word "head" (i.e., "his consecrated head"). The LXX includes this word in v. 12 as well. ‡‡† tn: The Hebrew text has "he/one shall bring him"; since there is no expressed subject, this verb should be taken in the passive sense – "he shall be brought." Since the context suggests an obligatory nuance, the translation "he must be brought" has been used. Some scholars solve the problem by emending the Hebrew text here, but there is no manuscript evidence to support the emendation. ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "he shall offer his offering" – the object is a cognate accusative. § sn: The peace offering וַלְמִזְבֵּחַ

‡† tn: The suffixes in the MT are plural in this verse, whereas in v. 17 they are singular. This seems to be a matter of stylistic choice, referring to whomever may be taking the vow. ‡†† sn: The offerings for the termination of the Nazirite vow would not have been inexpensive. This indicates that the person making the short term vow may have had income, or have come from a wealthier section of society. Short term vows had to be considered carefully as this ruling required a good amount of food to be brought. §† tn: "all these" is supplied as the object. §†† tn: Heb "make." ‡† tn: The "peace offering" is usually written as "a sacrifice of peace" ( וַלְמִזְבֵּחַ take the hair from his consecrated head and put it on the fire‡† where the peace offering is burning. ‡††19 And the priest must take the boiled shoulder of the ram, one cake made without yeast from the basket, and one wafer made without yeast, and put them on the hands of the Nazirite after he has shaved his consecrated head; ‡††20 then the priest must wave them as a wave offering‡‡‡ before the LORD ; it is a holy portion for the priest, together with the breast of the wave offering and the thigh of the raised offering.<sup>18</sup> After this the Nazirite may drink<sup>19</sup> wine.'

וַלְמִזְבֵּחַ

‡† tn: Some versions simply interpret this to say that he shaves his hair, for it is the hair that is the sign of the consecration to God. But the text says he shaves his consecrated head. The whole person is obviously consecrated to God – not just the head. But the symbolic act of cutting the hair shows that the vow has been completed (see Acts 21:23-24). The understanding of the importance of the hair in the ancient world has been the subject of considerable study over the years (see R. de Vaux, Ancient Israel, 436; and J. A. Thompson, "Numbers," New Bible Commentary: Revised, 177). ‡†† sn: Some commentators see this burning of the hair as an offering (McNeile, Numbers, 35; G. B. Gray, Numbers [ICC], 68). But others probably with more foundation see it as destroying something that has served a purpose, something that if left alone might be venerated (see R. de Vaux, Israel, 436). ‡†† tn: Heb "which is under the peace offering." The verse does not mean that the hair had to be put under that sacrifice and directly on the fire. ‡‡‡ tn: The line does not include the word "head"; it literally has "after the consecrating of himself his consecrated [head]." The infinitive construct is here functioning in the temporal clause with the suffix as the subject and the object following. 18 sn: The ritual of lifting the hands filled with the offering and waving them in the presence of the LORD

19 sn: The "wave offering" may be interpreted as a "special gift" to be transferred to the LORD

20 tn: The imperfect tense here would then have the nuance of permission. It is not an instruction at this point; rather, the prohibition has been lifted and the person is free to drink wine. 21 tn: Actually, "law" here means a whole set of laws, the basic rulings on this topic. 22 tn: Heb "whatever else his hand is able to provide." The imperfect tense has the nuance of potential imperfect – "whatever he can provide."

The Priestly Benediction †

† tn: Heb "according to the vow that he vows, so he must do."
 †† sn: This brief section records the blessing of the priest, especially the high priest after he emerges from the holy of holies to bless the people (see Lev 9:22). The two main elements in the oracle are "grace and peace." It is probable that the Apostle Paul based his salutations on this oracle. For additional information, see L. J. Liebreich, "The Songs of Ascent and the Priestly Blessing," JBL 74 (1955): 33-36; P. D. Miller, "The Blessing of God: An Interpretation of Num 6:22-27," Int 29 (1975): 240-51; and A. Murtonen, "The Use and Meaning of the Words lébarek and bérahak in the Old Testament," VT 9 (1959): 158-77. † tn: Or "thus." †† tn: The Piel imperfect has the nuance of instruction. The particle "thus" explains that the following oracle is the form to use. ‡‡ tn: Here is the only use of the verb אָמַר

‡‡† tn: The short blessing uses the jussive throughout, here the Piel jussive with a pronominal suffix. While the jussive has quite a range of nuances, including wish, desire, prayer, or greeting, the jussives here are stronger. The formal subject of the verb is the LORD

‡‡† tn: The verb "to keep" concerns the divine protection of the people; its basic meaning is "to exercise great care over," "to guard," or "to give attention to" (see TWOT 2:939). No doubt the priestly blessing informed the prayer and promise that makes up Ps 121, for the verb occurs six times in the eight verses. So in addition to the divine provision ("bless" basically means "enrich" in a number of ways) there is the assurance of divine protection. § tn: Whereas the first line of the blessing had three Hebrew words, the second has five, and the third has seven. In this second line and the following third, the blessing takes the form of an emblem followed by the truth. For the LORD

§† tn: The last line of the blessing also has first the image and then the parallel interpretation – for God to lift up his face is for God to give peace. The idea of the fallen face is one of anger (see Gen 4:6,7); and the idea of the hidden face is that of withholding support, favor, or peace (see Deut 31:18; Ps 30:8; Ps 44:25). If God lifts his face toward his people, it means he has given them peace – peace, prosperity, completeness, health, safety, general well-being, and the like. §†† tn: The idea of their putting the name of Yahweh on the people is somewhat problematic. The pronouncing of the name of Yahweh in this context over the people was

They were the leaders of the tribes; they were the ones who had been supervising§† the numbering. <sup>3</sup> They brought§† their offering before the LORD, six covered carts§§† and twelve oxen – one cart for every two of the leaders, and an ox for each one; and they presented them in front of the tabernacle.

The Distribution of the Gifts

<sup>6</sup> So Moses accepted the carts and the oxen and gave them to the Levites. <sup>7</sup> He gave two carts and four oxen to the Gershonites, as their service required; <sup>8</sup> and he gave four carts and eight oxen to the Merarites, as their service required, under the authority<sup>21</sup>

"Putting the name on them" is an expression that emphasizes the truth that he is their God and they are his people or that having his name is having his blessing. §† sn: This long and repetitious chapter has several parts to it: the introduction (vv. 1-3), the assigning of gifts (vv. 4-9), the time of presentation (vv. 10-11), and then the tribes (vv. 12-83), and then a summary (vv. 84-89). §†† tn: The construction of this line begins with the temporal indicator (traditionally translated "and it came to pass") and then after the idiomatic "in the day of" (= "when") uses the Piel infinitive construct from הָלַךְ

The Time of Presentation

The Tribal Offerings

<sup>18</sup> On the second day Nethanel son of Zuar, leader of Issachar, presented an offering.<sup>19</sup> He offered for his offering one silver platter weighing 130 shekels and one silver sprinkling bowl weighing 70, both according to the sanctuary shekel, each of them full of fine flour mixed with olive oil as a grain offering;<sup>20</sup> one gold pan weighing 10 shekels, full of incense;<sup>21</sup> one young bull, one ram, and one male lamb in its first year, for a burnt offering;<sup>22</sup> one male goat for a purification offering;<sup>23</sup> and for the sacrifice of peace offerings : two bulls, five rams, five male goats, and five male lambs

‡‡ tn: The direct object, "gifts," is implied but not actually stated in the Hebrew text. It has been supplied in the translation for stylistic reasons and for clarity. ‡‡† tn: The sign of the accusative here must indicate an adverbial accusative and not the direct object; they offered their gifts for the dedication of the altar. ‡‡‡ sn: Some commentators take the word "dedication" in the sense of a dedication gift, and so make it the direct object. Many modern scholars assume that this is a late word, belonging only in P, the Chronicler, and the heading of Ps 30 (a Davidic psalm). § tn: The adverbial clause uses the Niphal infinitive construct as the main verb. The word is the well-known נשָׁח

The same phrase occurs in vv. 11 and 12. §†† tn: The distributive sense is achieved by repetition: "one leader for the day, one leader for the day." §‡ sn: The tribe of Judah is listed first. It seems that it had already achieved a place of prominence based on the patriarchal promise of the Messiahship in Judah ( Gen 49:10).

Summary

<sup>84</sup> This was the dedication for the altar from the leaders of Israel, when it was anointed : twelve silver platters, twelve silver sprinkling bowls, and twelve gold pans. <sup>85</sup> Each silver platter weighed 130 shekels, and each silver sprinkling bowl weighed 70 shekels. All the silver of the vessels weighed 2,400 shekels, according to the sanctuary shekel. <sup>86</sup> The twelve gold pans full of incense weighed 10 shekels each, according to the sanctuary shekel; all the gold of the pans weighed 120 shekels. <sup>87</sup> All the animals for the burnt offering were 12 young bulls, 12 rams, 12 male lambs in their first year, with their grain offering, and 12 male goats for a purification offering. <sup>88</sup> All the animals for the sacrifice for the peace offering were 24 young bulls, 60 rams, 60 male goats, and 60 lambs in their first year. These were the dedication offerings for the altar after it was anointed. †

The wave offering was part of the ritual of the peace offering and indicated the priest's portion being presented to God in a lifted, waving motion for all to see. The Levites were going to be in the sanctuary to serve the LORD

18 tn: The construction emphasizes the spiritual service of the Levites, using the infinitive construct of מְדַבֵּר

the Levites from among the Israelites, and the Levites will be mine.

<sup>15</sup> "After this, the Levites will go in† to do the work †† of the tent of meeting. So you must cleanse them‡ and offer them like a wave offering. <sup>‡†16</sup> For they are entirely given‡‡ to me from among the Israelites. I have taken them for myself instead of‡‡‡ all who open the womb, the firstborn sons of all the Israelites. <sup>17</sup> For all the firstborn males among the Israelites are mine, both humans and animals; when I destroyed‡‡‡ all the firstborn in the land of Egypt I set them apart for myself. <sup>18</sup> So I have taken the Levites instead of all the firstborn sons among the Israelites. <sup>19</sup> I have given the Levites as a gift to Aaron and his sons from among the Israelites, to do the work for the Israelites in the tent of meeting, and to make atonement for the Israelites, so there will be no plague among the Israelites when the Israelites come near the sanctuary." §

‡‡ tc: The Greek text adds "before the LORD" ‡†† tn: As before, the emphasis is obtained by repeating the passive participle: "given, given to me." ‡‡‡ tn: Or "as substitutes" for all the firstborn of the Israelites. § tn: The idiomatic "on the day of" precedes the infinitive construct of נָכַח

§† sn: The firstborn were those that were essentially redeemed from death in Egypt when the blood was put on the doors. So in the very real sense they belonged to God ( Exod 13:2,12). The firstborn was one who stood in special relationship to the father, being the successive offspring. Here, the Levites would stand in for the firstborn in that special role and special relationship. God also made it clear that the nation of Israel was his firstborn son ( Exod 4:22-23), and so they stood in that relationship before all the nations. The tribe of Reuben was to have been the firstborn tribe, but in view of the presumptuous attempt to take over the leadership through pagan methods ( Gen 35:22; 49:3-4), was passed over. The tribes of Levi and Simeon were also put down for their ancestors' activities, but sanctuary service was still given to Levi.

The Work of the Levites

It must be remembered that the material in vv. 7-9 is chronologically earlier than vv. 1-6, as the notices in the text will make clear. The two main discussions here are the last major issues to be reiterated before dealing with the commencement of the journey. <sup>18</sup> tn: The temporal clause is formed with the infinitive construct of עָשָׂה

sn: The pronouncement of such a person’s penalty is that his life will be cut off from his people. There are at least three possible interpretations for this: physical death at the hand of the community (G. B. Gray, Numbers [ICC], 84-85), physical and/or spiritual death at the hand of God (J. Milgrom, “A Prolegomenon to Lev 17:11,” JBL 90 [1971]: 154-55), or excommunication or separation from the community (R. A. Cole, Exodus [TOTC], 109). The direct intervention of God seem to be the most likely in view of the lack of directions for the community to follow. Excommunication from the camp in the wilderness would have been tantamount to a death sentence by the community, and so there really are just two views. <sup>19</sup> tn: The word for “sin” here should be interpreted to mean the consequences of his sin (so a metonymy of effect). Whoever willingly violates the Law will have to pay the consequences. <sup>20</sup> tn: The words translated “resident foreigner” and “live” are from the same Hebrew root, qān

The Hebrew text has “there will be to you,” which is the way of expressing possession in Hebrew. Since this is legal instruction, the imperfect tense must be instruction or legislation. <sup>23</sup> tn: Or “you must have one statute.” <sup>24</sup> tn: The conjunction is used here to specify the application of the law: “and for the resident foreigner, and for the one...” indicates “both for the resident foreigner and the one who...” <sup>25</sup> sn: This section ( Num 9:15-23) recapitulates the account in Exod 40:34 but also contains some additional detail about the cloud that signaled Israel’s journeys. Here again material from the book of Exodus is used to explain more of the laws for the camp in motion. <sup>26</sup> tn: Heb “and/nor on the day.” <sup>27</sup> tn: The construction uses the temporal expression with the Hiphil infinitive construct followed by the object, the tabernacle. “On the day of the setting up of the tabernacle” leaves the subject unstated, and so the entire clause may be expressed in the passive voice. <sup>28</sup> sn: The explanation and identification of this cloud has been a subject of much debate. Some commentators have concluded that it was identical with the cloud that led the Israelites away from Egypt and through the sea, but others have made a more compelling case that this is a different phenomenon (see ZPEB 4:796). A number of modern scholars see the description as a retrojection from later, perhaps Solomonic times (see G. H. Davies, IDB 3:817). Others have tried to connect it with Ugaritic terminology, but unconvincingly (see T. W. Mann, “The Pillar of Cloud in the Reed Sea Narrative,” JBL 90 [1971]:

<sup>20</sup> When§ the cloud remained over the tabernacle a number of days, §† they remained camped according to the LORD's commandment,§†† and according to the LORD's commandment they would journey. <sup>21</sup> And when§‡ the cloud remained only§‡‡ from evening until morning, when the cloud was taken up§† the following morning, then they traveled on. It thereafter spread over the whole tabernacle. † tn: The imperfect tense in this and the next line should be classified as a customary imperfect, stressing incomplete action but in the past time – something that used to happen, or would happen. †† tn: Heb "like the appearance of fire." ‡ tc: The MT lacks the words "by day," but a number of ancient versions have this reading (e.g., Greek, Syriac, Tg. Ps.-J., Latin Vulgate). ‡† tn: The verb in this initial temporal clause is the Niphal infinitive construct. ‡‡ tn: Heb "in the place where it settled there"; the relative clause modifies the noun "place," and the resumptive adverb completes the related idea – "which it settled there" means "where it settled." ‡‡† tn: Heb "at the mouth of" (so also in vv. 20, 23). ‡‡‡ tn: Heb "all the days of – that the cloud settled over the tabernacle." "All" is the adverbial accusative of time telling how long they camped in one spot – all. The word is then qualified by the genitive of the thing measured – "all of the days" – and this in turn is qualified by a noun clause functioning as a genitive after "days of." § tn: This is the same Hebrew expression that was used earlier for the Levites "keeping their charge" or more clearly, "fulfilling their obligations" to take care of the needs of the people and the sanctuary. It need not be translated, but can simply be taken to underscore the direct imperative. <sup>21</sup> tn: The imperfect tense is again instruction or legislation. <sup>22</sup> sn: The instructions are not clearly spelled out here. The Greek text completes the description by adding them, making a full schedule of the departure of the groups of tribes. The Greek is not likely to be original, however, since it carries all the signs of addition to complete the text, making a smooth, full reading. The MT is to be preferred; it apparently used two of the groups to give the idea.

The Journey From Sinai to Kadesh§†

Judah Begins the Journey

† tn: The Hebrew text has “they shall blow an alarm”; the sentence without a formal subject should be taken as a passive idea.

†† tn: There is no expressed subject in the initial temporal clause. It simply says, “and in the assembling the assembly.” But since the next verb is the second person of the verb, that may be taken as the intended subject here. ‡ sn: The signal for moving camp was apparently different in tone and may have been sharper notes or a different sequence. It was in some way distinguishable. ‡† tn: Both the “adversary” and “opposes” come from the same root: צָנַר

‡‡ tn: The Niphal perfect in this passage has the passive nuance and not a reflexive idea – the Israelites would be spared because God remembered them. ‡‡† tn: The conjunction may be taken as explicative or exegetical, and so rendered “namely; even; that is,” or it may be taken as emphatic conjunction, and translated “especially.” ‡‡‡ tn: The vav (ו)

§ tn: The form is the perfect tense with vav (ו)

§† tn: The verb “to be” (הָיָה)

§†† sn: This section is somewhat mechanical: It begins with an introduction (vv. 11, 12), and then begins with Judah (vv. 13-17), followed by the rest of the tribes (vv. 18-27), and finally closes with a summary (v. 28). The last few verses (vv. 29-36) treat the departure of Hobab. §† tc: Smr inserts a lengthy portion from Deut 1:6-8, expressing the command for Israel to take the land from the Amorites. tn: The expression is difficult; it is מִשְׁכַּן הָעֵדוּת

§†† sn: The verb is the same as the noun: “they journeyed on their journeyings.” This underscores the point of their continual traveling. §† tn: Heb “mouth.”

<sup>15</sup> Over the company of the tribe of Issacharites was Nathanel son of Zuar,<sup>16</sup> and over the company of the tribe of the Zebulunites was Elion son of Helon.<sup>17</sup>

Then the tabernacle was dismantled, and the sons of Gershon and the sons of Merari set out, carrying the tabernacle.

Journey Arrangements for the Tribes

<sup>18</sup> The standard of the camp of Reuben set out according to their companies; over his company was Elizur son of Shedeur.<sup>19</sup> Over the company of the tribe of the Simeonites was Shelumiel son of Zurishaddai,<sup>20</sup> and over the company of the tribe of the Gadites was Eliasaph son of Deuel.<sup>21</sup> And the Kohathites set out, carrying the articles for the sanctuary;§§† the tabernacle was to be set up§§† before they arrived.<sup>§§§22</sup> And the standard of the camp of the Ephraimites set out according to their companies; over his company was Elishama son of Ammihud.<sup>23</sup> Over the company of the tribe of the Manassehites was Gamaliel son of Pedahzur,<sup>24</sup> and over the company of the tribe of Benjaminites was Abidan son of Gideon.

The Appeal to Hobab<sup>21</sup>

<sup>29</sup> Moses said to Hobab son of Reuel, the Midianite, Moses' father-in-law,<sup>22</sup> “We are journeying to the place about which the LORD said, ‘I will give it to you.’ Come with us and we will treat you well,<sup>23</sup> for the LORD

§† tn: Heb “hand.” §§† sn: The “standard” (לָגָד)

§§† tn: Heb “carrying the sanctuary,” a metonymy of whole for parts, representing all the holy objects that were located in the sanctuary. §§§ tn: The verb is the third person plural form; without an expressed subject it is treated as a passive. 18 tn: Heb “against their coming.” 19 tn: The MT uses a word that actually means “assembler,” so these three tribes made up a strong rear force recognized as the assembler of all the tribes. 20 tn: Or “journeyings of.” 21 tn: The verb is the preterite with vav (ו)

22 sn: For additional bibliography for this short section, see W. F. Albright, “Jethro, Hobab, and Reuel in Early Hebrew Tradition,” CBQ 25 (1963): 1-11; G. W. Coats, “Moses in Midian,” JBL 92 (1973): 3-10; B. Mazar, “The Sanctuary of Arad and the Family of Hobab the Kenite,” JNES 24 (1965): 297-303; and T. C. Mitchell, “The Meaning of the Noun hEtn in the Old Testament,” VT 19 (1969): 93-112. 23 sn: There is a problem with the identity of Hobab. The MT says that he has promised good things† for Israel.”<sup>30</sup> But Hobab†† said to him, “I will not go, but I will go instead to my own land and to my kindred.”<sup>31</sup> Moses‡ said, “Do not leave us,‡† because you know places for us to camp in the wilderness, and you could be our guide. <sup>‡‡32</sup> And if you come with us, it is certain‡‡‡ that whatever good things the LORD will favor us with, we will share with you as well.”

is the son of Reuel, making him the brother-in-law of Moses. But Judg 4:11 says he is the father-in-law. In Judg 1:16; 4:11 Hobab is traced to the Kenites, but in Exod 3:1 and 18:1 Jethro (Reuel) is priest of Midian. Jethro is identified with Reuel on the basis of Exod 2:18 and 3:1, and so Hobab becomes Moses’ <sup>חַוְבָב</sup>

God had provided for the people, but even in that provision they were not satisfied, for they remembered other foods they had in Egypt. No doubt there was not the variety of foods in the Sinai that might have been available in Egypt, but their life had been bitter bondage there as well. They had cried to the LORD

‡ tn: The mixed multitude (or "rabble," so NASB, NIV, NRSV; NLT "foreign rabble") is the translation of an unusual word, רֶבֶב־אֲרָבִים

†† tn: The Hebrew simply uses the cognate accusative, saying "they craved a craving" ( אָרְבָּו וְרָבִיב )

††† tc: The Greek and the Latin versions read "and they sat down" for "and they returned," involving just a change in vocalization (which they did not have). This may reflect the same expression in Judg 20:26. But the change does not improve this verse. tn: The Hebrew text uses a verbal hendiadys here, one word serving as an adverb for the other. It literally reads "and they returned and they wept," which means they wept again. Here the weeping is put for the complaint, showing how emotionally stirred up the people had become by the craving. The words throughout here are metonymies. The craving is a metonymy of cause, for it would have then led to expressions (otherwise the desires would not have been known). And the weeping is either a metonymy of effect, or of adjunct, for the actual complaints follow. †††† tn: The Hebrew expresses the strong wish or longing idiomatically: "Who will give us flesh to eat?" It is a rhetorical expression not intended to be taken literally, but merely to give expression to the longing they had. See GKC 476 §151. a.1. ††††† tn: The perfect tense here expresses the experience of a state of mind. sn: As with all who complain in such situations, their memory was selective. What Moses is claiming is that because he has been given this burden God did not show him favor. <sup>21</sup> sn: The questions Moses asks are rhetorical. He is actually affirming that they are not his people, that he did not produce them, but now is to support them. His point is that God produced this nation, but has put the burden of caring for their needs on him. <sup>22</sup> tn: The verb means "to beget, give birth to." But there is no strong evidence for this (see K. L. Barker, "Zechariah," EBC 7:605-6). In fact there is no consensus among scholars as to the origin and meaning of the verb "prophesy" or the noun "prophet." It has something to do with speech, being God's spokesman or spokeswoman or making predictions or authoritative utterances or ecstatic utterances. It certainly does mean that the same Holy Spirit, the same divine provision that was for Moses to enable him to do the things that God had commanded him to do, was now given to them. It would have included wisdom and power with what they were saying and doing – in a way that was visible and demonstrable to the people! The people needed to know that the same provision was given to these men, authenticating their leadership among the clans. And so it could not simply be a change in their understanding and wisdom. ‡† tn: The final verb of the clause stresses that this was not repeated: "they did not add" is the literal rendering of וְלֹא יִסְפוּ

They were ultimately driven out by Caleb. †† sn: The text now provides a brief historical aside for the readers. Zoan was probably the city of Tanis, although that is disputed today by some scholars. It was known in Egypt in the New Kingdom as “the fields of Tanis,” which corresponded to the “fields of Zoar” in the Hebrew Bible ( Ps 78:12, 43). ‡ tn: The word is related etymologically to the verb for “slip, slide, bend, totter.” This would fit the use very well. A pole that would not bend would be hard to use to carry things, but a pole or stave that was flexible would serve well. †† tn: The verb is rendered as a passive because there is no expressed subject. ‡† tn: Or “Wadi Eshcol.” The translation “brook” is too generous; the Hebrew term refers to a river bed, a ravine or valley through which torrents of rain would rush in the rainy season; at other times it might be completely dry. ‡†† tn: The word “Eshcol” is drawn from the Hebrew expression concerning the “cluster of grapes.” The word is probably retained in the name Burj Haskeh, two miles north of Damascus. ‡†† tn: The construction literally has “and they went and they entered,” which may be smoothed out as a verbal hendiadys, the one verb modifying the other. § sn: Kadesh is Ain Qadeis, about 50 miles (83 km) south of Beer Sheba. It is called Kadesh-barnea in Num 32:8. §† tn: Heb “They brought back word”; the verb is the Hiphil preterite of שׁוּב §†† tn: Heb “told him and said.” The referent (Moses) has been specified in the translation for clarity. §† tn: The relative clause modifies “the land.” It is constructed with the relative and the verb: “where you sent us.” §†† sn: This is the common expression for the material abundance of the land (see further, F. 24 sn: The expression has been interpreted in a number of ways by commentators, such as that the land was infertile, that the Canaanites were cannibals, that it was a land filled with warlike dispositions, or that it denotes a land geared for battle. It may be that they intended the land to seem infertile and insecure. 25 tn: Heb “in its midst.” 26 tc: The Greek version uses gigantes (“giants”) to translate “the Nephilim,” but it does not retain the clause “the sons of Anak are from the Nephilim.” sn: The Nephilim are the legendary giants of antiquity. They are first discussed in Gen 6:4. This forms part of the pessimism of the spies' report. 27 tn: Heb “in our eyes.” 28 tn: Heb “in their eyes.” 29 sn: This chapter forms part of the story already begun. There are three major sections here: dissatisfaction with the reports (vv. 1-10), the threat of divine punishment (vv. 11-38), and the defeat of the Israelites (vv. 39-45). See K. D. Sakenfeld, “The Problem of Divine Forgiveness in Num 14,” CBQ 37 (1975): 317-30; also J. R. Bartlett, “The Use of the Word אָבַל verbs “lifted up their voice and cried” form a hendiadys; the idiom of raising the voice means that they cried aloud. 31 tn: There are a number of things that the verb “to weep” or “wail” can connote. It could reflect joy, grief, lamentation, or repentance, but here it reflects fear, hopelessness, or vexation at the thought of coming all this way and being defeated by the Canaanite armies. See Judg 20:23, 26. 32 tn: The Hebrew verb “to murmur” is מָוַן

5 Then Moses and Aaron fell down with their faces to the ground before the whole assembled community of the Israelites. 6 And Joshua son of Nun and Caleb son of Jephunneh, two of those who had investigated the land, tore their garments. 7 They said to the whole community of the Israelites, "The land we passed through to investigate is an exceedingly good land. 8 If the LORD delights in us, then he will bring us into this land and give it to us - a land that is flowing with milk and honey. 9 Only do not rebel against the LORD, and do not fear the people of the land, for they are bread for us. Their protection has turned aside from them, but the LORD is with us. Do not fear them!"

10 However, the whole community threatened to stone them. But the glory of the LORD appeared to all the Israelites at the tent of meeting.

Because of the climate the milk would thicken quickly and become curds, eaten with bread or turned into butter. The honey mentioned here is the wild honey (see Deut 32:13; Judg 14:8-9). It signified sweetness, or the finer things of life ( Ezek 3:3). §†† sn: The expression must indicate that they could destroy the enemies as easily as they could eat bread. §† tn: Heb "their shade." The Punishment from God

11 The LORD said to Moses, "How long will this people despise me, and how long will they not believe in me, in spite of the signs that I have done among them? 12 I will strike them with the pestilence, and I will disinherit them; I will make you into a nation that is greater and mightier than they!"

13 Moses said to the LORD, "When the Egyptians hear it - for you brought up this people by your power from among them - 14 then they will tell it to the inhabitants of this land. They have heard that you, LORD, are among this people, that you, LORD, are seen face to face, 20 that your cloud stands over them, and that you go before them by day in a pillar of cloud and in a pillar of fire by night. 15 If you kill this entire people at once, 22 then the nations that have heard of your fame will say, 16 'Because the LORD was not able to bring this people into the land that he swore to them, he killed them in the wilderness.' 17 So now, let the power of my Lord be great, just as you have said, 18 'The LORD is slow to anger and abounding in loyal love, 24 forgiving iniquity and transgression, 25 but by no means clearing the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers on the children until the third and fourth generations.' 27 Please forgive the iniquity of this people according to your great loyal love, 29 just as you

20 Then the LORD said, "I have forgiven them as you asked. 21 But truly, as I live, all the earth will be filled with the glory of the LORD. 22 For all the people have seen my glory and my signs that I did in Egypt and in the wilderness, and yet have tempted me now these ten times, and have not obeyed me, 23 they will by no means see the land that I swore to their fathers, nor will any of them who despised me see it. 24 Only my servant Caleb, because he had a different spirit and has followed me fully - I will bring him into the land where he had gone, and his descendants will possess it. 25 (Now the Amalekites and the Canaanites were living in the valleys.) Tomorrow, turn and journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea."

The main verb is deleted from the line, "how long...this evil community." The intensity of the emotion is the reason for the ellipsis. §‡ sn: It is worth mentioning in passing that this is one of the Rabbinic proof texts for having at least ten men to form a congregation and have prayer. If God called ten men (the bad spies) a "congregation," then a congregation must have ten men. But here the word "community/congregation" refers in this context to the people of Israel as a whole, not just to the ten spies. §†† sn: Here again is the oath that God swore in his wrath, an oath he swore by himself, that they would not enter the land. The only exceptions are Caleb son of Jephunneh and Joshua son of Nun. 31 But I will bring in your little ones, whom you said would become victims of war, 18 and they will enjoy the land that you have despised. 32 But as for you, your dead bodies will fall in this wilderness, 33 and your children will wander in the wilderness forty years and suffer for your unfaithfulness, 21 until your dead bodies lie finished in the wilderness. 34 According to the number of the days you have investigated this land, forty days - one day for a year - you will suffer for your iniquities, forty years, and you will know what it means to thwart me. 35 I, the LORD, have said, "I will surely do so to all this evil congregation that has gathered together against me. In this wilderness they will be finished, and there they will die!"

36 The men whom Moses sent to investigate the land, who returned and made the whole community murmur against him by producing an evil report about the land, 37 those men who produced the evil report about the land, died by the plague before the LORD. 38 But Joshua son of Nun and Caleb son of Jephunneh, who were among the men who went to investigate the land, lived. 39 When Moses told these things to all the Israelites, the people mourned greatly.

Rules for First Fruits

Rules for Unintentional Offenses ††

22 “If you‡†† sin unintentionally and do not observe all these commandments that the LORD has spoken to Moses – 23 all that the LORD has commanded you by the authority‡†† of Moses, from the day that the LORD commanded Moses and continuing through your future generations – 24 then if anything is done unintentionally‡ without the knowledge of‡†† the community, the whole community must prepare one young bull for a burnt offering – for a pleasing aroma to the LORD – along with its grain offering and its customary drink offering, and one male goat for a purification offering. 25 And the priest is to make atonement‡†† for the

See those rulings in Lev 4-7 for all the details. Some biblical scholars view the rules in Leviticus as more elaborate and therefore later. ### Rules for Tassels

In either case, there is no exclusion from being cut off. † sn: The point is that the person's iniquity remains with him – he must pay for his sin. The judgment of God in such a case is both appropriate and unavoidable. †† tn: The preterite of the verb "to be" is here subordinated to the next, parallel verb form, to form a temporal clause. ‡ sn: For this brief passage, see A. Phillips, "The Case of the Woodgatherer Reconsidered," VT 19 (1969): 125-28; J. Weingreen, "The Case of the Woodgatherer (Numbers XV 32-36)," VT 16 (1966): 361-64; and B. J. Bamberger, "Revelations of Torah after Sinai," HUCA 16 (1941): 97-113. Weingreen argues that there is something of the Rabbinic method of setting a fence around the Law here; in other words, if this sin were not punished, the Law would have been violated in greater ways. Gathering of wood, although seemingly harmless, is done with intent to kindle fire, and so reveals a culpable intent. ‡† tn: The sentence begins with the emphatic use of the infinitive absolute with the verb in the Hophal imperfect: "he shall surely be put to death." Why then do you exalt yourselves above the community of the LORD?"

<sup>4</sup> When Moses heard it he fell down with his face to the ground. <sup>185</sup> Then he said to Korah and to all his company, "In the morning the LORD will make known who are his, and who is holy. He will cause that person<sup>19</sup> to approach him; the person he has chosen he will cause to approach him. <sup>6</sup> Do this, Korah, you and all your company: <sup>20</sup> Take censers, <sup>7</sup> put fire in them, and set incense on them before the LORD tomorrow, and the man whom the LORD chooses will be holy. The whole chapter is a marvelous account of a massive rebellion against the leaders that concludes with reconciliation. For further study see G. Hort, "The Death of Qorah," ABR 7 (1959): 2-26; and J. The Judgment on the Rebels

The usage here is certainly the first, and very likely the second as well. A translation of "pit" would not be inappropriate. Since they will go down there alive, it is likely that they will sense the deprivation and the separation from the land above. See H. W. Robinson, Inspiration and Revelation in the Old Testament; N. J. Tromp, Primitive Conceptions of Death and the Netherworld in the Old Testament (BibOr 21), 21-23; and A. The Atonement for the Rebellion

So he placed incense on the coals and made atonement for the people. <sup>48</sup> He stood between the dead and the living, and the plague was stopped. <sup>49</sup> Now 14,700 people died in the plague, in addition to those who died in the event with Korah. <sup>50</sup> Then Aaron returned to Moses at the entrance of the tent of meeting, and the plague was stopped. ††

The Memorial

<sup>10</sup> The LORD said to Moses, "Bring Aaron's staff back before the testimony to be preserved for a sign to the rebels, so that you may bring their murmurings to an end§§† before me, that they will not die." <sup>§§§11</sup> So Moses did as the LORD commanded him – this is what he did.

The chapter seems to fall into four units: responsibilities of priests (vv. 1-7), their portions (vv. 8-19), responsibilities of Levites (vv. 20-24), and instructions for Levites (vv. 25-32). 23 tn: Heb "your father's house." 24 sn: The responsibility for the sanctuary included obligations relating to any violation of the sanctuary. Since the priests and Levites come near all the time, they risk violating ritual laws more than any. So, with the great privileges come great responsibilities. The bottom line is that they were responsible for the sanctuary. 25 sn: The verb forms a wordplay on the name Levi, and makes an allusion to the naming of the tribe Levi by Leah in the book of Genesis. There Leah hoped that with the birth of Levi her husband would be attached to her. ### Instructions for the Levites

<sup>25</sup> The LORD spoke to Moses: <sup>26</sup> “ You are to speak to the Levites, and you must tell them, ‘When you receive from the Israelites the tithe that I have given you from them as your inheritance, then you are to offer up† from it as a raised offering to the LORD a tenth of the tithe. <sup>27</sup> And your raised offering will be credited†† to you as though it were grain from the threshing floor or as new wine‡ from the winepress. <sup>28</sup> Thus you are to offer up a raised offering to the LORD of all your tithes which you receive from the Israelites; and you must give the LORD’s raised offering from it to Aaron the priest. <sup>29</sup> From all your gifts you must offer up every raised offering due†† the LORD, from all the best of it, and the holiest part of it.’ ‡‡

LORD ‡‡† tn: Or “its hallowed thing.” ‡‡‡ tn: The wording of this verse is confusing; it may be that it is addressed to the priests, telling them how to deal with the offerings of the Levites. § tn: The clause begins with the infinitive construct with its preposition and suffixed subject serving to indicate the temporal clause. §† tn: The verb is the perfect tense with vav ( ו )

§†† tn: The final clause could also be rendered “in order that you do not die.” The larger section can also be interpreted differently; rather than take it as a warning, it could be taken as an assurance that when they do all of this they will not be profaning it and so will not die (R. K. Harrison, Numbers [WEC], 253). §‡ sn: In the last chapter the needs of the priests and Levites were addressed. Now the concern is for the people. This provision from the sacrifice of the red heifer is a precaution to ensure that the purity of the tabernacle was not violated by pollutions of impurity or death. This chapter has two main parts, both dealing with ceremonial purity: the ritual of the red heifer (vv. 1-10), and the purification from uncleanness (vv. 11-22). For further study see J. Milgrom, “The Paradox of the Red Cow ( Num 19),” VT 31 (1981): 62-72. §†† tn: Heb “speak to.” §† tn: The line literally reads, “speak to the Israelites that and has never carried a yoke. <sup>3</sup> You must give it to Eleazar the priest so that he can take it outside the camp, and it must be slaughtered before him. <sup>§§†4</sup> Eleazar the priest is to take§§§ some of its blood with his finger, and sprinkle some of the blood seven times<sup>18</sup> directly in front of the tent of meeting. <sup>5</sup> Then the heifer must be burned<sup>19</sup> in his sight – its skin, its flesh, its blood, and its offal is to be burned. <sup>206</sup> And the priest must take cedar wood, hyssop, <sup>21</sup> and scarlet wool and throw them into the midst of the fire where the heifer is burning. <sup>227</sup> Then the priest must wash<sup>23</sup> his clothes and bathe himself<sup>24</sup> in water, and afterward he may come<sup>25</sup> into the camp, but the priest will be ceremonially unclean until evening. <sup>8</sup> The one who burns it<sup>26</sup> must wash his clothes in water and bathe himself in water. He will be ceremonially unclean until evening.

[and] they bring [will bring].” The imperfect [or jussive] is subordinated to the imperative either as a purpose clause, or as the object of the instruction – speak to them that they bring, or tell them to bring. §‡ tn: The color is designated as red, although the actual color would be a tanned red-brown color for the animal (see the usage in Isa 1:18 and Song 5:10). The reddish color suggested the blood of ritual purification; see J. Milgrom, “The Paradox of the Red Cow ( Num 19),” VT 31 (1981): 62-72. §§† sn: Some modern commentators prefer “cow” to “heifer,” thinking that the latter came from the influence of the Greek. Young animals were usually prescribed for the ritual, especially here, and so “heifer” is the better translation. A bull could not be given for this purification ritual because that is what was given for the high priests or the community according to Lev 4. §§‡ tn: Heb “wherein there is no defect.” §§§ tc: The clause is a little ambiguous. It reads “and he shall slaughter it before him.” It sounds as if someone else will kill the heifer in the priest’s presence. Since no one is named as the subject, it may be translated as a passive. Some commentators simply interpret that Eleazar was to kill the animal personally, but that is a little forced for “before him.” The Greek text gives a third person plural sense to the verb; the Vulgate follows that reading. <sup>18</sup> tn: The verb is the perfect tense with vav ( ו )

<sup>19</sup> sn: Seven is a number with religious significance; it is often required in sacrificial ritual for atonement or for purification. <sup>20</sup> tn: Again, the verb has no expressed subject, and so is given a passive translation. <sup>21</sup> tn: The imperfect tense is third masculine singular, and so again the verb is to be made passive. <sup>22</sup> sn: In addition to the general references, see R. K. Harrison, “The Biblical Problem of Hyssop,” EvQ 26 (1954): 218-24. <sup>23</sup> sn: There is no clear explanation available as to why these items were to be burned with the heifer. N. H. Snaith suggests that in accordance with Babylonian sacrifices they would have enhanced the rites with an aroma ( Leviticus and Numbers [NCB], 272). In Lev 14 the wood and the hyssop may have been bound together by the scarlet wool to make a sprinkling device. It may be that the symbolism is what is important here. Cedar wood, for example, is durable; it may have symbolized resistance to future corruption and defilement, an early acquired immunity perhaps (R. K. Harrison, Numbers [WEC], 256). <sup>24</sup> tn: The sequence continues with the perfect tense and vav ( ו ) <sup>25</sup> tn: Heb “his flesh.” <sup>26</sup> tn: This is the imperfect of permission. <sup>27</sup> sn: Here the text makes clear that he had at least one assistant. <sup>28</sup> tn: Heb “it will be.”

<sup>10</sup> The one who gathers the ashes of the heifer must wash his clothes and be ceremonially unclean until evening. This will be a permanent ordinance both for the Israelites and the resident foreigner who lives among them.

<sup>14</sup> "This is the law : When a man dies§ in a tent, anyone who comes into the tent and all who are in the tent will be ceremonially unclean seven days. <sup>15</sup> And every open container that has no covering fastened on it is unclean. <sup>16</sup> And whoever touches the body of someone killed with a sword in the open fields, §† or the body of someone who died of natural causes, §†† or a human bone, or a grave, will be unclean seven days. §‡

†† sn: The ashes were to be stored somewhere outside the camp to be used in a water portion for cleansing someone who was defiled. This is a ritual that was enacted in the wilderness; it is something of a restoring rite for people alienated from community. ‡ tn: The form is the participle with the article functioning as a substantive: "the one who touches." ‡† tn: Heb "the dead." ‡‡ tn: The expression is full: שֶׁפָּגַע לְגַדְלָהּ מִצֵּד ‡‡† tn: The verb is a perfect tense with vav ( ו )

‡‡‡ tn: The verb is the Hitpael of אָוַח

§ sn: It is in passages like this that the view that being "cut off" meant the death penalty is the hardest to support. Would the Law prescribe death for someone who touches a corpse and fails to follow the ritual? Besides, the statement in this section that his uncleanness remains with him suggests that he still lives on. §† tn: The word order gives the classification and then the condition: "a man, when he dies..." §†† tn: The expression for "in the open field" is literally "upon the face of the field" ( עַל־פְּנֵי הַשָּׂדֶה )

<sup>21</sup> " So this will be a perpetual ordinance for them: The one who sprinkles§§§ the water of purification must wash his clothes, and the one who touches the water of purification will be unclean until evening. <sup>1822</sup> And whatever the unclean person touches will be unclean, and the person who touches it will be unclean until evening."<sup>19</sup>

§†† sn: See Matt 23:27 and Acts 23:3 for application of this by the time of Jesus. §† tn: The verb is the perfect tense, third masculine plural, with a vav ( ו )

וַיֵּלֶךְ

§§‡ tn: The expression is literally "living water." Living water is the fresh, flowing spring water that is clear, life-giving, and not the collected pools of stagnant or dirty water. §§§ tn: The construction uses a simple Piel of אָוַח

18 tn: The form has the conjunction with it: וַיֵּלֶךְ

19 sn: This gives the indication of the weight of the matter, for "until the evening" is the shortest period of ritual uncleanness in the Law. The problem of contamination had to be taken seriously, but this was a relatively simple matter to deal with – if one were willing to obey the Law. <sup>20</sup> sn: This chapter is the account of how Moses struck the rock in disobedience to the LORD

the people stayed in Kadesh. † Miriam died and was buried there. ††

2 And there was no water for the community, and so they gathered themselves together against Moses and Aaron. 3 The people contended# with Moses, saying, †† "If only# we had died when our brothers died before the LORD! 4 Why#†† have you brought up the LORD's community into this wilderness? So that<sup>#†††</sup> we and our cattle should die here? 5 Why# have you brought us up from Egypt only to bring us to§† this dreadful place? It is no place for grain, or figs, or vines, or pomegranates; nor is there any water to drink!"

Moses Responds

6 So Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly to the entrance to the tent of meeting. They then threw themselves down with their faces to the ground, and the glory of the LORD appeared to them. 7 Then the LORD spoke to Moses: 8 "Take the staff and assemble the community, you and Aaron your brother, and then speak§†† to the rock before their eyes. It will pour forth§† its water, and you will bring water out of the rock for them, and so you will give the community and their beasts water to drink."

9 So Moses took the staff from before the LORD, just as he commanded him. 10 Then Moses and Aaron gathered the community together in front of the rock, and he said to them, "Listen, you rebels, ††† must we

† sn: The text does not indicate here what year this was, but from comparing the other passages about the itinerary, this is probably the end of the wanderings, the fortieth year, for Aaron died some forty years after the exodus. So in that year the people come through the wilderness of Zin and prepare for a journey through the Moabite plains. †† sn: The Israelites stayed in Kadesh for some time during the wandering; here the stop at Kadesh Barnea may have lasted several months. See the commentaries for the general itinerary. † sn: The death of Miriam is recorded without any qualifications or epitaph. In her older age she had been self-willed and rebellious, and so no doubt humbled by the vivid rebuke from God. But she had made her contribution from the beginning. †† tn: The verb is ריב

‡‡ tn: Heb "and they said, saying." ††† tn: The particle ו

‡‡‡ tn: Heb "and why..." The conjunction seems to be recording another thing that the people said in their complaint against Moses. § tn: The clause uses the infinitive construct with the lamed ( ו bring§† water out of this rock for you?" 11 Then Moses raised his hand, and struck the rock twice with his staff. And water came out abundantly. So the community drank, and their beasts drank too.

The Lord's Judgment

12 Then the LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron, "Because you did not trust me enough§† to show me as holy§†† before§§† the Israelites, therefore you will not bring this community into the land I have given them." †††

Rejection by the Edomites 19

tn: The word is הַמַּיִם

§† tn: The word order and the emphasis of the tense are important to this passage. The word order is "from this rock must we bring out to you water?" The emphasis is clearly on "from this rock!" The verb is the imperfect tense; it has one of the modal nuances here, probably obligatory – "must we do this?" ††† tn: Or "to sanctify me." sn: The verb is the main word for "believe, trust." It is the verb that describes the faith in the Word of the LORD

Heb "in the eyes of." 18 tn: There is debate as to exactly what the sin of Moses was. Some interpreters think that the real sin might have been that he refused to do this at first, but that fact has been suppressed from the text. Some think the text was deliberately vague to explain why they could not enter the land without demeaning them. Others simply, and more likely, note that in Moses there was unbelief, pride, anger, impatience – disobedience. 19 tn: The form is unusual – it is the Niphal preterite, and not the normal use of the Piel/Pual stem for "sanctify/sanctified." The basic idea of "he was holy" has to be the main idea, but in this context it refers to the fact that through judging Moses God was making sure people ensured his holiness among them. The word also forms a wordplay on the name Kadesh. 20 sn: For this particular section, see W. F. Albright, "From the Patriarchs to Moses: 2. Moses out of Egypt," BA 36 (1973): 57-58; J. R. Bartlett, "The Land of Seir and the Brotherhood of Edom," JTS 20 (1969): 1-20, and "The Rise and Fall of the Kingdom of Edom," PEQ 104 (1972): 22-37, and "The Brotherhood of Edom," JSOT 4 (1977): 2-7. 21 tn: Heb "And Moses sent." 22 sn: Some modern biblical scholars are convinced, largely through arguments from silence, that there were no unified kingdoms in Edom until the 9th century, and no settlements there before the 12th century, and ancestors went down into Egypt, and we lived in Egypt a long time, † and the Egyptians treated us and our ancestors badly. ††16 So when we cried to the LORD, he heard our voice and sent a messenger, ‡ and has brought us up out of Egypt. Now‡† we are here in Kadesh, a town on the edge of your country. ††17 Please let us pass through‡†† your country. We will not pass through the fields or through the vineyards, nor will we drink water from any well. We will go by the King's Highway;‡†† we will not turn to the right or the left until we have passed through your region." §

18 But Edom said to him, "You will not pass through me,§† or I will come out against§†† you with the sword." 19 Then the Israelites said to him, "We will go along the highway, and if we§† or our cattle drink any of your water, we will pay for it. We will only pass through on our feet, without doing anything else."

20 But he said, "You may not pass through." Then Edom came out against them§†† with a large and powerful force. §†21 So Edom refused to give Israel passage through his border, therefore Israel turned away from him.

Aaron's Death

22 So the entire company of Israelites§† traveled from Kadesh and came to Mount Hor. §§†23 And the LORD spoke to Moses and Aaron in Mount Hor, by the border of the land of Edom. He said: 24 "Aaron will be gathered to his ancestors, §§† for he will not enter into so the story must be late and largely fabricated. The evidence is beginning to point to the contrary. But the cities and residents of the region would largely be Bedouin, and so leave no real remains. † tn: Heb "found." †† tn: Heb "many days." ‡ tn: The verb נָשַׁב

‡† tn: The word could be rendered "angel" or "messenger." Some ambiguity may be intended in this report. ‡†† tn: The Hebrew text uses הַנְּהַל

‡††† tn: Heb "your border." ‡†††† tn: The request is expressed by the use of the cohortative, "let us pass through." It is the proper way to seek permission. § sn: This a main highway running from Damascus in the north to the Gulf of Aqaba, along the ridge of the land. Some scholars suggest that the name may have been given by the later Assyrians (see B. Obed, "Observations on Methods of Assyrian Rule in Transjordan after the Palestinian Campaign of Tiglathpileser III," JNES 29 [1970]: 177-86). Bronze Age fortresses have been discovered along this highway, attesting to its existence in the time of Moses. The original name came from the king who developed the highway, probably as a trading road (see S. Cohen, IDB 3:35-36). §† tn: Heb "borders." §††† tn: The imperfect tense here has the nuance of prohibition. §†††† tn: Heb "to meet." §††††† tn: The Hebrew text uses singular pronouns, "I" and "my," but it is the people of Israel that are intended, and so it may be rendered in the plural. Similarly, Edom speaks in the first person, probably from the king. But it too could be rendered "we." §†††††† tn: Heb "to meet him." §††††††† tn: Heb "with many [heavy] people and with a strong hand." The translation presented above is interpretive, but that is what the line means. It was a show of force, numbers and weapons, to intimidate the Israelites. §§††† tn: Again the passage uses apposition: "the Israelites, the whole community." §§††††† sn: The traditional location for this is near Petra (Josephus, Ant. 4.4.7). There is serious doubt about this location since it is well inside Edomite territory, and since it is very inaccessi-

the land I have given to the Israelites because both of you§§§ rebelled against my word<sup>18</sup> at the waters of Meribah. 25 Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up on Mount Hor. 26 Remove Aaron's priestly garments<sup>19</sup> and put them on Eleazar his son, and Aaron will be gathered to his ancestors<sup>20</sup> and will die there."

27 So Moses did as the LORD commanded; and they went up Mount Hor in the sight<sup>21</sup> of the whole community. 28 And Moses removed Aaron's garments and put them on his son Eleazar. So Aaron died there on the top of the mountain. And Moses and Eleazar came down from the mountain. 29 When all the community saw that Aaron was dead, the whole house of Israel mourned for Aaron thirty days. 22

21 When the Canaanite king of Arad<sup>23</sup> who lived in the Negev<sup>24</sup> heard that Israel was approaching along the road to Atharim, he fought against Israel and took some of them prisoner.

2 So Israel made a vow<sup>25</sup> to the LORD and said, "If you will indeed deliver<sup>26</sup> this people into our<sup>27</sup> hand, then we will utterly destroy<sup>28</sup> their cities." 3 The LORD listened to the voice of Israel and delivered up the Canaanites, 29 and they utterly destroyed them and their cities. So the name of the place was called<sup>30</sup> Hormah.

ble for the transfer of the office. Another view places it not too far from Kadesh Barnea, about 15 miles (25 km) northeast at Jebel Madurah, on the northwest edge of Edom and so a suitable point of departure for approaching Canaan from the south (see J. L. Mihelec, IDB 2:644; and J. de Vaulx, Les Nombres [SB], 231). Others suggest it was at the foot of Mount Hor and not actually up in the mountains (see Deut 10:6). §§§ sn: This is the standard poetic expression for death. The bones would be buried, often with the bones of relatives in the same tomb, giving rise to the expression. 18 tn: The verb is in the second person plural form, and so it is Moses and Aaron who rebelled, and so now because of that Aaron first and then Moses would die without going into the land. 19 tn: Heb "mouth." 20 tn: The word "priestly" is supplied in the translation for clarity. 21 tn: Heb "will be gathered"; this is a truncated form of the usual expression "gathered to his ancestors," found in v. 24. The phrase "to his ancestors" is supplied in the translation here. 22 tn: Heb "eyes." 23 sn: This chapter has several events in it: the victory over Arad (vv. 1-3), the plague of serpents (vv. 4-9), the approach to Moab (vv. 10-20), and the victory over Sihon and Og (vv. 21-35). For information, see D. M. Gunn, "The 'Battle Report': Oral or Scribal Convention." JBL 93 (1974): 513-18; and of the extensive literature on the archaeological site, see EAEHL 1:74-89. 24 sn: The name Arad probably refers to a place a number of miles away from Tel Arad in southern Israel. The name could also refer to the whole region (like Edom). 25 tn: Or "the south"; "Negev" has become a technical name for the southern desert region and is still in use in modern times. 26 tn: The Hebrew text uses a cognate accusative with the verb: They vowed a vow. The Israelites were therefore determined with God's help to defeat Arad. 27 tn: The Hebrew text has the infinitive absolute and the imperfect tense of נָשַׁב

28 tn: Heb "my." 29 tn: On the surface this does not sound like much of a vow. But the key is in the use of the verb for "utterly destroy" – חָרַם

Fiery Serpents

<sup>4</sup> Then they traveled from Mount Hor by the road to the Red Sea, † to go around the land of Edom, but the people†† became impatient along the way. <sup>5</sup> And the people spoke against God and against Moses, "Why have you brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness, for there is no bread or water, and we‡ detest this worthless‡† food."

<sup>6</sup> So the LORD sent poisonous‡‡ snakes‡‡† among the people, and they bit the people; many people of Israel died. <sup>7</sup> Then the people came to Moses and said, "We have sinned, for we have spoken against the LORD and against you. Pray to the LORD that he would take away‡‡ the snakes from us." So Moses prayed for the people.

<sup>8</sup> The LORD said to Moses, "Make a poisonous snake and set it on a pole. When anyone who is bitten looks‡ at it, he will live." <sup>9</sup> So Moses made a bronze snake and put it on a pole, so that if a snake had bitten someone, when he looked at the bronze snake he lived. ‡†

‡† tn: The word order is slightly different in Hebrew: "and it shall be anyone who is bitten when he looks at it he shall live." ‡†† sn: The image of the snake was to be a symbol of the curse that the Israelites were experiencing; by lifting the snake up on a pole Moses was indicating that the curse would be drawn away from the people - if they looked to it, which was a sign of faith. This symbol was later stored in the temple, until it became an object of worship and had to be removed ( 2 Kgs 18:4). Jesus, of course, alluded to it and used it as an illustration of his own mission. He would become the curse, and be lifted up, so that people who looked by faith to him would live ( John 3:14). <sup>16</sup> And from there they traveled‡‡‡ to Beer; <sup>18</sup> that is the well where the LORD spoke to Moses, "Gather the people and I will give them water." <sup>17</sup> Then Israel sang<sup>19</sup> this song :

"Spring up, O well, sing to it!

And from the wilderness they traveled to Mattanah; <sup>19</sup> and from Mattanah to Nahaliele; and from Nahaliele to Bamoth; <sup>20</sup> and from Bamoth to the valley that is in the country of Moab, near the top of Pisgah, which overlooks the wilderness. <sup>21</sup>

Several modern versions treat the first line literally, taking the two main words as place names: Waheb and Suphah. This seems most likely, but then there would then be no subject or verb. One would need something like "the Israelites marched through." The KJV, following the Vulgate, made the first word a verb and read the second as "Red Sea" - "what he did in the Red Sea." But subject of the passage is the terrain. D. L. Christensen proposed emending the first part from אַתְּ הַיַּרְדֵּן אֶתְּ הַיַּרְדֵּן LORD

The Victory over Sihon and Og †

21 Then Israel sent messengers to King Sihon of the Amorites, saying, ††
 22 " Let us‡ pass through your land; †† we will not turn aside into the fields or into the vineyards, nor will we drink water from any well, but we will go along the King's Highway until we pass your borders." 23 But Sihon did not permit Israel to pass through his border; he‡† gathered all his forces‡†† together and went out against Israel into the wilderness. When‡†† he came to Jahaz, he fought against Israel. 24 But the Israelites‡ defeated him in battle‡† and took possession of his land from the Arnon to the Jabbok, as far as the Ammonites, for the border of the Ammonites was strongly defended. 25 So Israel took all these cities; and Israel settled in all the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all its villages. ‡††26 For Heshbon was the city of King Sihon of the Amorites. Now he had fought against the former king of Moab and had taken all of his land from his control, ‡† as far as the Arnon. 27 That is why those who speak in proverbs‡†† say, " Come to Heshbon, let it be built. Let the city of Sihon be established! ‡† 28 For fire went out from Heshbon, a flame from the city of Sihon. It has consumed Ar of Moab

‡† tn: The Hebrew text has "Israel," but the verb is plural. ‡†† tn: Heb "with the edge of the sword." ‡† tn: Heb "its daughters." ‡†† sn: There is a justice, always, in the divine plan for the conquest of the land. Modern students of the Bible often think that the conquest passages are crude and unjust. But an understanding of the ancient Near East is critical here. This Sihon was not a part of the original population of the land. He himself invaded the territory and destroyed the population of Moab that was indigenous there and established his own kingdom. The ancient history is filled with such events; it is the way of life they chose – conquer or be conquered. For Israel to defeat them was in part a turning of their own devices back on their heads – "those that live by the sword will die by the sword." Sihon knew this, and he did not wait, but took the war to Israel. Israel wanted to pass through, not fight. But now they would either fight or be pushed into the gorge. So God used Israel to defeat Sihon, who had no claim to the land, as part of divine judgment. ‡† sn: Proverbs of antiquity could include pithy sayings or longer songs, riddles, or poems composed to catch the significance or the irony of an event. This is a brief poem to remember the event, like an Egyptian victory song. It may have originated as an Amorite war taunt song; it was sung to commemorate this victory. It was cited later by Jeremiah (48:45-46). The composer invites his victorious people to rebuild the conquered city as a new capital for Sihon. He then turns to address the other cities which his God(s) has/have given to him. See P. D. Hanson, "The Song of Heshbon and David's Nir," HTR 61 (1968): 301.

 30 We have overpowered them;‡†† Heshbon has perished as far as Dibon. We have shattered them as far as Nophah, which‡†† reaches to Medeba."
 31 So the Israelites‡† lived in the land of the Amorites.
 32 Moses sent spies to reconnoiter‡†† Jaazer, and they captured its villages‡† and dispossessed the Amorites who were there.
 33 Then they turned and went up by the road to Bashan. And King Og of Bashan and all his forces‡†† marched out against them to do battle at Edrei. 34 And the LORD said to Moses, "Do not fear him, for I have delivered him and all his people and his land into your hand. You will do to him what you did to King Sihon of the Amorites, who lived in Heshbon. 35 So they defeated Og,‡† his sons, and all his people, until there were no survivors, 23 and they possessed his land. 24

It is hard to determine how long they were in Transjordan, but a good amount of time must have elapsed for the number of moves they made and the wars they fought. There is a considerable amount of information available on this section of the book. Some of the most helpful works include: H. C. Brichto, The Problem of "Curse" in the Hebrew Bible (JBLMS); E. Burrows, The Oracles of Jacob and Balaam; G. W. Coats, "Balaam, Sinner or Saint?" BR 18 (1973): 21-29; P. C. Craigie, "The Conquest and Early Hebrew Poetry," TynBul 20 (1969): 76-94; I. This first part introduces the characters and sets the stage for the oracles. It can be divided into four sections: the invitation declined (vv. 1-14), the second invitation extended (vv. 15-21), God opposes Balaam (vv. 22-35), and Balaam meets Balak (vv. 36-41). 26 tn: The verse begins with the vav ( ו ) 27 tn: The word "River" is not in the Hebrew text, but has been supplied in the translation for clarity.

they were so numerous. The Moabites were sick with fear because of the Israelites.

<sup>7</sup> So the elders of Moab and the elders of Midian departed with the fee for divination in their hand. They came to Balaam and reported§†† to him the words of Balak. <sup>8</sup> He replied to them, "Stay§‡ here tonight, and I will bring back to you whatever word the LORD may speak to me." Balaam appears to be a pagan diviner who was of some reputation; he was called to curse the Israelites, but God intervened and gave him blessings only. The passage forms a nice complement to texts that deal with blessings and curses. It shows that no one can curse someone whom God has blessed. ‡† tn: Heb "by the river"; in most contexts this expression refers to the Euphrates River (cf. ### Balaam Accompanies the Moabite Princes two servants were with him. <sup>23</sup> And the donkey saw the angel of the LORD standing in the road with† his sword drawn in his hand, so the donkey turned aside from the road and went into the field. But Balaam beat the donkey, to make her turn back to the road.

<sup>24</sup> Then the angel of the LORD stood in a path†† among the vineyards, where there was a wall on either side. <sup>25</sup> And when the donkey saw the angel of the LORD, she pressed herself into the wall, and crushed Balaam's foot against the wall. So he beat her again. ††

Balaam Meets Balak

<sup>36</sup> When Balak heard that Balaam was coming, he went out to meet him at a city of Moab which was on the border of the Arnon at the boundary of his territory. <sup>37</sup> Balak said to Balaam, "Did I not send again and again‡‡‡ to you to summon you? commentators consider אָוִי לִי †† sn: Balaam is not here making a general confession of sin. What he is admitting to is a procedural mistake. The basic meaning of the word is "to miss the mark." He now knows he took the wrong way, i.e., in coming to curse Israel. †† sn: The reference is to Balaam's way. He is saying that if what he is doing is so perverse, so evil, he will turn around and go home. Of course, it did not appear that he had much of a chance of going forward. ††† tn: The verb is the cohortative from "return": I will return [me]. ††† tn: The imperfect tense here can be given the nuance of permission. ††† tn: The Hebrew word order is a little more emphatic than this: "but only the word which I speak to you, it you shall speak." <sup>18</sup> tn: The emphatic construction is made of the infinitive absolute and the perfect tense from the verb נָשַׁב

<sup>19</sup> sn: Balak again refers to his ability to "honor" the seer. This certainly meant payment for his service, usually gold ornaments, rings and jewelry, as well as some animals. <sup>20</sup> tn: The verb is אָבַל

<sup>21</sup> tn: The Piel infinitive construct (without the preposition) serves as the object of the verb "to be able." The whole question is rhetorical - he is saying that he will not be able to say anything God does not allow him to say. <sup>22</sup> tn: The imperfect tense is here taken as an obligatory imperfect. <sup>23</sup> sn: The understanding is that Balak was making a sacrifice for a covenant relationship, and so he gave some of the meat to the men and to the seer. <sup>24</sup> sn: The name Bamoth Baal means "the high places of Baal." <sup>25</sup> sn: The first part of Balaam's activity ends in disaster for Balak - he blesses Israel. The chapter falls into four units: the first prophecy (vv. 1-10), the relocation (vv. 11-17), the second prophecy (vv. 18-24), and a further location (vv. 25-30). <sup>26</sup> tn: The Hebrew text has "on the altar," but since there were seven of each animal and seven altars, the implication is that this means on each altar.

§‡† sn: The opening lines seem to be a formula for the seer to identify himself and the occasion for the oracle. The tension is laid out early; Balaam knows that God has intended to bless Israel, but he has been paid to curse them. §† tn: The figure is erotesis, a rhetorical question. He is actually saying he cannot curse them because God has not cursed them. §‡ tn: The imperfect tense should here be classified as a potential imperfect. §§† tn: Heb "him," but here it refers to the Israelites (Israel). §§‡ sn: Balaam reports his observation of the nation of Israel spread out below him in the valley. Based on that vision, and the LORD

§§§ tn: The verb could also be taken as a reflexive - Israel does not consider itself as among the nations, meaning, they consider themselves to be unique. 18 tn: The question is again rhetorical; it means no one can count them - they are innumerable. 19 tn: The perfect tense can also be classified as a potential nuance. It does not occur very often, but does occur several times. 20 sn: The reference in the oracle is back to Gen 13:16, which

Balaam Relocates

<sup>14</sup> So Balak brought Balaam<sup>30</sup> to the field of Zophim, to the top of Pisgah,<sup>31</sup> where<sup>32</sup> he built seven altars and offered a bull and a ram on each altar.<sup>15</sup> And Balaam<sup>33</sup> said to Balak, "Station yourself here<sup>34</sup> by your burnt offering, while I meet the LORD there."<sup>16</sup> Then the LORD met Balaam and put a message<sup>35</sup> in his mouth and said, "Return to Balak, and speak what I tell you."<sup>17</sup> When Balaam<sup>36</sup> came to him, he was still standing by his burnt offering, along with the princes of Moab. Here it is part of the description of the vast numbers. 21 tn: Heb "and as a number, the fourth part of Israel." The noun in the MT is not in the construct state, and so it should be taken as an adverbial accusative, forming a parallel with the verb "count." The second object of the verse then follows, "the fourth part of Israel." Smr and the LXX have "and who has numbered" ( וַיִּסְמְרוּ )

25 tn: Heb "his." 26 tn: The Hebrew text uses הִנֵּה, using the perfect tense and the infinitive absolute to give it the emphasis. It would have the force of "you have done nothing but bless," or "you have indeed blessed." The construction is reminiscent of the call of Abram and the promise of the blessing in such elaborate terms. 28 tn: Heb "he answered and said." ## Balaam Prophecies Again

At this time§§† it must be said§§§ of Jacob and of Israel, ‘Look at<sup>18</sup> what God has done!’

† tn: Heb “he”; the referent (Balaam) has been specified in the translation for clarity. †† tn: Heb “he.” The antecedent has been supplied in the translation for clarity. ‡ tn: Heb “took up.” ‡† tn: The verb probably means “pay attention” in this verse. ‡‡ tn: Heb “son of man.” ‡‡† tn: The verb is the Hiphil of וָיָדַע

‡‡† tn: The Hebrew text simply has “I have received [to] bless.” The infinitive is the object of the verb, telling what he received. Balaam was not actually commanded to bless, but was given the word of blessing so that he was given a divine decree that would bless Israel. § sn: The reference is probably to the first speech, where the LORD

§†† tn: These could be understood as impersonal and so rendered “no one has discovered.”

§‡ sn: The line could mean that God has regarded Israel as the ideal congregation without any blemish or flaw. But it could also mean that God has not looked on their iniquity, meaning, held it against them. §†† tn: The word means “wrong, misery, trouble.” It can mean the idea of “disaster” as well, for that too is trouble. Here it is parallel to “iniquity” and so has the connotation of something that would give God reason to curse them. §† tn: The people are blessed because God is their king. In fact, the shout of acclamation is among them – they are proclaiming the LORD

§‡ tn: The form is the Hiphil participle from יָצַח

§§† sn: The expression is “the horns of the wild ox” (KJV “unicorn”). The point of the image is strength or power. Horns are also used in the Bible to represent kingship (see Pss 89 and 132). §§‡ tn: Or “in Jacob.” But given the context the meaning “against” is preferable. The words describe two techniques of consulting God; the first has to do with observing omens in general (“enchantments”), and the second with casting lots or arrows of the like (“divinations” [Ezek 21:26]). See N. H. Snaitch, Leviticus and Numbers (NCB), 295-96. §§§ tn: The form is the preposition “like, as” and the word for “time” – according to the time, about this time, now. 18 tn: The Niphal imperfect here carries the nuance of obligation – one has to say in

they will not lie down until they eat their<sup>19</sup> prey, and drink the blood of the slain.” <sup>20</sup>

Balaam Relocates Yet Again

25 Balak said to Balaam, “Neither curse them at all<sup>21</sup> nor bless them at all!” <sup>2226</sup> But Balaam replied<sup>23</sup> to Balak, “Did I not tell you, ‘All that the LORD speaks, <sup>24</sup> I must do?’”

27 Balak said to Balaam, “Come, please; I will take you to another place. Perhaps it will please God<sup>25</sup> to let you curse them for me from there.” <sup>2628</sup> So Balak took Balaam to the top of Peor, that looks toward the wilderness. <sup>2729</sup> Then Balaam said to Balak, “Build seven altars here for me, and prepare seven bulls and seven rams.” <sup>30</sup> So Balak did as Balaam had said, and offered a bull and a ram on each altar. <sup>28</sup>

24 When Balaam saw that it pleased the LORD to bless Israel, <sup>29</sup> he did not go as at the other times<sup>30</sup> to seek for omens, <sup>31</sup> but he set his face<sup>32</sup> toward the wilderness. <sup>2</sup> When Balaam lifted up his eyes, he saw Israel camped tribe by tribe; <sup>33</sup> and the amazement that God has done something marvelous or “it must be said.”<sup>19</sup> tn: The words “look at” are not in the Hebrew text but have been added in the translation for clarity. <sup>20</sup> tn: The pronoun “their” has been supplied for clarity; it is not present in the Hebrew text. <sup>21</sup> sn: The oracle compares Israel first to a lion, or better, lioness, because she does the tracking and hunting of food while the lion moves up and down roaring and distracting the prey. But the lion is also the traditional emblem of Judah, Dan and Gad, as well as the symbol of royalty. So this also supports the motif of royalty as well as power for Israel. <sup>22</sup> tn: The verb is preceded by the infinitive absolute: “you shall by no means curse” or “do not curse them at all.” He brought him to curse, and when he tried to curse there was a blessing. Balak can only say it would be better not to bother. <sup>23</sup> tn: The same construction now works with “nor bless them at all.” The two together form a merism – “don’t say anything.” He does not want them blessed, so Balaam is not to do that, but the curse isn’t working either. <sup>24</sup> tn: Heb “answered and said.” <sup>25</sup> tn: This first clause, “all that the LORD

<sup>26</sup> tn: Heb “be pleasing in the eyes of God.” <sup>27</sup> sn: Balak is stubborn, as indeed Balaam is persistent. But Balak still thinks that if another location were used it just might work. Balaam had actually told Balak in the prophecy that other attempts would fail. But Balak refuses to give up so easily. So he insists they perform the ritual and try again. This time, however, Balaam will change his approach, and this will result in a dramatic outpouring of power on him. <sup>28</sup> tn: Or perhaps as a place name, “Jeshimon” (cf. 21:20). <sup>29</sup> sn: For a thorough study of the arrangement of this passage, see E. B. Smick, “A Study of the Structure of the Third Balaam Oracle,” The Law and the Prophets, 242-52. He sees the oracle as having an introductory strophe (vv. 3, 4), followed by two stanzas (vv. 5, 6) that introduce the body (vv. 7b-9b) before the final benediction (v. 9b). <sup>30</sup> tn: Heb “it was good in the eyes of the LORD” <sup>31</sup> tn: Heb “as time after time.” <sup>32</sup> tn: The word וְנִשְׁמַח

<sup>33</sup> tn: The idiom signifies that he had a determination and resolution to look out over where the

“The oracle†† of Balaam son of Beor, the oracle of the man whose eyes are open; ‡
<sup>4</sup> the oracle of the one who hears the words of God,
although falling flat on the ground‡† with eyes open:

and your dwelling places, O Israel!

like aloes§† that the LORD has planted, and like cedar trees beside the waters.

and their descendants will be like abundant§† water;

their king will be greater than Agag, §† and their kingdom will be exalted.

<sup>8</sup> God brought them out of Egypt.
They have, as it were, the strength of a young bull;
they will devour hostile people§†
and will break their bones and will pierce them through with arrows.

<sup>9</sup> They crouch and lie down like a lion, and as a lioness, §§† who can stir him?
Blessed is the one who blesses you, and cursed is the one who curses you!”

<sup>10</sup> Then Balak became very angry at Balaam, and he struck his hands together. §§† Balak said to Balaam, “I

Israelites were, so that he could appreciate more their presence and use that as the basis for his expressing of the oracle. † tn:
Heb “living according to their tribes.” †† tn: Heb “and he took up his oracle and said.” ‡ tn: The word אָנֹכִי

‡† tn: The Greek version reads “the one who sees truly.” The word has been interpreted in both ways, “shut” or “open.”
‡†† tn: The phrase “flat on the ground” is supplied in the translation for clarity. The Greek version interprets the line to mean “falling asleep.” It may mean falling into a trance. ‡†† tn: The last colon simply has “falling, but opened eyes.” The falling may simply refer to lying prone; and the opened eyes may refer to his receiving a vision.
See H. E. Freeman, An Introduction to the Old Testament Prophets, 37-41. ‡†† tn: Here הָנָה

§ tn: Heb “as valleys they spread forth.” §† tn: Or “rows of palms.” §†† sn: The language seems to be more poetic than precise. N. H. Snaith notes that cedars do not grow beside water; he also connects “aloes” to the eaglewood that is more exotic, and capable of giving off an aroma ( Leviticus and Numbers [NCB], 298). §† tc: For this colon the LXX has “a man shall come out of his seed.” Cf. the Syriac Peshitta and Targum. §†† tn: Heb “many.” §† sn: These two lines are difficult, but the general sense is that of irrigation buckets and a well-watered land. The point is that Israel will be prosperous and fruitful. §† sn: Many commentators see this as a reference to Agag of 1 Sam 15:32-33, the Amalekite king slain by Samuel, for that is the one we know. But that is by no means clear, for this text does not identify this Agag. If it is that king, then this poem, or this line in this poem, would have to be later, unless one were to try to argue for a specific prophecy. Whoever this Agag is, he is a symbol of power. §§† tn: Heb “they will devour nations,” their adversaries. §§† tn: On the usage of this word see HALOT 517 s.v. אָנֹכִי called you to curse my enemies, and look, you have done nothing but bless§§§ them these three times! <sup>11</sup>

So now, go back where you came from !<sup>18</sup> I said that I would greatly honor you; but now the LORD has stood in the way of your honor.”

<sup>12</sup> Balaam said to Balak, “Did I not also tell your messengers whom you sent to me, <sup>13</sup> ‘ If Balak would give me his palace full of silver and gold, I cannot go be-
good or evil of my own will,<sup>21</sup> but whatever the LORD tells me I must speak? <sup>14</sup> And now, I am about to go<sup>22</sup> back to my own people. Come now, and I will advise you as to what this people will do to your people in the future.” <sup>23</sup>

Balaam Prophecies a Fourth Time

<sup>15</sup> Then he uttered this oracle :<sup>24</sup>
“The oracle of Balaam son of Beor,
the oracle of the man whose eyes are open;
<sup>16</sup> the oracle of the one who hears the words of God, and who knows the knowledge of the Most High,
who sees a vision from the Almighty,
although falling flat on the ground with eyes open:

<sup>17</sup> ‘ I see him, but not now;
I behold him, but not close at hand.<sup>25</sup>
A star<sup>26</sup> will march forth<sup>27</sup> out of Jacob, and a scepter<sup>28</sup> will rise out of Israel.
He will crush the skulls<sup>29</sup> of Moab, and the heads<sup>30</sup> of all the sons of Sheth. <sup>31</sup>

<sup>18</sup> Edom will be a possession,
Seir, <sup>32</sup> his enemies, will also be a possession;

§§§ sn: This is apparently a sign of contempt or derision (see Job 27:23; and Lam 2:15). <sup>18</sup> tn: The construction is emphatic, using the infinitive absolute with the perfect tense for “bless.” <sup>19</sup>
<sup>23</sup> tn: The construction is the particle הִנֵּה

also Isa 14:12) not only in the Bible but in the ancient Near Eastern literature as a whole. The immediate reference of the prophecy seems to be to David, but the eschatological theme goes beyond him. There is to be a connection made between this passage and the sighting of a star in its ascendancy by the magi, who then traveled to Bethlehem to see the one born King of the Jews ( Matt 2:2).
The expression “son of a star” ( Aram Bar Kochba) became a title for a later claimant to kingship, but he was doomed by the Romans in
A.D. 135. <sup>28</sup> tn: The verb is the perfect tense with vav ( ו )

for a king who will rise to power. NEB strangely rendered this as “comet” to make a parallel with “star.” <sup>30</sup> tn: The word is literally
<sup>31</sup> tc: The MT reads “shatter, devastate.” Smr reads שִׁתֵּר וְשִׁתֵּר

<sup>32</sup> sn: The prophecy begins to be fulfilled when David defeated Moab and Edom and established an empire including them. But the Messianic promise extends far beyond that to יָבִין

but Israel will act valiantly.

<sup>19</sup> A ruler will be established from Jacob; he will destroy the remains of the city."†

Balaam's Final Prophecies

<sup>21</sup> Then he looked on the Kenites and uttered this oracle:

"Your dwelling place seems strong, and your nest†† is set on a rocky cliff.

the end of the age and the inclusion of these defeated people in the program of the coming King. † sn: Seir is the chief mountain range of Edom ( Deut 33:2), and so the reference here is to the general area of Edom. †† tn: Or, understanding the Hebrew word for "city" as a place name, "of Ir" (cf. NRSV, NLT). ‡ tn: Heb "he"; the referent (Balaam) has been specified in the translation for clarity. †† tn: Heb "and he lifted up his oracle and said." So also in vv. 21, 23. ††† sn: This probably means that it held first place, or it thought that it was "the first of the nations." It was not the first, either in order or greatness. ††† sn: A pun is made on the name Kenite by using the word "your nest" ( נֶסֶת )

††† tc: Heb "Nevertheless Cain will be wasted; how long will Asshur take you captive?" Cain was believed to be the ancestor of the Kenites. The NAB has "yet destined for burning, even as I watch, are your inhabitants." Asshur may refer to a north Arabian group of people of Abrahamic stock ( Gen 25:3), and not the Assyrian empire. § tc: Because there is no parallel line, some have thought that it dropped out (see de Vaulx, Les Nombres, 296). §† tc: The MT is difficult. The Kittim refers normally to Cyprus, or any maritime people to the west. W. F. Albright proposed emending the line to "islands will gather in the north, ships from the distant sea" ("The Oracles of Balaam," JBL 63 [1944]: 222-23). Some commentators accept that reading as the original state of the text, since the present MT makes little sense. §†† tn: Or perhaps "Assyria" (so NCV, TEV, CEV, NLT). §‡ tn: Or "it will end in utter destruction." §†† tn: Heb "place." §† sn: Chapter 25 tells of Israel's sins on the steppes of Moab, and God's punishment. In the overall plan of the book, here we have another possible threat to God's program, although here it comes from within the camp (Balaam was the threat from without). If the Moabites could not defeat them one way, they would try another. The chapter has three parts: fornication (vv. 1-3), God's punishment (vv. 4-9), and aftermath (vv. 10-18). See further G. E. Mendenhall, The Tenth Generation, 105-21; and S. C. Reif, "What Enraged Phinehas? A Study of Numbers 25:8," JBL 90 (1971): 200-206. §‡ tn: This first preterite is subordinated to the next as a temporal clause; it is not giving a parallel action, but the setting for the event. §§† sn: The account apparently means that the men were having sex with the Moabite women. Why the men submitted to such a temptation at this point the sacrifices of their gods; then the people ate and bowed down to their gods. <sup>§§‡3</sup> When Israel joined themselves to Baal-peor, §§§ the anger of the LORD flared up against Israel.

God's Punishment

is hard to say. It may be that as military heroes the men took liberties with the women of occupied territories. §§‡ tn: The verb simply says "they called," but it is a feminine plural. And so the women who engaged in immoral acts with Hebrew men invited them to their temple ritual. §§§ sn: What Israel experienced here was some of the debased ritual practices of the Canaanite people. The act of prostrating themselves before the pagan deities was probably participation in a fertility ritual, nothing short of cultic prostitution. This was a blatant disregard of the covenant and the Law. If something were not done, the nation would have destroyed itself. <sup>18</sup> tn: The verb is "yoked" to Baal-peor. The word is unusual, and may suggest the physical, ritual participation described below. It certainly shows that they acknowledge the reality of the local god. sn: The evidence indicates that Moab was part of the very corrupt Canaanite world, a world that was given over to the fertility ritual of the times. <sup>19</sup> sn: The meaning must be the leaders behind the apostasy, for they would now be arrested. They were responsible for the tribes' conformity to the Law, but here they had not only failed in their duty, but had participated. The leaders were executed; the rest of the guilty died by the plague. <sup>20</sup> sn: The leaders who were guilty were commanded by God to be publicly exposed by hanging, probably a reference to impaling, but possibly some other form of harsh punishment. The point was that the swaying of their executed bodies would be a startling warning for any who so blatantly set the Law aside and indulged in apostasy through pagan sexual orgies. <sup>21</sup> tn: Heb "in the sun." This means in broad daylight. <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb "slay – a man his men." The imperative is plural, and so "man" is to be taken collectively as "each of you men." <sup>23</sup> tn: The verse begins with the deictic particle הִנֵּה!

raelites.<sup>19</sup> Those that died in the plague were 24,000.

The Aftermath

† tn: Heb "and he thrust the two of them the Israelite man and the woman to her belly [lower abdomen]." Reif notes the similarity of the word with the previous "inner tent," and suggests that it means Phinehas stabbed her in her shrine tent, where she was being set up as some sort of priestess or cult leader. Phinehas put a quick end to their sexual immorality while they were in the act.
†† sn: Phinehas saw all this as part of the pagan sexual ritual that was defiling the camp. He had seen that the LORD

‡ tn: Heb "he was zealous with my zeal." The repetition of forms for "zeal" in the line stresses the passion of Phinehas. The word "zeal" means a passionate intensity to protect or preserve divine or social institutions. ‡† tn: The word for "zeal" now occurs a third time. While some English versions translate this word here as "jealousy" (KJV, ASV, NASB, NRSV), it carries the force of God's passionate determination to defend his rights and what is right about the covenant and the community and parallels the "zeal" that Phinehas had just demonstrated. ‡‡ tn: Heb "say." ‡‡† tn: Here too the grammar expresses an imminent future by using the particle <sup>יָבִיחַ</sup>

‡‡† tn: Or "my pledge of friendship" (NAB), or "my pact of friendship" (NJPS). This is the designation of the leadership of the priestly ministry. The terminology is used again in the rebuke of the priests in Mal 2. § tn: The motif is reiterated here. Phinehas was passionately determined to maintain the rights of his God by stopping the gross sinful perversions. §† sn: The atonement that he made in this passage refers to the killing of the two obviously blatant sinners. By doing this he dispensed with any animal sacrifice, for the sinners themselves died. In Leviticus it was the life of the substitutionary animal that was taken in place of the sinners that made atonement. The point is that sin was punished by death, and so God was free to end the plague and pardon the people. God's holiness and righteousness have always been every bit as important as God's mercy and compassion, for without righteousness and holiness mercy and compassion mean nothing. §†† tn: Heb "a father's house." So also in v. 15. §† tn: Heb "head." §†† sn: The passage makes it clear that this individual was a leader, one who was supposed to be preventing this thing from happening. The judgment was swift and severe, because the crime was so great, and the danger of it spreading was certain. Paul refers to this horrible incident when he reminds Christians not to do similar things ( 1 Cor 10:6-8).

bring trouble to you by their treachery with which they have deceived§† you in the matter of Peor, and in the matter of Cozbi, the daughter of a prince of Midian, §† their sister, who was killed on the day of the plague that happened as a result of Peor." §§†

Reuben

Simeon

§† tn: The form is the infinitive absolute used in place of a verb here; it clearly is meant to be an instruction for Israel. The idea is that of causing trouble, harassing, vexing Midian. The verb is repeated as the active participle in the line, and so the punishment is talionic. §† tn: This is the same word as that translated "treachery." §§† sn: Cozbi's father, Zur, was one of five Midianite kings who eventually succumbed to Israel ( Num 31:8). When the text gives the name and family of a woman, it is asserting that she is important, at least for social reasons, among her people. §§† sn: The breakdown of ch. 26 for outlining purposes will be essentially according to the tribes of Israel. The format and structure is similar to the first census, and so less comment is necessary here. §§§ tc: The MT has also "saying." <sup>18</sup> tn: Heb "house of their fathers." <sup>19</sup> tn: Heb "everyone who goes out in the army in Israel." <sup>20</sup> tn: The word "River" is not in the Hebrew text, but has been supplied in the translation for clarity (also in v. 62). <sup>21</sup> map: For the location of Jericho see . <sup>22</sup> tn: "Number the people" is added here to the text for a smooth reading. <sup>23</sup> tc: The Hebrew text has no preposition here, but one has been supplied in the translation for clarity. Cf. vv. 23, 30, 31, 32. <sup>24</sup> sn: The Reubenites had decreased from 46,500 to 43,730. <sup>25</sup> tc: The MT has "and the sons of Pallu."

Total Number and Division of the Land

<sup>52</sup> Then the LORD spoke to Moses: <sup>53</sup> " To these the land must be divided as an inheritance according to the number of the names. <sup>54</sup> To a larger group you will give a larger inheritance, ‡ and to a smaller group you will give a smaller inheritance. †† To each one its inheritance must be given according to the number of people in it. ††† The land must be divided by lot; and they will inherit in accordance with the names of their ancestral tribes. <sup>56</sup> Their inheritance must be apportioned††† by lot among the larger and smaller groups.

<sup>63</sup> These are those who were numbered by Moses and Eleazar the priest, who numbered the Israelites in the plains of Moab along the Jordan River opposite Jericho. <sup>64</sup> But there was not a man among these who had been<sup>s††</sup> among those numbered by Moses and Aaron the priest when they numbered the Israelites in the wilderness of Sinai. <sup>65</sup> For the LORD had said of them, "They will surely die in the wilderness." And there was not left a single man of them, except Caleb son of Jephunneh and Joshua son of Nun.

27 Then the daughters of Zelophehad son of Hepher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh of the families of Manasseh, § the son Joseph came forward. Now these are the names of his daughters : Mahlah, Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah. <sup>2</sup> And they stood before Moses and Eleazar the priest and the leaders of the whole assembly at the entrance to the tent of meeting and said, <sup>3</sup> " Our father died in the wilderness, although<sup>s††</sup> he was not part of<sup>s†</sup> the company of those that gathered themselves together against the LORD in the company of Korah; but he died for his own sin, § and he had no sons. <sup>4</sup> Why should the name of our father be lost from among his family because he had no son ? Give us a possession<sup>s††</sup> among the relatives<sup>s††</sup> of our father."

But it is also possible to take it to refer to a proper spirit to do all the things required of such a leader (which ultimately is a gift from the Spirit of God). The Hebrew text simply says “in whom is a spirit.” 20 sn: This symbolic act would indicate the transfer of leadership to Joshua. 21 tn: This could be translated “position him,” or “have him stand,” since it is the causative stem of the verb “to stand.” 22 tn: The verb is the Piel perfect of נָצַח

<sup>35</sup> "On the eighth day you are to have a holy assembly; you must do no ordinary work on it. <sup>36</sup> But you must offer a burnt offering, an offering made by fire, as a pleasing aroma to the LORD, one bull, one ram, seven lambs one year old, all of them without blemish, <sup>37</sup> and with their grain offering and their drink offerings for the bull, for the ram, and for the lambs, according to their number as prescribed, <sup>38</sup> along with one male goat for a purification offering, in addition to the continual burnt offering with its grain offering and its drink offering.

<sup>39</sup> "These things you must present to the LORD at your appointed times, in addition to your vows and your freewill offerings, as your burnt offerings, your grain offerings, your drink offerings, and your peace offerings." <sup>40 ††</sup> So Moses told the Israelites everything, just as the LORD had commanded him. ‡‡

Vows Made by Single Women

3 " If a young§ woman who is still living§† in her father's house makes a vow to the LORD or places herself under an obligation, 4 and her father hears of her vow or the obligation to which she has pledged herself, and her father remains silent about her,§†† then all her vows will stand, §‡ and every obligation to which she has pledged herself will stand. 5 But if her father overrules her when he hears§†† about it, then none§† of her vows or her obligations which she has pledged for herself will stand. And the LORD will release§‡ her from it, because her father overruled her.

Vows Made by Married Women

† sn: Num 30 deals with vows that are different than the vows discussed in Lev 27 and Num 6. The material is placed here after all the rulings of the offerings, but it could have been revealed to Moses at any time, such as the Nazirite vows, or the question of the daughters' inheritance. The logic of placing it here may be that a festival was the ideal place for discharging a vow. For additional material on vows, see R. de Vaux, Ancient Israel, 465-66. †† tn: Heb "heads." ‡ tn: Heb "This is the word which." ‡† tn: The legal construction states the class to which the law applies, and then lays down the condition: "men [man] - if..." ‡‡ tn: The Hebrew text uses a cognate accusative construction to express this: "a man if he vows a vow." ‡‡† tn: The expression is "swear an oath" (השבועה שבועה)

§† tn: The qualification comes at the end of the verse, and simply says "in her youth." §†† tn: The Hebrew text just has "in her father's house" and not "who is still living," but that is the meaning of the line. §‡ tn: The intent of this expression is that he does not object to the vow. §†† tn: The verb דָּוַק

§† tn: The idiom is "in the day of," but it is used in place of a preposition before the infinitive construct with its suffixed subjective genitive. The clause is temporal. §‡ tn: The Hebrew "all will not stand" is best rendered "none will stand." §§† tn: The verb has often been translated "forgive" (cf. KJV, ASV, NASB, NRSV, NLT), but that would suggest a sin that needed forgiving. The idea of "release from obligation" is better; the idea is like that of having a debt "forgiven" or "retired." In other words, she is free from the vow she had has pledged herself, 7 and her husband hears about it, but remains silent about her when he hears about it, then her vows will stand and her obligations which she has pledged for herself will stand. 8 But if when her husband hears it he overrules her, then he will nullify§§§ the vow she has taken,<sup>18</sup> and whatever she uttered impulsively which she has pledged for herself. And the LORD will release her from it.

Vows Made by Widows

9 " But every vow of a widow or of a divorced woman which she has pledged for herself will remain intact. <sup>1910</sup> If she made the vow in her husband's house or put herself under obligation with an oath, <sup>11</sup> and her husband heard about it, but remained silent about her, and did not overrule her, then all her vows will stand, and every obligation which she pledged for herself will stand. <sup>12</sup> But if her husband clearly nullifies<sup>20</sup> them when he hears them, then whatever she says<sup>21</sup> by way of vows or obligations will not stand. Her husband has made them void, and the LORD will release her from them.

13 " Any vow or sworn obligation that would bring affliction to her, <sup>22</sup> her husband can confirm or nullify. <sup>2314</sup> But if her husband remains completely silent<sup>24</sup> about her from day to day, he thus confirms all her vows or all her obligations which she is under; he confirms them because he remained silent about when he heard them. <sup>15</sup> But if he should nullify them after he has heard them, then he will bear her iniquity." <sup>25</sup>

19 tn: Heb "which [she is] under it." 20 tn: The Hebrew text says her vow "shall stand against her." In other words, she must fulfill, or bear the consequences of, whatever she vowed. 21 tn: The verb is the imperfect tense in the conditional clause. It is intensified with the infinitive absolute, which would have the force of saying that he nullified them unequivocally, or he made them null and void. 22 tn: Heb whatever proceeds from her lips." 23 tn: The sentence uses the infinitive construct עֲנֶה

Campaign Against the Midianites

what she vowed. It will not be her responsibility. <sup>27</sup> tn: Heb “between.” † sn: This lengthy chapter records the mobilization of the troops (vv. 1-5), the war itself (vv. 6-13), the death of the captive women (vv. 14-18), the purification of the nations (vv. 19-24), and the distribution of the spoils (vv. 25-54). For more detail, see G. W. Coats, “Moses in Midian,” JBL 92 (1973): 3-10; and W. J. Dumbrell, “Midian – a Land or a League?” VT 25 (1975): 323-37. †† tn: The imperative is followed by its cognate accusative to stress this vengeance. The Midianites had attempted to destroy Israel with their corrupt pagan practices, and now will be judged. The accounts indicate that the effort by Midian was calculated and evil. ‡ sn: The war was commanded by the LORD

†† sn: This would be the last major enterprise that Moses would have to undertake. He would soon die and “be gathered to his people” as Aaron was. ‡‡ tn: The Niphal imperative, literally “arm yourselves,” is the call to mobilize the nation for war. It is followed by the jussive, “and they will be,” which would then be subordinated to say “that they may be.” The versions changed the verb to a Hiphil, but that is unnecessary: “arm some of yourselves.” ‡†† tn: Heb “give.” <sup>‡†††</sup> sn: Some commentators argue that given the size of the nation (which they reject) the small number for the army is a sign of the unrealistic character of the story. The number is a round number, but it is also a holy war, and God would give them the victory. They are beginning to learn here, and at Jericho, and later against these Midianites under Gideon, that God does not want or need a large army in order to obtain victory. § tn: The Hebrew text uses the idiom that these “were in his hand,” meaning that he had the responsibility over them. §† sn: It is not clear what articles from the sanctuary were included. Tg. Ps.-j. adds (interpretively) “the Urim and Thummim.” §†† sn: Many modern biblical scholars assume that this passage is fictitious. The text says that they killed every male, but Judges accounts for the Midianites. The texts can be harmonized rather simply – they killed every Midianite who was in the battle. Midianite tribes and cities dotted the whole region, but that does not mean Israel went and killed every single one of them. There apparently was a core of Midianites whom Balaam had influenced to pervert Israel. §‡ sn: Here again we see that there was no unified empire, but Midianite tribal groups.

their flocks, and all their goods as plunder. <sup>10</sup> They burned§†† all their towns§† where they lived and all their encampments. <sup>11</sup> They took all the plunder and all the spoils, both people and animals. <sup>12</sup> They brought the captives and the spoils and the plunder to Moses, to Eleazar the priest, and to the Israelite community, to the camp on the plains§† of Moab, along the Jordan River§§† across from Jericho. <sup>§§††</sup> <sup>13</sup> Moses, Eleazar the priest, and all the leaders of the community went out to meet them outside the camp.

The Death of the Midianite Women

<sup>14</sup> But Moses was furious with the officers of the army, the commanders over thousands and commanders over hundreds, who had come from service in the war. <sup>15</sup> Moses said to them, “Have you allowed all the women to live? <sup>§§§†</sup> <sup>16</sup> Look, these people through the counsel of Balaam caused the Israelites to act treacherously against the LORD in the matter of Peor – which resulted in the plague among the community of the LORD! <sup>17</sup> Now therefore kill every boy, <sup>18</sup> and kill every woman who has had sexual intercourse with a man. <sup>19</sup> <sup>18</sup> But all the young women<sup>20</sup> who have not had sexual intercourse with a man<sup>21</sup> will be yours. <sup>22</sup>

Purification After Battle

<sup>19</sup> “Any of you who has killed anyone or touched any of the dead, remain outside the camp for seven days; purify yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day. <sup>20</sup> You must purify each garment and everything that is made of skin, everything made of goat’s hair, and everything made of wood.” <sup>23</sup>

§†† sn: And what was Balaam doing among the Midianites? The implication is strong. This pagan diviner had to submit to the revealed will of God in the oracles, but he nonetheless could be hired. He had been a part of the attempt to destroy Israel that failed; he then apparently became part of the plan, if not the adviser, to destroy them with sexual immorality and pagan ritual. §† tn: Heb “burned with fire.” §‡ tn: The ban applied to the encampments and forts of this group of Midianite tribes living in the region of Moab. §§† tn: Or “steppes.” §§‡ tn: The word “River” is not in the Hebrew text, but has been supplied in the translation for clarity. §§§ tn: Again this expression, “the Jordan of Jericho,” is used. It describes the intended location along the Jordan River, the Jordan next to or across from Jericho. map: For the location of Jericho see . <sup>18</sup> tn: The verb is the Piel perfect of the word הָרַג

<sup>19</sup> tn: Heb “every male among the little ones.” sn: The command in holy war to kill women and children seems in modern times a terrible thing to do (and it was), and something they ought not to have done. But this criticism fails to understand the situation in the ancient world. The entire life of the ancient world was tribal warfare. God’s judgment is poured out on whole groups of people who act with moral abandonment and in sinful pursuits. See E. J. Young, My Servants, the Prophets, 24; and J. W. Wenham, The Enigma of Evil. <sup>20</sup> tn: Heb “every woman who has known [a] man by lying with a man.” <sup>21</sup> tn: Or “girls.” The Hebrew indicates they would be female children, making the selection easy. <sup>22</sup> tn: Heb “who have not known [a] man by lying with a man.” <sup>23</sup> sn: Many contemporary scholars see this story as fictitious, composed by the Jews during the captivity. According to this interpretation, the spoils of war here indicate the wealth of the Jews

21 Then Eleazar the priest said to the men of war who had gone into the battle, "This is the ordinance of the law that the LORD commanded Moses: 22' Only the gold, the silver, the bronze, the iron, the tin, and the lead, 23 everything that may stand the fire, you are to pass through the fire, † and it will be ceremonially clean, but it must still be purified with the water of purification. Anything that cannot withstand the fire you must pass through the water. 24 You must wash your clothes on the seventh day, and you will be ceremonially clean, and afterward you may enter the camp."

The Distribution of Spoils

25 Then the LORD spoke to Moses: 26 " You and Eleazar the priest, and all the family leaders of the community, take the sum†† of the plunder that was captured, both people and animals. 27 Divide the plunder into two parts, one for those who took part in the war – who went out to battle – and the other for all the community.

28 " You must exact‡ a tribute for the LORD from the fighting men who went out to battle : one life out of five hundred, from the people, the cattle, and from the donkeys and the sheep. 29 You are to take it from their half-share and give it to Eleazar the priest for a raised offering to the LORD. 30 From the Israelites' half-share you are to take one portion out of fifty of the people, the cattle, the donkeys, and the sheep – from every kind of animal – and you are to give them to the Levites, who are responsible for the care of the LORD's tabernacle."

31 So Moses and Eleazar the priest did as the LORD commanded Moses. 32 The spoil that remained of the plunder which the fighting men†† had gathered‡‡ was 675,000 sheep, 33 72,000 cattle, 34 61,000 donkeys, 35 and 32,000 young women who had never had sexual intercourse with a man. ††† in captivity, which was to be given to the Levites and priests for the restoration of the sanctuary in Jerusalem. The conclusion drawn from this interpretation is that returning Jews had the same problem as the earlier ones: to gain a foothold in the land. Against this interpretation of the account is a lack of hard evidence, a lack which makes this interpretation appear contrived and subjective. If this was the intent of a later writer, he surely could have stated this more clearly than by making up such a story. † sn: These verses are a reminder that taking a life, even if justified through holy war, still separates one from the holiness of God. It is part of the violation of the fallen world, and only through the ritual of purification can one be once again made fit for the presence of the LORD †† sn: Purification by fire is unique to this event. Making these metallic objects "pass through the fire" was not only a way of purifying (burning off impurities), but it seems to be a dedicatory rite as well to the LORD

36 The half-portion of those who went to war numbered 337,500 sheep; 37 the LORD's tribute from the sheep was 675. 38 The cattle numbered‡‡‡ 36,000; the LORD's tribute was 72. 39 The donkeys were 30,500, of which the LORD's tribute was 61. 40 The people were 16,000, of which the LORD's tribute was 32 people. §

41 So Moses gave the tribute, which was the LORD's raised offering, to Eleazar the priest, as the LORD commanded Moses.

42 From the Israelites' half-share that Moses had separated from the fighting men, §†43 there were 337,500 sheep from the portion belonging to the community, 44 36,000 cattle, 45 30,500 donkeys, 46 and 16,000 people.

47 From the Israelites' share Moses took one of every fifty people and animals and gave them to the Levites who were responsible for the care of the LORD's tabernacle, just as the LORD commanded Moses.

48 Then the officers who were over the thousands of the army, the commanders over thousands and the commanders over hundreds, approached Moses<sup>49</sup> and said to him, §†† " Your servants have taken a count§† of the men who were in the battle, who were under our authority, §†† and not one is missing. 50 So we have brought as an offering for the LORD what each man found : gold ornaments, armlets, bracelets, signet rings, earrings, and necklaces, to make atonement for ourselves§† before the LORD." §†51 Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold from them, all of it in the form of ornaments. 52 All the gold of the offering they offered up to the LORD from the commanders of thousands and the commanders of hundreds weighed 16,750 shekels. §†53 Each soldier had taken plunder for himself. 54 So Moses and Eleazar the priest received the gold from the commanders of thousands and commanders§§† of hundreds and brought it into the tent of meeting as a memorial§§§ for the Israelites before the LORD. 18

‡‡‡ sn: Here again we encounter one of the difficulties of the book, the use of the large numbers. Only twelve thousand soldiers fought the Midianites, but they brought back this amount of plunder, including 32,000 girls. Do not have us cross‡‡ the Jordan River." ‡‡‡

Moses' Response

<sup>6</sup> Moses said to the Gadites and the Reubenites, "Must your brothers go to war while you‡‡‡ remain here? <sup>7</sup> Why do you frustrate the intent‡ of the Israelites to cross over into the land which the LORD has given them? <sup>8</sup> Your fathers did the same thing when I sent them from Kadesh Barnea to see the land. <sup>9</sup> When‡† they went up to the Eshcol Valley and saw the land, they frustrated the intent of the Israelites so that they did not enter‡†† the land that the LORD had given‡† them. <sup>10</sup> So the anger of the LORD was kindled that day, and he swore, <sup>11</sup> 'Because they have not followed me wholeheartedly, ‡‡† not‡† one of the men twenty years old and upward‡† who came from Egypt will see the land that I swore to give‡†† to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, <sup>12</sup> except Caleb son of Jephunneh the Kenizzite, tribes are on the other side of Jordan, the matter of which tribes would settle there has to be discussed. This chapter begins the settlement of Israel into the tribal territories, something to be continued in Joshua. The chapter has the petitions (vv. 1-5), the response by Moses (vv. 6-15), the proposal (vv. 16-27), and the conclusion of the matter (vv. 28-42). This is the normal way for Hebrew to express a negative oath – "they will by no means see...." The sentence is elliptical; it is saying something like "[May God do so to me] if they see," meaning they won't see. Of course here God is taking the oath, which is an anthropomorphic act. He does not need to take an oath, and certainly could not swear by anyone greater, but it communicates to people his resolve. ‡†† tc: The LXX adds "those knowing bad and good."

The Offer of the Reubenites and Gadites

<sup>16</sup> Then they came very close to him and said, "We will build sheep folds here for our flocks and cities for our families, <sup>2017</sup> but we will maintain ourselves in armed readiness<sup>21</sup> and go before the Israelites until whenever we have brought them to their place. Our descendants will be living in fortified towns as a protection against<sup>22</sup> the inhabitants of the land. <sup>18</sup> We will not return to our homes until every Israelite has his inheritance. <sup>19</sup> For we will not accept any inheritance on the other side of the Jordan River<sup>23</sup> and beyond, because our inheritance has come to us on this eastern side of the Jordan."

<sup>25</sup> So the Gadites and the Reubenites replied to Moses, "Your servants will do as my lord commands. <sup>26</sup> Our children, our wives, our flocks, and all our livestock will be there in the cities of Gilead, <sup>27</sup> but your servants will cross over, every man armed for war, to

<sup>28</sup> So Moses gave orders about them to Eleazar the priest, to Joshua son of Nun, and to the heads of the families of the Israelite tribes. <sup>29</sup> Moses said to them: "If the Gadites and the Reubenites cross the Jordan with you, each one equipped for battle in the LORD's presence, and you conquer the land, † then you must allot them the territory of Gilead as their possession. <sup>30</sup> But if they do not cross over with you armed, they must receive possessions among you in Canaan." <sup>31</sup> Then the Gadites and the Reubenites answered, "Your servants will do what the LORD has spoken. <sup>††32</sup> We will cross armed in the LORD's presence into the land of Canaan, and then the possession of our inheritance that we inherit will be ours on this side of the Jordan River." ‡

Land Assignment

<sup>33</sup> So Moses gave to the Gadites, the Reubenites, and to half the tribe of Manasseh son of Joseph the realm of King Sihon of the Amorites, and the realm of King Og of Bashan, the entire land with its cities and the territory surrounding them. <sup>††34</sup> The Gadites rebuilt Dibon, Ataroth, Aroer, <sup>35</sup> Atroth Shophan, Jazer, Jogbehah, <sup>36</sup> Beth Nimrah, and Beth Haran as fortified cities, and constructed pens for their flocks. <sup>37</sup> The Reubenites rebuilt Heshbon, Elealeh, Kiriathaim, <sup>38</sup> Nebo, Baal Meon (with a change of name), and Sibmah. They renamed‡‡ the cities they built.

<sup>39</sup> The descendants of Machir son of Manasseh went to Gilead, took it, and dispossessed the Amorites who were in it. <sup>40</sup> So Moses gave Gilead to Machir, son of Manasseh, and he lived there. <sup>‡‡‡41</sup> Now Jair son of Manasseh went and captured their small towns and named them Havvoth Jair. <sup>42</sup> Then Nobah went and captured Kenath and its villages and called it Nobah after his own name. ‡‡‡

At the Border of Canaan

<sup>50</sup> The LORD spoke to Moses in the plains of Moab by the Jordan, across from Jericho. He said: <sup>51</sup> "Speak to the Israelites and tell them, 'When you have crossed the Jordan into the land of Canaan, <sup>52</sup> you must drive out all the inhabitants of the land before you. Destroy all their carved images, all their molten images, ‡ and demolish their high places. <sup>53</sup> You must dispossess the inhabitants of the land and live in it, for I have given you the land to possess it. <sup>54</sup> You must divide the land by lot for an inheritance among your families. To a larger group you must give a larger inheritance, and to a smaller group you must give a smaller inheritance. Everyone's inheritance must be in the place where his lot falls. You must inherit according to your ancestral‡‡ tribes. <sup>55</sup> But if you do not drive out the inhabitants of the land before you, then those whom you allow to remain will be irritants in your eyes and thorns in your side, and will cause you trouble in the land where you will be living. <sup>56</sup> And what I intended to do to them I will do to you.'" ‡‡

'When you enter Canaan, the land that has been assigned to you as an inheritance, §† the land of Canaan with its borders, <sup>3</sup> your southern border§†† will extend from the wilderness of Zin along the Edomite border, and your southern border will run eastward to the extremity of the Salt Sea, <sup>4</sup> and then the border will turn from the south to the Scorpion Ascent, §‡ continue to Zin, and then its direction§†† will be from the south to Kadesh Barnea. Then it will go to Hazar Addar and pass over to Azmon. <sup>5</sup> There the border will turn from Azmon to the Brook of Egypt, and then its direction is to the sea. §†

The Western Border of the Land

The Northern Border of the Land

The Eastern Border of the Land

<sup>10</sup> "For your eastern border you will draw a line from Hazar Enan to Shepham. <sup>11</sup> The border will run down from Shepham to Riblah, on the east side of Ain, and the border will descend and reach the eastern side of the Sea of Chinnereth. <sup>§§§12</sup> Then the border will continue down the Jordan River<sup>18</sup> and its direction will be to the Salt Sea. This will be your land by its borders that surround it."

<sup>13</sup> Then Moses commanded the Israelites: "This is the land which you will inherit by lot, which the LORD has commanded to be given<sup>19</sup> to the nine and a half tribes, <sup>14</sup> because the tribe of the Reubenites by their families, <sup>20</sup> the tribe of the Gadites by their families, and half of the tribe of Manasseh have received their inheritance. <sup>15</sup> The two and a half tribes have received their inheritance on this side of the Jordan, east of Jericho, <sup>21</sup> toward the sunrise."

Appointed Officials

<sup>16</sup> The LORD said to Moses: <sup>17</sup> "These are the names of the men who are to allocate the land to you as an inheritance:† Eleazar the priest and Joshua son of Nun. <sup>18</sup> You must take one leader from every†† tribe to assist in allocating the land as an inheritance. <sup>19</sup> These are the names of the men : from the tribe of Judah, Caleb son of Jephunneh; <sup>20</sup> from the tribe of the Simeonites, Shemuel son of Ammihud; <sup>21</sup> from the tribe of Benjamin, Elidad son of Kislon; <sup>22</sup> and from the tribe of the Danites, a leader, Bukki son of Jogli. <sup>23</sup> From the Josephites, Hanniel son of Ephod, a leader from the tribe of Manasseh; <sup>24</sup> from the tribe of the Ephraimites, a leader, Kemuel son of Shiphtan; <sup>25</sup> from the tribe of the Zebulunites, a leader, Elizaphan son of Parnach; <sup>26</sup> from the tribe of the Issacharites, a leader, Paltiel son of Azzan; <sup>27</sup> from the tribe of the Asherites, a leader, Ahihud son of Shelomi; <sup>28</sup> and from the tribe of the Naphtalites, a leader, Pedahel son of Ammihud." <sup>29</sup> These are the ones whom the LORD commanded to divide up the inheritance among the Israelites in the land of Canaan. ††

35 Then the LORD spoke to Moses in the Moabite plains by the Jordan near Jericho. †† He said: <sup>2</sup> "Instruct the Israelites to give††† the Levites towns to live in from the inheritance the Israelites††† will possess. You must also give the Levites grazing land around the towns. <sup>3</sup> Thus they will have towns in which to live, and their grazing lands will be for their cattle, for their possessions, and for all their animals. <sup>4</sup> The grazing lands around the towns that you will give to the Levites must extend to a distance of 500 yards§ from the town wall.

refuge to which a person who has killed someone may flee. §†† And you must give them forty-two other towns.

<sup>7</sup> "So the total of the towns you will give the Levites is forty-eight. You must give these together with their grazing lands. <sup>8</sup> The towns you will give must be from the possession of the Israelites. From the larger tribes you must give more; and from the smaller tribes fewer. Each must contribute some of its own towns to the Levites in proportion to the inheritance allocated to each.

The Cities of Refuge

<sup>9</sup> Then the LORD spoke to Moses: <sup>10</sup> "Speak to the Israelites and tell them, 'When you cross over the Jordan River§† into the land of Canaan, <sup>11</sup> you must then designate some towns as towns of refuge for you, to which a person who has killed someone unintentionally may flee. <sup>12</sup> And they must stand as your towns of refuge from the avenger in order that the killer may not die until he has stood trial before the community. <sup>13</sup> These towns that you must give shall be your six towns for refuge.

<sup>14</sup> "You must give three towns on this side of the Jordan, and you must give three towns in the land of Canaan; they must be towns of refuge. <sup>15</sup> These six towns will be places of refuge for the Israelites, and for the foreigner, and for the settler among them, so that anyone who kills any person accidentally may flee there.

§†† sn: The precise nature of the layout described here is not altogether clear. V. 4 speaks of the distance from the wall as being 500 yards; v. 5, however, describes measurements of 1,000 yards. Various proposals have been made in order to harmonize vv. 4 and 5. P. J. Budd, Numbers (WBC), 376, makes the following suggestion: "It may be best to assume that the cubits of the Levitical pasture lands are cubit frontages of land - in other words on each side of the city there was a block of land with a frontage of two thousand cubits (v 5), and a depth of 1000 cubits (v 4)." §† tn: The "manslayer" is the verb "to kill" in a participial form, providing the subject of the clause. The verb means "to kill"; it can mean accidental killing, premeditated killing, or capital punishment. The clause uses the infinitive to express purpose or result: "to flee there the manslayer," means "so that the manslayer may flee there." §‡ tn: The word "River" is not in the Hebrew text, but has been supplied in the translation for clarity. §§† tn: the verb is the preterite of "die." The sentence has "if...he strikes him and he dies." The vav ( ו )

the one who struck him must surely be put to death, for he is a murderer. The avenger of blood must kill the murderer when he meets him.

<sup>22</sup> "But if he strikes him suddenly, without enmity, or throws anything at him unintentionally, <sup>23</sup> or with any stone large enough that a man could die, without seeing him, and throws it at him, and he dies, even though he was not his enemy nor sought his harm, <sup>24</sup> then the community must judge between the slayer and the avenger of blood according to these decisions. <sup>25</sup> The community must deliver the slayer out of the hand of the avenger of blood, and the community must restore him to the town of refuge to which he fled, and he must live there† until the death of the high priest, who was anointed with the consecrated oil. <sup>26</sup> But if the slayer at any time goes outside the boundary of the town to which he had fled, <sup>27</sup> and the avenger of blood finds him outside the borders of the town of refuge, and the avenger of blood kills the slayer, he will not be guilty of blood, <sup>28</sup> because the slayer†† should have stayed in his town of refuge until the death of the high priest. But after the death of the high priest, the slayer may return to the land of his possessions. <sup>29</sup> So these things must be a statutory ordinance‡ for you throughout your generations, in all the places where you live.

<sup>30</sup> "Whoever kills any person, the murderer must be put to death by the testimony†† of witnesses; but one witness cannot‡‡ testify against any person to cause him to be put to death. <sup>31</sup> Moreover, you must not accept a ransom for the life of a murderer who is guilty of death; he must surely be put to death. <sup>32</sup> And you must not accept a ransom for anyone who has fled to a town of refuge, to allow him to return home and live on his own land before the death of the high priest. ‡‡‡

<sup>33</sup> "You must not pollute the land where you live, for blood defiles the land, and the land cannot be cleansed of the blood that is shed there, except by the blood of the person who shed it. <sup>34</sup> Therefore do not defile the land that you will inhabit, in which I live, for I the LORD live among the Israelites." ‡‡‡

and my lord was commanded by the LORD to give the inheritance of our brother Zelophehad to his daughters. <sup>3</sup> Now if they should be married to one of the men§†† from another Israelite tribe, their inheritance would be taken from the inheritance of our fathers and added to the inheritance of the tribe into which they marry.§† As a result, it will be taken from the lot of our inheritance. <sup>4</sup> And when the Jubilee of the Israelites is to take place,§‡ their inheritance will be added to the inheritance of the tribe into which they marry. So their inheritance will be taken away from the inheritance of our ancestral tribe." §§†

Moses' Decision

<sup>10</sup> As the LORD had commanded Moses, so the daughters of Zelophehad did. <sup>11</sup> For the daughters of Zelophehad – Mahlah, Tirzah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Noah – were married to the sons of their uncles. <sup>2312</sup> They were married into the families of the Manassehites, the descendants of Joseph, and their inheritance remained in the tribe of their father's family.

Events at Horeb

6 The LORD our God spoke to us at Horeb and said, "You have stayed<sup>28</sup> in the area of this mountain long enough. <sup>7</sup> Get up now,<sup>29</sup> resume your journey, heading for<sup>30</sup> the Amorite hill country, to all its areas<sup>31</sup> including the arid country, <sup>32</sup> the highlands, the Shephelah, <sup>33</sup> the Negev, <sup>34</sup> and the coastal plain – all of Canaan and Lebanon as far as the Great River, that is, the Euphrates. <sup>8</sup> Look ! I have already given the land to you.<sup>35</sup> Go, occupy the territory that I,<sup>36</sup> the LORD, promised<sup>37</sup> to give to your ancestors<sup>38</sup> Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and to their descendants." <sup>39</sup> I also said to you at that time, "I am no longer able to sustain you by myself. <sup>10</sup> The LORD your God has increased your population<sup>40</sup> to the point that you are now as numerous as the very stars of the sky. <sup>41</sup> Indeed, may the LORD, the God of your ancestors, make you a thousand times more numerous than you are now, blessing you<sup>42</sup> just as he said he would! <sup>12</sup> But how can I alone bear up under the burden of your hardship and strife? <sup>13</sup> Select wise and practical<sup>43</sup> men, those known

24 tn: Heb "who lived." 25 sn: Ashtaroth is probably Tell <sup>אַשְׁתָּרַת</sup>, about 22 mi (35 km) due east of the Sea of Galilee. 26 sn: Edrei is probably modern <sup>דַּרְעַא</sup>, 60 mi (95 km) south of Damascus (see Num 21:33; Josh 12:4; 13:12, 31). 27 tn: Heb "this instruction"; KJV, NIV, NRSV "this law"; TEV "God's laws and teachings." The Hebrew noun <sup>תּוֹכַח</sup>

28 tn: Heb "lived"; "dwelled." 29 tn: Heb "turn"; NAB "Leave here"; NIV, TEV "Break camp." 30 tn: Heb "go (to)." 31 tn: Heb "its dwelling places." 32 tn: Heb "the Arabah" (so ASV, NAB, NIV, NRSV). 33 tn: Heb "lowlands" (so TEV) or "steppes"; NIV, CEV, NLT "the western foothills." sn: The Shephelah is the geographical region between the Mediterranean coastal plain and the Judean hill country. 34 sn: The Hebrew term Negev means literally "desert" or "south" (so KJV, ASV). It refers to the area south of Beer Sheba and generally west of the Arabah Valley between the Dead Sea and the Gulf of Aqaba. 35 tn: Heb "I have placed before you the land." 36 tn: Heb "the LORD

37 tn: Heb "swore" (so NAB, NIV, NRSV, NLT). This refers to God's promise, made by solemn oath, to give the patriarchs the land. 38 tn: Heb "fathers" (also in vv. 11, 21, 35). 39 tn: Heb "their seed after them." 40 tn: Heb "multiplied you." 41 tn: Or "heavens." The Hebrew term <sup>שָׁמַיִם</sup>

among your tribes, whom I may appoint as your leaders." <sup>14</sup> You replied to me that what I had said to you was good. <sup>15</sup> So I chose† as your tribal leaders wise and well-known men, placing them over you as administrators of groups of thousands, hundreds, fifties, and tens, and also as other tribal officials. <sup>16</sup> I furthermore admonished your judges at that time that they†† should pay attention to issues among your fellow citizens‡ and judge fairly, †† whether between one citizen and another‡‡ or a citizen and a resident foreigner. <sup>†††17</sup> They††† must not discriminate in judgment, but hear the lowly§ and the great alike. Nor should they be intimidated by human beings, for judgment belongs to God. If the matter being adjudicated is too difficult for them, they should bring it before me for a hearing.

Instructions at Kadesh Barnea

<sup>18</sup> So I instructed you at that time regarding everything you should do. <sup>19</sup> Then we left Horeb and passed through all that immense, forbidding wilderness that you saw on the way to the Amorite hill country as the LORD our God had commanded us to do, finally arriving at Kadesh Barnea. <sup>20</sup> Then I said to you, "You have come to the Amorite hill country which the LORD our God is about to give§† us. <sup>21</sup> Look, he§†† has placed the land in front of you.§‡ Go up, take possession of it, just as the LORD, the God of your ancestors, said to do. Do not be afraid or discouraged!" <sup>22</sup> So all of you approached me and said, "Let's send some men ahead of us to scout out the land and bring us back word as to how we should attack it and what the cities are like there." <sup>23</sup> I thought this was a good idea,§†† so I sent§† twelve men from among you, one from each tribe. <sup>24</sup> They left and went up to the hill country, coming to the Eshcol Valley, §‡ which they scouted out. <sup>25</sup> Then they took§§† some of the produce of the land and carried it back down to us. They also brought a report to

us, saying, "The land that the LORD our God is about to give us is good."

Disobedience at Kadesh Barnea

<sup>26</sup> You were not willing to go up, however, but instead rebelled against the LORD your God. <sup>§§†27</sup> You complained among yourselves privately§§§ and said, "Because the LORD hates us he brought us from Egypt to deliver us over to the Amorites so they could destroy us! <sup>28</sup> What is going to happen to us? Our brothers have drained away our courage<sup>18</sup> by describing people who are more numerous<sup>19</sup> and taller than we are, and great cities whose defenses appear to be as high as heaven<sup>20</sup> itself! Moreover, they said they saw<sup>21</sup> Anakites<sup>22</sup> there." <sup>29</sup> So I responded to you, "Do not be terrified<sup>23</sup> of them! <sup>30</sup> The LORD your God is about to go<sup>24</sup> ahead of you; he will fight for you, just as you saw him do in Egypt<sup>2531</sup> and in the desert, where you saw him<sup>26</sup> carrying you along like a man carries his son. This he did everywhere you went until you came to this very place." <sup>32</sup> However, through all this you did not have confidence in the LORD your God, <sup>33</sup> the one who was constantly going before you to find places for you to set up camp. He appeared by fire at night and cloud by day, to show you the way you ought to go.

Judgment at Kadesh Barnea

count. He said, "You also will not be able to go there. <sup>38</sup> However, Joshua son of Nun, your assistant, † will go. Encourage him, because he will enable Israel to inherit the land. <sup>††39</sup> Also, your infants, who you thought would die on the way, ‡ and your children, who as yet do not know good from bad, ‡‡ will go there; I will give them the land and they will possess it. <sup>40</sup> But as for you, ‡‡ turn back and head for the desert by the way to the Red Sea." ‡‡‡
